DUNELLENITES ENJOY "HIKE" TO LAKE HOPATCONG

Adam Dealaman and Alfred Day arrived in the borough at 6 o'clock last evening, from their "hike" to Lake Hopatcong. The young men left the lake at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. They left the borough on their "hike" at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning, arriving at the lake shortly before noon. En route to the lake they passed through Stirling, Millington, Morristown, Morris Plains, Denville, Rockaway and Mount Tabor.

Returning they followed the tracks of the Central Railroad to Lake Junction and from there passed through the following places: Wharton, Dover, Rockaway, Morristown, Madison, Chatham, Providence, Scotch Plains and Plainfield. At Dover on their return trip they visited Irving Fenner, who formerly lived here. Mr. Fenner entertained them for an hour, showing them the town and giving them a general good time.

The young men said they were not fatigued in the least by either trip. On the day of their arrival at the popular inland resort they spent the greater part of the afternoon in rowing and in the evening in dancing.

They were entertained during their brief sojourn at Lake Hopatcong by R. Longfellow Brakeley, of this borough, who is spending two weeks there.

Dealaman and Day are the second pair of local young men to make the "hike" to the lake this year. Leo Logan and George Martin made the hike over Decoration Day. It is unofficially stated that it took them two days to make the trip to the lake and that they returned by train.

Mrs. George I. Apgar, Jr., and daughter and Mrs. C. T. Voorhees are spending a week on the Felmley farm at Lebanon.

ALLEN FREDERICK MEETS WITH SLIGHT ACCIDENT

Allen Frederick, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Frederick, of Dunellen avenue, was slightly injured at the Somerville station of the Central Railroad yesterday, while in the performance of his duties as clerk in the employ of the American Express Company there.

Allen was holding the tongue of an express truck on which express matter had been loaded from the train from New York due to leave Somerville for Flemington at 7:38. The single track of the South Branch Railroad extends from the Somerville station in a wide curve toward Flemington. The express truck had been left too near the train as it pulled out to make allowance for this curve and the rear end of the last car struck the end of the truck, shoving the truck abruptly forward and knocking Allen down.

Very fortunately Allen was knocked away instead of toward the train or otherwise he might have gone under the wheels. He escaped with bruises and a good shaking up. The management of the express office considerately relieved him from duty for the remainder of the day.

George W. Churchill, of Washington avenue, is entertaining his uncle, Stephen Leviness, of New York city.

ITALIANS' NARROW ESCAPE IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

An automobile containing Mr. and Mrs. George Bunting, of New Market, ran over an Italian laborer on Washington avenue, south of the railroad tracks, about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The accident occurred in front of C. T. Voorhees' meat market. The auto, which was being driven by Mr. Bunting, was coming along North avenue in an easterly direction just as the Italian started to cross the street. The latter was knocked down and the car passed over both legs of the victim. He was taken at once to the office of Dr. M. J. Whitford. After a thorough examination the physician said that the Italian's injuries were not serious and within a short time he was able to return home.

WORK IN PROGRESSING.

The sewer trench digging machine was transferred yesterday from Centre street to Walnut street and this morning commenced excavating the trench on that thoroughfare between Prospect and Whittier avenues. Hand diggers commenced excavating the sewer trench south along Washington avenue from New Market road yesterday afternoon.

INSPECTION OF CORN.

An inspection of corn grown as a test on the Cherry Hill Farm of John M. Evans will be made in September by the Middlesex County Board of Agriculture pursuant to an invitation extended to the members by Mr. Evans at the recent meeting held at Plainsboro. Twenty varieties of corn commonly planted in Middlesex county have been set on the Evans place and the results are being watched with interest.

TO CONTINUE FESTIVAL.

Owing to the shower during the forepart of last evening the open air band concert and ice cream festival conducted jointly by the Dutch Arms Band, of Plainfield, and the Holy Innocents' Episcopal church on the church grounds will be continued this evening. Although the affair was largely attended and $125 taken in this is deemed to be only fair by reason of the announcement on tickets sold that the affair would be held this evening if it stormed last night. This, it is believed, resulted in the staying home of many residing on the north side of town who had purchased tickets.

SALAMAGUNDI PARTY.

The Epworth League, of the Methodist Episcopal church, will hold a salamagundi party at the home of H. S. Townley on Madison avenue, this evening. Ice cream and cake will be on sale. All are welcome.

Mrs. Robert LeRoy Pierce, of Main street, continues to improve slowly.

'Plains & Fanwood.

About twenty-five members of the "Spoms" and their friends enjoyed an apron and necktie social at the home of Miss Sadie Manning, of King street, last night. Games and dancing featured the forepart of the evening's entertainment and later refreshments were served.

The local married and single men are scheduled to hold their second baseball tilt of the season tomorrow afternoon on the Park avenue grounds. A. A. Storr, who successfully held the younger men to a 3 to 0 defeat on his previous start, will grace the mound for the benedicts, while several aspire to the same honor for the youngsters.

Miss Claire Vreeland returned to her home in Greenville, yesterday, after visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Sheelen, of North avenue, for the past week.

Borough Tax Collector Charles Sheelen is working on the new tax maps in preparation for sending out the 1915 tax bills. The maps, which were recently completed by Engineer Dunham for the borough, after the old ones did not meet the approval of the State Tax Board, are on an entirely different scale and entails twice the labor necessary heretofore. Every block and lot number is changed and the collector expects to have a large portion of the tax bills returned as citizens will think they are assessed for the wrong property.

Rev. Raymond E. Marshall will conduct the Friday night prayer meeting in the Methodist church tonight.

Park avenue has been re-surfaced by the township authorities from the trolley track to the borough line. The heavy trucks and stone wagons wear off the top dressing about twice a year. Other thoroughfares are also being repaired where needed.

MAKING BETER PROGRESS.

Contractors at work installing a pumping station for the borough sewers on West End avenue, are now making a little better progress, although it is still necessary to keep pumping water from the deep excavation made some time ago. Most of the concrete has been laid, and within a short time it is proposed to place the pumping apparatus in position.

SULLIVAN RESIGNS.

Washington, July 23.—It is understood that James M. Sullivan, American Minister to Santo Domingo, has resigned, and President Wilson has accepted the resignation.

The Modest Scot.

Love of country is so fine a virtue that it seems difficult to carry it to excess. A resident of a small village in the north of Scotland paid a business visit to London and called on a merchant who, unknown to him, had once made a stay in his native place. In the course of conversation the visitor made use of an expression that led the other to exclaim, "Surely you come from Glen McLuskie?" The assertion, however, was denied. Presently, to the merchant's surprise, another Glen McLuskie expression was heard. "My dear Mr. MacTavish, I feel convinced that you are a Glen McLuskie man after all," insisted the merchant.

"Weel," returned the other, "I'll no deny it any longer."

"Then why didn't you say so at first?" demanded the Englishman.

"Weel," was the calm response, "I didna like to boast o' it in London."—London Chronicle.

The Almanac Church.

One of the oddest churches in England is St. Botolph's at Boston. It has aptly been called the Almanac church. In the tower are 365 steps, corresponding to the days in the year. The church has twelve pillars, fifty-two windows and seven doors, representing the months, weeks and days in the week. In the west porch are twenty-four steps ascending to the library, representing the hours of the day. Again, on each side of the choir are sixty steps leading to the roof, denoting on the one side the minutes of the hour and on the other the seconds of the minute.—Boston Post.

Playing It Carefully.

Tenderly the ardent swain placed the diamond circlet on his lady love's finger. "It seals our engagement," he said.

"Oh, Jack," exclaimed the girl, "isn't it sweet!"

"And now," continued the young man, "would you mind giving me a receipt stating that the ring is to be returned to me in case you should change your mind about marrying me?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Query Discourteous.

"So glad to see you again, dear. And I've got such a lot of news for you. Did you know I was interested in business now?" said the first sweet young thing.

"Whose?" asked the second, and then the conversation lagged perceptibly.—Philadelphia Ledger.

NEWS VALUE.

The value of a bit of news depends entirely upon location. Mills Corners news is not important to Chicago, and Chicago news is not important to Mills Corners. It is important to Mills Corners to know that Zed Hawkins has bought a new hat. Excitement in the town will be at fever heat until it is known whether it is Arabella Simkins or Sarah Means.

That Zed Driscoll has put up a new fence is thrilling, because no one thought Zed had enough crops to be worth fencing; and besides there is a hope that the building of the fence will involve Zed in a fight with Jim Billings, or perhaps a lawsuit, or both.

That Mame Simpkins has a visitor is important, for the whole town will be more or less affected, according to circumstances. Of course, the ladies will hope that the visitor will turn out to be older and homelier than themselves, and the young men will hope that she will turn out to be young and pretty. In direct proportion to her youth and prettiness she will affect the town economically, socially, and ethically.

If she goes to church, the attendance will increase during her visit; if she stays away the attendance will be smaller. Economically, the presence of the visitor will affect the candy store and ice-cream parlor as well as the hat, shoe and collar store and the photo gallery. If the girl be young and pretty, and also a sophisticated girl from "the city," it is certain that her stay will be momentous.

That Hiram Scraggs went to Brewnerstown last week is an item worthy of a scare-head, especially in the eyes of the Hobbs family, where there are six unmarried girls, one of whom has been keeping company with Hiram.

That Sadie Budkins is going to have a party is very important to those who have been trying to collect various little bills from the paterfamilias, as well as to those who know they will be invited and those who know they will not be invited. Those who have not been invited know that they will be crowed over by those who have been, and those who are invited know that they will be talked about, and perhaps assassinated, by those who are not. Of course, there will be steps taken toward forming a retaliatory party.

That Ralph Dickenson is putting up an addition to his house gives rise to the universal opinion that he must have robbed somebody lately.

Washington, July 23.—Ambassador Gerard has been instructed to send a confidential report of the reception given the American note by German officials and also by the German public. Copies of the note will be given out for publication Saturday. Arrangements were made by the State Department to furnish copies also to all belligerents' diplomatic representatives here. Its full text was cabled Thursday night to American diplomats in the warring countries. Summaries were sent to other American representatives abroad.

The note's effect on public opinion here and in Germany is awaited anxiously in official quarters. The Administration is resigned to some criticism from both sources. President Wilson and his advisers are confident, however, that the note will meet with the hearty approval and support of the great mass of the public.

An increase of anti-American sentiment in Germany, temporarily at least, is expected. Whether it assumes considerable proportion, it is believed depends on Germans officialdom's attitude.

Indications are that Germany will delay replying for some time. The note does not require a reply or a promise to modify undersea operations. Eventually, however, it is expected that Germany will send another note.

While the President is ready for any eventualities he has not definitely decided what course would be pursued if the Lusitania incident should be repeated. A special session of Congress might be called or diplomatic relations might be severed without Congressional action.

The Administration was turning its attention today to completing the note to England protesting against her order in council. It was planned to send the note within two or three weeks.

Paris, July 23.—The French war statement today says:

"There was activity at several points on the front during the night. In Artois, around Souchez, there was a violent cannonade and fighting occurred also between the Oise and Aisne Rivers. In the region of Quennevieres at Nouvron on the right bank of the Aisne near Soupir and in the Champaign artillery duels occurred. In the Argonne a cannonade appeared in Bagatelle, where one of our companies succeeded yesterday in capturing part of a German trench, thereby straightening out our front to our advantage. Pont A Nousson was bombarded intermittently during the course of the night. In the Vosges on attempted German attack against our positions south of La Faye was easily repulsed."

ROBERT GRAY IMPROVED.

Reports from the hospital this morning indicate that the condition of Robert Gray, the negro assaulted by George Langford in a fight on West Third street, Wednesday afternoon, is considerably improved, and it was said that his recovery is certain. Langford, who was held for the grand jury in $300 on a charge of atrocious assault, was removed to the Union county jail at Elizabeth, last night, in default of bail.

Gray's injuries consist of a badly battered head, broken ribs and other internal injuries.

The final meeting of the fresh air committee of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church was held last night at the home of H. C. Gayle, the borough. A social followed the business session.

WILL TAKE STEPS SOON TO BRING ORDER IN MEXICO

Washington, July 23.—Secretary of State Lansing took up the question of the Mexica policy with President Wilson at the White House today. Afterward he admitted that steps were to be taken in the immediate future to bring about some semblance of order, and for the protection of American and foreign lives and property. It was apparent that the administration was disgusted with the manner in which the Mexican factional leaders had failed to "get together" and end the bloody strife.

W. W. Pratt, of this city, and Rev. Kenneth McArthur, of New York. On the third Sunday, the Brotherhood of the church will be in charge and former Mayor G. W. V. Moy will be the speaker.

The evening services will be held on the church lawn and will be in charge of the young people. The speakers will include J. D. Loizeaux, Assemblyman W. N. Runyon, Rev. Dr. J. Madison Hare, of Scotch Plains, and General Secretary Alfred C. Estes, of the Y. M. C. A.

FIRE BOX GLASS BROKEN.

Fire alarm box No. 51, Prospect place and Washington avenue, North Plainfield, was found unlocked this morning by a passer-by who notified fire headquarters. It was found that the glass was broken and a new glass had to be substituted. Boys, bent on mischief, are supposed to have broken the glass, and as the box is so close to the sidewalk, an act like that could be committed without much danger of being noticed.

ASSOCIATES GIVE A "SHOWER."

Miss Helen Leithausser, of East Second street, was given a "shower" last evening by her associates at Tepper Brothers' store, in honor of her approaching marriage to Lester Renninger. Miss Leithausser received many gifts of cut glass, china and linen.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN'S SILVER TONGUE

Retired Secretary of State Has Great Earning Capacities.

The sensational resignation of William Jennings Bryan as secretary of state—marking the first break in the cabinet that President Wilson was hoping to maintain intact throughout most of his administration—to conduct a propaganda for peace again affords the famous Nebraskan free scope for the use of the pen and the rostrum. In the conduct of this campaign the retired premier, endeavoring to raise the issue between force and persuasion, will try to demonstrate that the pen is mightier than the sword. He will also, it is believed, depend largely upon his oratorical powers to advance the cause to which he is devoting himself. Of Colonel Bryan's persuasiveness on the platform there is no doubt.

A well known manager of a lyceum bureau has recently said that the tremendous earning capacity of Mr. Bryan as a platform lecturer in the Chautauqua circuit was not generally appreciated.

Based on the tours of many public men this manager estimated that Mr. Bryan could easily earn $137,000 a year in lectures by diligently devoting himself to the Chautauquas and lyceums upon his recent scale of prices. It is thought that if Mr. Bryan should turn his wonderful ability as an orator to the making of money he could make more than any other man in the world out of his forensic talents.

tor, goodby, stepped out of the lifeboat and died a hero's death, the world said: "Poor young thing! Widowed at nineteen. She can never marry again. Life will be one long suttee for her."

Now, three years after the Titanic tragedy, young Mrs. Astor is said to be about to marry Clarence Hungerford Mackay, son of Bonanza King Mackay.

If she gets married again she will lose $3,000,000 placed in trust for her by John Jacob Astor. But losing a little amount like $3,000,000 will scarce worry Mrs. Astor if she marries Clarence Mackay, for Mr. Mackay is worth millions upon millions.

HUGE WATER BOTTLE PLACED ON EXHIBITION

A large water bottle or bag is on exhibition in the show window of Weiss' drug store at Somerset street and Craig place, and is attracting considerable attention. The bag is made of rubber, like other hot water bags or bottles, but is about four feet high, from the bottom to the tip of the neck, and has held sixty gallons of water. That much was poured into it once, but the bag was not filled to its utmost capacity because of the difficulty of holding the bag in an upright position long enough to put the water within. It will probably hold more than sixty gallons. The water was weighed when placed in the bottle, and tipped the scales at 480 pounds. The bag is a product of a rubber company, and was loaned to Mr. Weiss for advertising purposes.

RECREATION NOTES

The municipal dance will be held at Washington School tomorrow night.

The Dramatic Club will meet in the kindergarten room at the Washington School this evening.

The colored people are to have their regular Friday evening social time in the auditorium at the Washington School tonight.

A good time is in store for all who go to Washington School tomorrow evening. Dancing will be enjoyed until a late hour, and lemonade will be on sale. It is hoped that those who live in the immediate neighborhood of the school will take an interest in the little affairs held here and be present at them very often. The dance is entirely self-supporting, the small fee which is charged paying all expenses.

PLAN TO START DAIRY.

Somerville, July 23.—A wealthy young student at the New Jersey Agricultural College, Guy Happersett, was arrested yesterday, charged with stealing a cow. Happersett, it is said, has "notions" about starting a dairy farm, and wanted the cow to begin with. It was from the farm of Constable Job Codington that the animal was stolen, on Wednesday, and it was found many miles away, on the farm of Henry Sebring, whose son was a college mate of Happersett, after a four-hour search by Constable Codington and Detective Totten. Happersett, the authorities were informed, had led the cow himself all the way from one farm to the other, taking six hours for the trip.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 69 degrees; 11 a. m., 80 degrees; 1 p. m., 77 degrees.

THE REAL AIM.

Probably everyone will agree with the following from the New York Herald:

The fearless editor may offend and lose a subscriber, but if he is right in the end he will gain twelve. He may lose one advertiser, but if he is right he will gain five thereby. If he tries to ride all the horses in the field he will be unhorsed by each of them. The editor should follow his earnest, well-considered convictions, and the man whom he should labor to please is himself. If he does so with ability and without fear or favor, he will have a great following and better support than he who trims his sails to every changeable breeze and without chart or purpose drifts aimlessly about with every shifting tide.

Newspaper fearlessness does not refer to an everlasting desire to be insulting or combative just in order to show the reader the editor is unafraid. The Paterson Call, in commenting on the Herald editorial, says that it requires quite as much courage to defend some people as it does to oppose others. What is meant by the term is the determination upon the part of the paper to print the news, regardless of who it concerns; to tell the truth, regardless of who it injures, if the truth should be told, and to express with all the intelligence at one's command the conscientious interpretation of the news in the editorial columns, regardless of cliques or clans or factions who may not agree with such interpretations.

In view of the fact that the city has announced its intention of again engaging a dog-catcher to round up stray bow-wows during the summer months it might be well to instruct the appointee before he starts work to include in his list of captures all homeless cats. At the present time the felines are making themselves far more conspicuous on our city streets than the dogs and as night prowlers they are doing more than their share in producing sleeplessness for human beings. Although there is no law which provides for the licensing of cats it would not be difficult for a dog-catcher of avertage intelligence to single out the homeless felines that stray about the city streets. At this period of the year cats are most numerous and the nuisance these animals cause is far greater than that attributed to the bow-wow.

That city officials tread on dangerous ground the minute they start to attack anything popular with the people was never better illustrated than in the case of the Hoboken Commissioners. They decided to exact a high license fee from the jitneys, thus protecting the Public Service Corporation, which apparently is not especially popular in Hudson county. Six thousand signatures were secured on a petition to the Commission urging them to let the jitneys run, and there was even talk of a recall petition for the commissioners who favored driving the nickel autos out of business. City authorities who try to interfere with what the people consider their prerogatives usually "get their fingers burned."

Following the custom established last year, the Plainfield merchants today announced that the principal stores of the city will be closed all day on Thursdays during the month of August. Last year when the experiment was first tried, a few of the business men did not feel that they could join in the movement, but this year the action is concerted, and there will hardly be a store open on Front street on that day during the month. This, of course, does not include the paint and hardware stores, which have for several years closed at noon on Saturdays, giving their clerks the rest of that day and the evening off.

William Jennings Bryan has announced that he will resume his work on the lecture platform, and he gets free space for the advertisement in every paper in the country. It remains to be seen whether he is so strong an attraction now as he was before he deserted his post of duty at a critical time, and on the flimsiest protext.

United States Senator James E. Martine has prepared the editorial for tomorrow night's paper. In it he will continue the narrative begun two weeks ago, and will tell about some of the things which he noticed on his recent trip to Hawaii, which country he visited as one of a party of Congressional investigators.

The thousands of friends of Congressman Richard Wayne Parker are rejoicing in the news that his attack of insanity is probably temporary, and that he will be restored to his usual vigorous health after a few months' rest.

POLITICAL NOTES.

August 25—Union county Democrats hold annual outing at Witzel's Point View Grove, L. I.

August 27—Last day for filing county nomination petitions with county clerk.

September 7—First registration day.

September 21—Primary day and second registration day.

October 19—State referendum election, and third registration day.

November 2—General Election Day.

The chairman of the Republican State Committee, Newton A. R. Bugbee, has sent out under date of July 19, a letter asking for campaign contributions.

"Unusual conditions have arisen," the State chairman's appeal begins, "that make it necessary for us to address this appeal to you. The Democratic press is making an organized attempt to force the war complications into the foreground of public thought in order that the failure of the Wilson Administration may be forgotten and in this way secure the re-election of the President. It is a situation that endangers the election of a Republican administration in 1916, unless we can meet it by continued publicity.

"The war in Europe is not an issue, but the Democratic party is working overtime to make it so. We must impress upon the minds of the people that the Wilson Administration has been fatal to our solid industries; that the Underwood tariff bill has diminished the revenue of the country and looted the National treasury to such an extent that even the imposition of additional taxes has not been sufficient to make up the enormous deficit.

"The State Committee is doing everything in its power and will continue to do so as long as it has the necessary money. Can you not help us with a contribution? Your promptness will double the value of your contribution. We know you want a Republican victory in 1916—help us to make it possible."

The Progressives of Hudson county are sharply divided, one faction insisting that the third party of 1912 must be continued, and the other side favoring amalgamation with the G. O. P. George L. Record may be an Assembly candidate for the latter faction.

While declaring for a new deal in the county government of Bergen, State Senator Charles O'C. Hennessy has denied the story that he was preparing a non-partisan slate of freeholder candidates. He severely scores the men whom he declares have controlled the county government for years.

Local friends of former Congressman William E. Tuttle, Jr., do not expect to see much of him for some months now. His new position of representative of the United States to the Panama Republic Exposition will keep him busy at Washington and Panama for almost a year.

That Congressman R. Wayne Parker will recover from his recent mental collapse is now confidently believed. His condition has already improved, and he is given the utmost freedom at the State Hospital, coming and going practically as he pleases. He will likely be taken on a yachting trip soon.

CALM IN STRIKE ZONE

place and this venture will probably cost him his life. When rescued by Bayonne's motorcycle police squad with revolvers drawn his head was split open, two ribs were broken and his face was beaten to a pulp. He was taken to the hospital in a dying condition.

During yesterday's fight, Paul Killinghausen, an Elizabeth Journal photographer, had his camera shot out of his hands. He was then attacked by the strikers and badly beaten.

Shortly before the outbreak late last night many of the strikers were seen to have big quantities of ammunition in their possession and investigation by the sheriff revealed the fact that a Polish hall had been raided. It is said that rifles and other equipment belonging to the National Guard were stored in this building and when Mayor Garven ordered ammunition dealers to stop their sales it is said that the strikers took those of the militia.

Frank Tannenbaum, the I. W. W. agitator who recently completed a term on Blackwell's Island for his part in the raid of Manhattan churches, appeared on the scene again last night but for some reason found little favor in the eyes of the strikers. His attempts to make a speech went for naught.

Sheriff Kinkead has established his headquarters at No. 4 engine company's house, directly across the street from the Tide Water Oil Company's entrance. Here he received reporters but would say little. The effects of the battles of yesterday were plainly visible last night, plate glass windows being riddled with holes and newstands and other small buildings in the war zone being wrecked. That no one is safe in that particular section of Bayonne is evidenced by the bullet holes and shattered windows in houses three hundred yards from the oil company's plants. The guards have had instructions to "shoot to kill," but thus far they have displayed no exceptional accurateness with the Winchesters and as a result many of their bullets went wild and injured innocent bystanders.

Drink crazed and believing that success in their present mission lies wholly in revenging the deaths of their fellow countrymen, the strikers line the streets day and night. The "war zone" is located in one of Bayonne's most densely populated sections and wives, mothers, children and sisters have added to the terrorizing scene by crowding the thoroughfares up to the "dead-line." From Avenue A to within two hundred yards of the Tide Water Oil Company's plant, Twenty-second street is crowded from curb to curb. Women with infants in their arms have established places for themselves along the curbs and on door-steps and present a forlorn and pitiful appearance.

Early yesterday afternoon Sheriff Kinkead ordered the saloons in the strike district closed. His warning was given general heed but the condition of the angered strikers last night indicated that his command had come too late. The men were saturated with liquor and beloved ones were tagging at their garments in vain efforts to make fathers and brothers come home out of danger's path. Despite the fact that the entire town is in a state of turmoil the only policemen to be found are located in a small group occupying a radius of not more than twenty-five feet directly in front of the Tide Water Oil Company's gate. No efforts were made yesterday to preserve order in other parts of the city. Free-for-all fights were numerous and pedestrians were showered with stones and other missiles thrown by small boys from the tops of freight cars and houses. No one who ventured inside of the "dead line" was safe and practically the only ones to visit the scene of yesterday morning's massacre were reporters. Accounts of the strike have caused a great deal of animosity on the part of the strikers toward the newspapers and several times yesterday afternoon the correspondents' automobile was surrounded by angered men and the occupants threatened with violence. On one occasion when members of reportorial staffs of several New York papers, one Elizabeth paper and the Plainfield Daily Press stopped for information in Twenty-second street more than one hundred Hungarians swarmed around the car, headed by an agitator. The latter, who happened to be the only one who could make himself understood in English, demanded to know where certain publications secured their facts for stories in yesterday's editions. So riled was he over the affair that he would give the reporters no chance to answer him and finally ordered the frenzied strikers to push the machine out of the strike territory. Eager to carry out his demands the one hundred men lined up on each side of the car and in the rear and pushed it for more than a block, at the same time hurling stones and missiles at those in it.

The original opinion prevailed that the movement was a pro-German one but investigation by a Daily Press reporter yesterday afternoon dispelled this fact. It is apparent that a large majority of the troublemakers are made up of men hailing from countries that are allied against Germany in the European conflict and a canvass resulted in nine men out of ten proclaiming Hungarian extraction.

One of the most prominent features of the strike is the marked popularity of Sheriff Kinkead. As he rides through the throng he is greeted by lusty cheering on either side and on each occasion when he has attempted to address the mob his words have been drowned in shouts. He is a former congressman and professes to be "with the laboring man." Although the striking element is purely a foreign one it is noticeable that every man has mastered the English language to the extent of learning the slogan, "Stay out." The company's offer the settle with the men if they return to the factory has been turned down flatly and they have announced that the only inducement will be a fifteen per cent. increase in wages and shorter hours. They claim that the rush of war orders has ceaused the foreman to make them work faster and that they have to put in nine hours and fifty minutes a day and have only one-half day off on Saturdays.

Everyone in Bayonne is "on edge." It is a well known fact that all of the buildings in the "strike zone" would burn readily if they once got a start and that there would be insufficient protection forthcoming is also certain. The factory's fire-fighting force is among the strikers and inasmuch as the Bayonne department has never been called upon to fight a fire in the striking factory the men are reluctant to turn out. One of the pipes containing a large amount of gasoline was cut by strikers yesterday and flooded the district. If this once gets a start it is believed that it will wipe out the entire zone, including the big factories along the water front.

The quiet of yesterday afternoon was broken at about 6 o'clock, when the International Nickel Company and the Pacific Coast Borax Company closed down for the night. A majority of the employes of these two concerns signified their neutrality by wearing their time slips in their hats but there were some who refused to pay this mark of respect to the strikers. This latter group was singled out and chased for several blocks with stones, tin-cans and clubs. A wild scream went up from men and women and many were injured in the crush that ensued. All of the men escaped by scaling a high board fence and running down the railroad tracks toward Jersey City.

A short time after this initial uprising six of the guards attempted to "run the gauntlet" of strikers in a single horse express wamon. Lying on the floor of the wagon they were not discovered until in the midst of the throng and when once spied they were showered with bricks. The driver beat the horse and the animal raced at break-neck speed for the northern section of the city.

One of the few American storekeepers in the strike zone talked readily with a Daily Press reporter last night. He stated that unlimited credit had been extended to all of the strikers and said that in his opinion there was a large number of Bayonne citizens in sympathy with the men now "out."

Lying on the roof tops, snatching what little sleep they can, are hundreds of strikers. During yesterday afternoon and last night on each call of an outbreak these "snipers" rushed to the edges of the roofs and pelted the throng with rocks and stones. There are pickets on every side and those curious spectators who follow an affair of this nature are carefully scrutinized as they come from the trains. Reporters are held up repeatedly by pickets who make a demand to know their business and then when told it they scornfully allow the newspapermen to proceed on their way.

The police in the heart of the war zone "stick together" and spend their time between outbreaks by reviewing the incidents of the day. They are a talkative lot and take particular pride in exploiting their views to newspapermen. An army of photographers representing metropolitan dailies and various syndicates is on the scene and on every hand can be heard the "click-click" of the "picture-box."

The spot selected for yesterday morning's massacre was an ideal one and the police expect to have more trouble in that vicinity before the strike is settled. Between the "dead-line" and the factories there lies a stretch of jet-black unvegetated ground about the size of a square block. Through this plain a railroad siding has been run and yesterday afternoon a string of cars was left stationed. These were at once swooped down upon by strike sympathizers who gained points of vantage on the roofs and in the empty cars.

BIG DOUBLE BILL AT PARKER FIELD

Yale Defeats Eagles and Hartfords Win Over Princeton Tigers.

JUNIOR LEAGUE STANDING.

Eagles	2	2	.500

The playground ballists indulged in a big double bill at Parker Field this morning, Yale defeating the Eagles in the first game by the score of 9 to 5, while the Hartfords hung one on the Princeton Tigers, the score in this case being 7 to 5. Joe Newell lived up to his "rep" and allowed his opponents only two bingles, one of which was garnered by Mullin and the other by Mundy. Wilson hurled for the Eagles, and was touched for five hits, none of which went for extra bases.

In the second game both Frank Mullin and Bill Reasoner batted 1.000, while Joe Clark and Meakin got two safe blows each, as did Bob Lee, of the losing combination. Lee, Mullin and Reasoner each clouted out a double.

AUTO CO. GETS WAR ORDER.

Cleveland, July 23.—An order for gun or rifle barrels amounting to between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 has been received by the Peerless Motor Company. It is said that work on the contract will be started in a few days. The order came through the General Electric Company and will not interfere with the making of automobiles for the Allies by the company.

TO TAKE CHARGE SUNDAY.

John J. Sullivan, of Point Pleasant, the new proprietor of the Hotel Kensington, will take charge of the hostelry on Sunday, succeeding William J. Kitchen.

The man or woman who have not the habit of "trying again" very often fail as want advertisers, wholly for that reason.

JOURNALISTIC OPINION.

There are scores of jitney automobiles and buses in Newark. In fact Broad and Market streets are so thickly occupied with jitney vehicles of every kind and color that the foot traveler who attempts to cross one of these thoroughfares takes his life very feebly in his hand. You can now go anywhere in or out of Newark for five cents. One can now secure a ride in the trolleys out of that city without having to stand up. It may be supposed that the Public Service officials are looking at the business the jitneys are doing with mingled feelings of astonishment and anxiety.—Elizabeth Journal.

WILL NOT RUN AGAIN.

President George S. Clay, of the Common Council, owing to ill health, says that he will not be a candidate for re-election next fall. He is completing a service of seven years in the council.

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, will preach on Sunday for the last time prior to taking his annual vacation during August. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblis, a former pastor, will preach at the church a week from Sunday.

You May Find a Worker Trained and Fit to do Your Work.

A worker whose salary you will voluntarily raise in a short time!

"Getting along" with half-competent help, in home, office, store or factory, is a poor plan—a poor business policy.

The quest for the Competent Worker is important enough to justify a real campaign of classified advertising in the Plainfield Daily Press—although it does not often require a very long campaign.

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

TALK OF USING SINGER PLANT FOR WAR MUNITIONS

Elizabeth, July 23.—Rumors are rife just now that the big Singer factory will be used for the manufacture of war munitions, but no confirmation or denial is obtainable.

The taking of stock by the company during the recent vacation of the employs was regarded by some as a sign of new activity at the factory. A report that the concern will again resume the great activities of former years in its own line—the manufacturing of sewing machines—is also in circulation.

It is known that a syndicate of representatives interested in the manufacture of munitions have visited at least one factory in Elizabeth in an endeavor to purchase it, but were unsuccessful.

DEPOSED CLERK REFUSES TO MAKE OUT SCHOOL REPORT

Bernardsville, July 23.—Hair-splitting in the interpretation of the school laws is being indulged in by the Board of Education and the former district clerk, Frank P. Baumann, over who shall make out the district clerk's annual report to the county superintendent.

Mr. Baumann, deposed in June as the district clerk of the Bernards Township Board of Education, has refused to make out the report, maintaining that it is the duty of the new clerk to do it. The board, differing with him, has held back his last month's salary of $40. Mr. Baumann has communicated with H. C. Krebs, of North Plainfield, superintendent of the Somerset county schools, stating the facts and asking: "Who is the clerk of Bernards township?" This question is put because, Mr. Baumann declares, the law requires that the district clerk shall make out the report during July. He, he says, was not clerk after June 30.

Mr. Baumann insisted that he is entitled to his June salary, and intimated that he would make an attempt to get it, if he has to sue for it. He is not satisfied with the reply he received from Mr. Krebs to his question as to who is district clerk. Mr. Krebs, not answering that question, said "it has always been presumed to be the duty of the retiring district clerk to make out the report and not the duty of the new clerk."

There remains but ten days in which to prepare the report, as it has to be filed with the county superintendent on or before August 1.

WOMEN TO HAVE PROMINENT PART

HISTORY OF SOCIETIES

Work of Women's Relief Corps is the Most Important—Has a Membership of 167,000 in Forty-one States.

Washington, D. C., July 23.—Women will take a prominent part in the forty-ninth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which will be held in Washington, September 27 to October 2.

Four organizations of women allied with the Grand Army of the Republic will participate in the encampment. These are the Woman's Relief Corps, the Auxiliary to the Sons of Veterans, the Ladies of the G. A. R. and the Daughters of Veterans. Many thousands of members of the four organizations will be in Washington during the encampment, and the grand review, which is to reproduce, as far as possible, the review of union troops in Washington by President Johnson and General Grant fifty years ago at the close of the Civil War.

Of the organizations of women connected with the Grand Army the largest and most important is the Woman's Relief Corps.

The Woman's Relief Corps is auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, and its only auxiliary. The Ladies of the G. A. R. and the Daughters of Veterans are independent bodies, auxiliary to no organization.

The Woman's Relief Corps is the largest organization of women in the world under one eligibility clause and one motto. It now numbers 167,000, with department organizations in forty-one States, divided among 2,061 corps, as the local organizations are known. Besides these there are thirty-seven detached corps, which thrive in ten Southern and two Western States, where there are no department organizations.

The Woman's Relief Corps is the greatest philanthropic, charitable and patriotic organization of women in the world.

It was organized at Denver, Col., in 1883, in response to the call of the veterans for the organization of women that would be auxiliary to them, and which would meet with them at national encampments, and assist them in the tremendous work which was becoming burdensome to the Grand Army, that of helping to care for the aged veterans and their dependent widows and children. Pensions were very small at that time, and the hardships of war were beginning to tell on the veterans who suffered from wounds and other disabilities incurred in the service of the country. At the encampment in Denver, the Woman's Relief Corps, comprised of "loyal women who never gave aid or comfort to the enemies of the Union," was organized and accepted by the Grand Army, which had called it into existence, and gave it the motto of the veteran body, "Fraternity, Charity and Loyalty," with the right to wear a badge with the medallion center of the G. A. R. badge.

Since its organization the Women's Relief Corps has expended in charitable and relief work for veterans nearly $4,000,000. There are more than 3,000 women whose work as "patriotic instructors" in corps and departments of the Woman's Relief Corps is commanding attention.

Beside the great sums spent in relief work, the organization has given the Grand Army of the Republic about $4,500 in cash for its permanent fund. It gives the Grand Army of the Republic $1,000 annually. In 1896 the Woman's Relief Corps accepted as a gift from the Department of Georgia, G. A. R., the old Andersonville prison stockade grounds, near Americus, Ga., and expended thousands of dollars in turning this into a park. Old Providence Spring has been canopied with stone, and its sweet waters are as refreshing today to travelers on the great Dixie highway as they were to the starving prisoners when it broke forth in August, 1864. The Woman's Relief Corps gave Andersonville to the United States, and it is now a government park.

These are but a few of the achievements of the Woman's Relief Corps, which will, next to the G. A. R., be the important factor at the coming National Encampment.

CARDINAL GIBBONS IS 81.

Baltimore, Md., July 23.—Telegrams and letters of congratulations poured in today on Cardinal Gibbons, the venerable Baltimore prelate of the Catholic Church, in recognition of his 81st birthday. The Pope's message and the words of felicitation from his fellow members of the Sacred College touched him deeply. The Cardinal is active in mind and body, despite the weight of years, and maintains his system of exercise, regular meals and early rising.

LET BIG ROAD CONTRACTS.

Columbus, O., July 23—More than a million dollars worth of road contracts will be let today by the State Highway Department. An effort will be made to adopt standard roadways in all counties.

THUNDERSTORMS.

Simple Scientific Explanation of How They Occur.

ELECTRICITY IN THE CLOUDS.

The Processes by Which the Masses of Unequally Charged Vapor Are United, the Lightning Flashes Generated and the Downpour Started.

Lightning is the result of electric discharges from the clouds, says the Electrical Experimenter in printing what it calls "a thunderstorm primer." Every cloud, like every other object, contains electricity. This makes no disturbance so long as the quantity contained is normal. When the quantity becomes greater than normal the object is positively charged; when it becomes less than normal the object is negatively charged. The equilibrium of the electric force in the clouds is disturbed by evaporations from the surface of the earth, by changes of temperature in the atmospheric vapor, by chemical action on the earth's surface and by the friction of volumes of air of different densities against each other.

When clouds charged with the opposite electricities approach, the forces rush toward each other and combine to restore the state of equilibrium, for all bodies charged with opposite electricities attract each other. Between the clouds is air, an excellent nonconductor, through which the electricity has to force a passage. The violence with which it does this produces the lightning and the accompanying crash of thunder.

Clouds are good conductors, while the air about them is a nonconductor; therefore the electricity accumulates in the clouds. It is probably this electricity which prevents the particles of water from uniting together and falling down in the form of rain.

Imagine two clouds near to each other in the sky, one positively and the other negatively electrified, for there cannot in all nature be such a condition as that of one body positively excited without the coexistence of another body negatively excited. If the positively charged cloud were all alone in the sky the circumjacent atmosphere would assume the negative function. But as the other cloud is near by it becomes negative, and both are mutually attracted. They approach each other until the space of air between them can no longer resist their electric tension, when the discharge takes place.

The equilibrium of the clouds being thus restored, there is nothing to keep the particles of water apart; they coalesce into drops and fall as rain.

When only the clouds are involved the equilibrium is quickly restored by a few flashes and the storm is over. When the air also is involved it continues to charge the clouds with electricity, and the discharges continue until the various strata of air are brought into their normal state.

Sometimes, when the clouds are charged with an opposite electricity to that of the earth, a discharge takes place from clouds to earth or from earth to clouds. It is only when there is a great disturbance of the electrical forces that the lightning flashes to the earth or vice versa.

The flash and the thunder peal are simultaneous, and we see the one before we hear the other because light waves move far more swiftly than sound waves. The peal of thunder is instantaneous, but comes to us as a roll through being echoed from clouds or mountains. The noise is caused by the vibrations of the air rushing to fill up the spaces where the electrical discharge has rarefied it and condensed its vapors.

Lightning is zigzag when it travels through a long distance, because it compresses the air, which interferes with its direct course. It is straight when it passes through only a short distance. It is forked when, being resisted by the air, it divides into two or three points. It is sheet when the flash is too distant to be visible, and its reflection alone is seen.

By remembering that sound travels a quarter of a mile in a second, while light travels so swiftly that we see it instantaneously, we can tell how far off a thunder clap is. If we hear a thunder clap four seconds after seeing the flash we know it is a mile away. For such calculations our own pulse is a sufficiently accurate measure of time, for the pulse of an adult beats about once a second. A person under forty should count five beats to the mile; a person under twenty should count six beats to the mile.

A Rough Criticism.

Lord Houghton's epigram on "Sordello," probably the most obscure of Browning's poems, though it has often gone the rounds, is worth recalling. Said Lord Houghton, then only Dicky Milnes, "There are but two lines in 'Sordello' I can understand—the first and last—'Who will may hear Sordello's story told' and 'Who would hath heard Sordello's story told,' and both are false."

Finger Print Love.

"Why do you think you'll be happy if you marry that young man, daughter?" asked the father.

"Because, father, we've had our finger prints examined and they almost match," was the sweet young thing's reply.—Yonkers Statesman.

Let us remember that justice must be observed even to the lowest.—Cicero.

Because it has had some use, and is, therefore, "second-hand," may not greatly impair its usefulness to you. So watch the 'For Sale" ads.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Two features are on at Proctor's Theatre for some little while, namely, the victrola contest, in which one of these instruments is to be given away absolutely free to the person making the nearest guess to the number of the machine, and the Shetland pony contest, in which 100 votes are given with each and every ticket. Bear these features in mind.

Also bear in mind the feature pictures. For this evening, the six-part production, "The Spendthrift" is scheduled, with a cast including such stars as Irene Fenwick, Cyril Keightley, Malcolm Duncan, Grace Leigh and J. C. Haskett. A production well worth making a special trip to see.

For tomorrow, a four-act photoplay, entitled, "The Mountain Rat," with a cast including Henry Walthall, Irene Hunt, Donald Crisp and Dorothy Gish, will feature the program. Here is a story of love with the great West as a background that will attract many. Add to this, another episode of the serial photo-play "The Goddess," travel pictures and comedy, and you have a well rounded program.

A full line of the feature pictures booked for Proctor's Theatre next week will appear in these columns tomorrow.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

What Pittsburg Thinks of Thaw.

Harry Thaw is in Pittsburg again.

Pittsburg is not honored by his presence and Pittsburg should let him hide in the oblivion into which he should have been buried long ago.

Harry Thaw is notorious—not famous.

He killed a man and was saved from the electric chair by a woman bering her unholy life, and that woman was his own wife, whom he has since disavowed.

But for those crimes and the record of the lurid life he led in his younger manhood his name would be no more familiar outside his own circle than are those of thousands of other idle rich young men.

Harry Thaw's crime made him notorious—no deed of heroism, no great commercial enterprise, made him famous. But that is not all—Harry Thaw, who but for the devotion of a mother who gave nine of the best years of her life and a great part of her fortune to save him, might have paid the death penalty for his crime, or still be an inmate of Matteawan, showed his perverseness and his ingratitude when he preferred the gayety of Atlantic City and moving picture men to the arms of that waiting mother.

The truly penitent man would have had "mother and home" ringing in his ears, and no train would have been fast enough to take him back where loving arms were waiting to embrace him.

There is no sympathy for Harry Thaw, and he is deserving of none.

Whatever sympathy on the part of the public his case evoked was for the aged mother whom Harry Thaw humiliated by leaving her in ignorance as to his whereabouts and whose mother-love he stung by preferring to be the attraction for a morbid mob to greeting her with grateful heart.

That crime will leave its stain on Harry Thaw as marked as that of the murder he committed.

That he will attract attention in Pittsburg is possible.

But let Harry Thaw not lay it to his soul that it is either sympathy or respect for him.

His apperance will attract the attention of the curious just as a five-legged cow driven up Fifth avenue would attract attention.

The same mob that would follow him would follow Jack Rose, Jack Johnson or any other person whom crime or brutality has brought into the limelight.

Had Harry Thaw remembered the mother who did not forget him. Had he rushed into her arms as she rushed to his aid—had he said he would remain in the background long enough to show that the past was a horrid nightmare instead of announcing a spectacular trip to the coast—instead of posing anxiously, and more than willingly, for camera men—the public might have had grounds for faith in his future, but he chose the opposite course.

We repeat—Harry Thaw is notorious, not famous—he is the object of disgusting curiosity and is unworthy of honor, and none will be shown him.—Pittsburg Leader.

SUPREME COURT GIVES ELECTION LAW OPINION

Trenton, July 23.—The Geran election act of 1911 does not apply to elections on the question of bond issues, and blanket ballots are not necessary in such elections, according to an opinion just handed down by the Supreme Court in the suit of William H. Schuck against Stone Harbor, Cape May county.

Mr. Schuck obtained a writ of certiorari to review an election held in Stone Harbor on May 10 last, on the question of issuing bonds to build a boardwalk, and also the ordinance providing for the issue of bonds. The chief objection raised by the plaintiff was that two seperate ballots were used, one "for" and the other "against."

The Supreme Court upholds the ordinance and the election, ruling that the Geran act of 1911 did not apply and a blanket ballot was not necessary. The court declares that separate ballots may be used at such an election.

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

CHAPTER IX.
The Other Girl.

THE girl's voice stirred the benumbed youth into action again and he followed her mechanically, often stumbling against the trees, slipping and sliding, till at last his guide, pitching down a sharp slope, came directly upon a wire fence.

"Glory be!" she called. "Here is a fence, and the cabin should be near, although I see no light. Hello! Tony!"

No voice replied, and, keeping Wayland's hand, she felt her way along the fence till it revealed a gate; then she turned toward the roaring of the stream, which grew louder as they advanced. "The cabin is near the falls, that much I know," she assured him. Then a moment later she joyfully cried out, "Here it is!"

Out of the darkness a blacker, sharper shadow rose. Again she called, but no one answered. "The ranger is away," she exclaimed, in a voice of indignant alarm.

Leading him toward the middle of the room, Berrie said: "Stand here till I strike a light."

As her match flamed up Norcross found himself in a rough walled cabin, in which stood a square cook stove, a rude table littered with dishes, and three stools made of slabs. It was all very rude, but it had all the value of a palace at the moment.

The girl's quick eye saw much else. She located an oil lamp, some pine wood and a corner cupboard. In a few moments the lamp was lit, the stove refilled with fuel and she was stripping Wayland's wet coat from his back, cheerily discoursing as she did so. "Here's one of Tony's old jackets, put that on while I see if I can't find some dry stockings for you. Sit right down here by the stove; put your feet in the oven. I'll have a fire in a jiffy. There, that's right. Now I'll start the coffee pot." She soon found the coffee, but it was unground. "Wonder where he keeps his coffee mill." She rummaged about for a few minutes, then gave up the search. "Well, no matter, here's the coffee, and here's a hammer. One of the laws of the trail is this: If you can't do a thing one way, do it another. I depend on this coffee to brace you up," she said.

After hanging a blanket over the broken window, she set out some cold meat and a half dozen baking powder biscuits, which she found in the cupboard, and as soon as the coffee was ready she poured it for him, but she would not let him leave the fire. She brought his supper to him and sat beside him while he ate and drank.

The hot, strong coffee revived him physically and brought back a little of his courage, and he said, "I'm ashamed to be such a weakling."

"Now, hush," she commanded. "It's not your fault that you are weak. Now, while I am eating my supper you slip off your wet clothes and creep into Tony's bunk, and I'll fill one of these syrup cans with hot water to put at your feet."

It was of no use for him to protest against her further care. She insisted, and while she ate he meekly carried out her instructions, and from the delicious warmth and security of his bed watched her moving about the stove till the shadows of the room became one with the dusky figures of his sleep.

A moment later, as it seemed, something falling woke him with a start, and, looking up, he found the sun shining and Berrie confronting him with an anxious face. "Did I waken you?" she asked. "I'm awfully sorry. I'm trying to be extra quiet. I dropped a pan. How do you feel this morning?"

He pondered this question a moment. "Is it tomorrow or the next week?"

She laughed happily. "It's only the next day."

He laid his hands together and then felt of his pulse. "I don't seem to have a temperature. I just feel lazy, limp and lazy, but I'm going to get up, if you'll just leave the room for a moment"—

"Don't try it now. Wait till you have had your breakfast. You'll feel stronger then."

At this point came again the disturbing realization that this night of struggle and the ministrations of his brave companion had involved him deeper in a mesh from which honorable escape was almost impossible. The ranger's cabin, so far from being an end of their compromising intimacy, had added and was still adding to the weight of evidence against them both. The presence of the ranger or the supervisor himself could not now save Berea from the gossips.

She brought his breakfast to him, and sat beside him while he ate, chatting the while of their good fortune. "It is glorious outside, and I am sure daddy will get across today, and Tony is certain to turn up before noon. He probably went down to Coal City to get his mail."

"I must get up at once," he said, in a panic of fear and shame. "The supervisor must not find me laid out on my back. Please leave me alone for a moment."

She went out, closing the door behind her, and as he crawled from his bed every muscle in his body seemed to cry out against being moved. Nevertheless he persisted and at last succeeded in putting on his clothes, even his shoes, though he found tying the laces the hardest task of all, and he was at the wash basin bathing his face and hands when Berrie hurriedly reentered. "Some tourists are coming," she announced in an excited tone. "A party of five or six people, a woman among them, is just coming down the slope. Now, who do you suppose it can be? It would be just our luck if it should turn out to be some one from the mill."

He divined at once the reason for her dismay. The visit of a woman at this moment would not merely embarrass them both, it would torture Berrie. "What is to be done?" he asked, roused to alertness.

"Nothing; all we can do is to stand pat and act as if we belonged here."

"Very well," he replied, moving stiffly toward the door. "Here's where I can be of some service. I am an excellent white liar."

The beat of hoofs upon the bridge drew his attention to the cavalcade, which the keen eyes of the girl had detected as it came over the ridge to the east. The party consisted of two men and two women and three pack horses completely outfitted for the trail.

One of the women, spurring her horse to the front, rode serenely up to where Wayland stood and called out: "Good morning! Are you the ranger?"

"No; I'm only the guard. The ranger has gone down the trail."

He perceived at once that the speaker was an alien like himself, for she wore tan colored riding boots, a divided skirt of expensive cloth and a jaunty, wide rimmed sombrero. She looked indeed precisely like the heroine of the prevalent western drama. Her sleeves, rolled to the elbow, disclosed shapely brown arms, and her neck, bare to her bosom, was equally sun smit, but she was so round cheeked, so childishly charming, that the most critical observer could find no fault with her makeup.

One of the men rode up. "Hello, Norcross. What are you doing over here?"

The youth smiled blandly. "Good morning, Mr. Belden. I'm serving my apprenticeship. I'm in the service now."

"The mischief you are!" exclaimed the other. "Where's Tony?"

"Gone for his mail. He'll return soon. What are you doing over here, may I ask?"

"I'm here as guide to Mr. Moore. Mr. Moore, this is Norcross, one of McFarlane's men. Mr. Moore is connected with the tie camp operations of the railway."

Moore was a tall, thin man with a gray beard and keen blue eyes. "Where's McFarlane? We were to meet him here. Didn't he come over with you?"

"We started together, but the horses got away, and he was obliged to go back after them. He also is likely to turn up soon."

"I am frightfully hungry," interrupted the girl. "Can't you hand me out a hunk of bread and meat? We've been riding since daylight."

Berrie suddenly appeared at the door. "Sure thing," she called out. "Slide down and come in."

Moore removed his hat and bowed. "Good morning, Miss McFarlane. I didn't know you were here. You know my daughter Siona?"

Berrie nodded coldly. "I've met her."

He indicated the other woman. "And Mrs. Belden, of course, you know."

Mrs. Belden, the fourth member of the party, a middle aged, rather flabby person, just being eased down from her horse, turned on Berrie with a battery of questions. "Good Lord! Berrie McFarlane, what are you doing over in this forsaken hole? Where's your dad? And where is Tony? If Cliff had known you was over here he'd have come too."

Berrie retained her self possession. "Come in and get some coffee, and we'll straighten things out."

Apparently Mrs. Belden did not know that Cliff and Berrie had quarreled, for she treated the girl with maternal familiarity. She was a good natured, well intentioned old sloven, but a most renowned tattler, and the girl feared her more than she feared any other woman in the valley. She had always avoided her, but she showed nothing of this dislike at the moment.

Wayland drew the younger woman's attention by saying, "It's plain that you, like myself, do not belong to these parts, Miss Moore."

"What makes you think so?" she brightly queried.

"Your costume is too appropriate. Haven't you noticed that the women who live out here carefully avoid convenient and artistic dress? Now, your outfit is precisely what they should wear and don't."

This amused her. "I know, but they all say they have to wear out their

Sunday go to meeting clothes, whereas I can 'rig out proper.' I'm glad you like my 'rig.'"

At the moment he was bent on drawing the girl's attention from Berrie, but as she went on he came to like her. She said: "No, I don't belong here, but I come out every year during vacation with my father. I love this country. It's so big and wide and wild. Father has built a little bungalow down at the lower mill, and we enjoy every day of our stay."

"You're a Smith girl," he abruptly asserted.

"What makes you think so?"

"Oh, there's something about you Smith girls that gives you dead away."

"Gives us away? I like that!"

"My phrase was unfortunate. I like Smith girls," he hastened to say.

In five minutes they were on the friendliest terms—talking of mutual acquaintances—a fact which both puzzled and hurt Berea. Their laughter angered her, and whenever she glanced at them and detected Siona looking into Wayland's face with coquettish simper she was embittered. She was glad when Moore came in and interrupted the dialogue.

Norcross did not relax, though he considered the dangers of cross examination almost entirely passed. In this he was mistaken, for no sooner was the keen edge of Mrs. Belden's hunger dulled than her curiosity sharpened.

"Where did you say the supervisor was?" she repeated.

"The horses got away, and he had to go back after them," again responded Berrie, who found the scrutiny of the other girl deeply disconcerting.

"When do you expect him back?"

"Any minute now," she replied, and in this she was not deceiving them, although she did not intend to volunteer any information which might embarrass either Wayland or herself.

Norcross tried to create a diversion. "Isn't this a charming valley?"

Siona took up the cue. "Isn't it? It's romantic enough to be the backdrop in a Bret Harte play. I love it!"

Moore turned to Wayland. "I know a Norcross, a Michigan lumberman, vice president of the association. Is he by any chance a relative?"

"Only a father," retorted Wayland, with a smile. "But don't hold me responsible for anything he has done. We seldom agree."

Moore's manner changed abruptly. "Indeed! And what is the son of W. W. Norcross doing out here in the forest service?"

The change in her father's tone was not lost upon Siona, who ceased her banter and studied the young man with deeper interest, while Mrs. Belden, detecting some restraint in Berrie's tone, renewed her questioning. "Where did you camp last night?"

"I don't see how the horses got away. There's a pasture here, for we rode right through it."

Berrie was aware that each moment of delay in explaining the situation looked like evasion and deepened the significance of her predicament, and yet she could not bring herself to the task of minutely accounting for her time during the last two days.

Belden came to her relief. "Well, well, we'll have to be moving on. We're going into camp at the mouth of the west fork," he said as he rose. "Tell Tony and the supervisor that we want to line out that timber at the earliest possible moment."

Siona, who was now distinctly coquetting with Wayland, held out her hand. "I hope you'll find time to come up and see us. I know we have other mutual friends if we had time to get at them."

His answer was humorous. "I am a soldier. I am on duty. I'm not at all sure that I shall have a moment's leave, but I will call if I can possibly do so."

They started off at last without having learned in detail anything of the intimate relationship into which the supervisor's daughter and young Norcross had been thrown, and Mrs. Belden was still so much in the dark that she called to Berrie: "I'm going to send word to Cliff that you are over here. He'll be crazy to come the minute he finds it out."

"Don't do that!" protested Berrie.

Wayland turned to Berrie. "That would be pleasant," he said smilingly.

But she did not return his smile. On the contrary, she remained very grave. "I wish that old talebearer had kept away. She's going to make trouble for us all. And that girl, isn't she a spectacle? I never could bear her."

"Why, what's wrong with her? She seems a very nice, sprightly person."

"She's a regular play actor. I don't like madeup people. Why does she go around with her sleeves rolled up that way and—and her dress open at the throat?"

"Oh, those are the affectations of the moment. She wants to look tough and boisterous. That's the fad with all the girls just now. It's only a harmless piece of foolishness."

She could not tell him how deeply she resented his ready tone of camaraderie with the other girl, but she was secretly suffering. It hurt her to think that he could forget his aches and be so free and easy with a stranger at a moment's notice. Under the influence of that girl's smile he seemed to have quite forgotten his exhaustion and his pain. It was wonderful how cheerful he had been while she was in sight.

In all this Berrie did him an injustice. He had been keenly conscious, during every moment of the time, not only of his bodily ills, but of Berrie, and he had kept a brave face in order that he might prevent further questioning on the part of a malicious girl. It was his only way of being heroic. Now that the crisis was passed he was quite as much of a wreck as ever.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

He Made the Acquaintance of Many Strange Fish.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—— The Turtle That Grew and Grew and Grew.

"ONCE there was a turtle that grew and grew and grew," said daddy. "And that turtle would be growing yet, I think, but he is too old now to grow any more."

"My!" remarked Evelyn.

"This turtle isn't much like those we have seen in the fields and down by the bank of the stream. Those turtles are toy turtles compared with him, for they stopped growing a great deal earlier.

"Well, this turtle was hatched out of an egg, just like a fluffy chicken or a wee birdie, down by the sea. And it was right in the sand in the summer. The mamma turtle laid her eggs there in the sand, which was warmed by the hot sun, and then she went away and left them. A mamma turtle pays no more attention to her eggs after she has laid them, and, of course, she doesn't see her little turtles. She's a funny mamma turtle, isn't she, kiddies?

"But," explained daddy, "that's the way Mother Nature made the mamma turtle. You see, turtles don't know very much anyway, except to keep in their shells, and there isn't any real need of the mamma turtle staying around after she has laid her eggs. The warm sand does the real hatching.

"Well, that little turtle came out of his egg, and perhaps he was the size of a fifty cent piece. It was so long ago that nobody really knows. And he looked about him at the golden sands and up at the blue sky, and then he saw the green water and the waves that came washing in without stopping to rest. So he waddled into that salty water, and he was there for a long, long time.

"At first he just drifted about rather aimlessly, trying to get his bearings. But this he soon succeeded in doing, for the wonderful thing called instinct told him just what to do. He knew the kinds of sea food to eat, you see.

"And first, you know, he was the size of a silver dollar, and then he kept on growing till he was the size of a plate. And then, by and by, he grew to be the size of a platter.

"He swam down under the wonderful green waters and crawled around on the ocean bed and made the acquaintance of many strange fish and odd sea creatures. And he grew and grew and grew.

"Once in awhile he used to come out on shore, and one of these times some men saw him and caught him, and he is now in a big tank in an aquarium.

"That turtle is now bigger than the bottom of a washtub and weighs 500 pounds," said daddy. "And now he is very, very old."

SMART VACATION DRESS.

No. 8937.

Many times is one confronted with the difficulty of deciding on the most satisfactory dress for the vacation. Is it to be an Empire, a Princess or what? Shall it have a low neck, short sleeves, yoke skirt or—"Oh, on just what shall I decide!" A dress that will be found highly satisfactory in determining these little vexatious points by combining many of the season's most popular features, is Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8937. The pattern includes a Quaker collar and cuffs, a waist with a gathered yoke and a one-piece skirt gathered to a two-piece hip yoke. The pattern cuts in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure, requiring in size 36, 6½ yards 36-inch material.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

"Are You a Mason?" one of the laughingest farces ever penned will be shown in film form at the U. S. Astor Theatre today with inimitable Jack Barrymore, the most versatile actor in the universe, portraying the leading role.

There is, perhaps, no more popular an actor among Plainfield theatregoers than the accomplished Mr. Barrymore. His successes have been many, but one of his greatest was in "Kick In," the melodrama of the underworld in which he starred at the Republic Theatre, New York, all last winter.

When a motion picture devotee knows that Jack Barrymore is going to star in a film he realizes at once that the picture will be entertaining, because in his brief career on the screen Barrymore has not only attained a position of wide distinction but is considered by critics as the best comedy-drama actor in the country, with no exceptions. He occupies among the screen actors today the same position Mary Pickford holds among the women of the profession.

The story of "Are You a Mason?" is too well-known for repetition here. Suffice it to say, however, that it is swift in action and ingenious in plot. The humor is continuous and is sure death to grouches.

Tomorrow 'The Sands of Time" will be the principle feature in conjunction with our regular show.

GETS LOUVAIN PROFESSOR.

Philadelphia, July 23.—Prof. Albert J. Carnoy, of the destroyed University of Louvain, in Belgium, has joined the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania. His wife and five children are coming from England to join him. The professor will take charge of research work here, and will rebuild his scientific library, which was destroyed in the sack of his native city. All of his scientific notes, the result of years of effort, were also lost. He was forced to flee with other refugees, and in England employed his time in teaching Belgians. He came to America last spring, and became visiting professor at Columbia. He is an authority on languages and philosophy.

SHOW FIRST AID METHODS.

Billings, Mont., July 23—The miners' annual first-aid contest, in which teams of fifteen mines in this State will compete, takes place here today and tomorrow. Each team has five men, trained to demonstrate the first-aid and mine rescue work. The Red Lodge team holds the championship won last year. The expense of the meet will be met by the mine owners, and the two days are being turned into a miners' holiday.

The man or woman who have not the habit of "trying again" very often fail as want advertisers, wholly for that reason.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Nell sped up the path to Jo Parsons' porch, holding her baby under the heavy shawl that enveloped her head and shoulders. She tapped on the door, turned the knob and went in without waiting for a reply to her summons.

"Hello, dear," called Jo from the living room. "I'm so glad you came over."

"I'm using your house as Josiah Allins used the barn," laughed Nell, propping the baby among the pillows in the corner of the davenport, and using the shawl as a barrier to hold him in.

"Used the barn," repeated Jo, mystified.

"Did you read 'My Sufferance With Agents'? Well, you must to understand my feelings. The number of men trying to sell Mrs. Josiah a sewing machine had become so great that she refused to let them in and they camped on the doorsteps. She determined to wait until Josiah came home to send them away, but happened to look out of the window and saw his boots sticking out from under the barn. He had crawled under to escape them.

"Come here," she continued, going over to the window. "See that young man wandering around like a disturbed ghost? Dick may have to send him away when he returns from Kansas City tonight."

"Is that a sewing machine in the wagon?" asked Jo.

"Yes."

"But you have a sewing machine," objected the friend.

"Oh, that makes no difference. I have quilts, too, but that didn't keep Mrs. Severs from laying siege to the castle to induce me to buy [illegible] her old [illegible] this winter and, bless you, the quilts are these. I couldn't make her take them away. You needn't laugh; it's no laughing matter." Nell gazed at her friend, a grim smile on her face.

"I'd hardly been relieved of her presence when an automobile agent descended on me. He poured the superior finish of his machine over me till I feel I could be warranted not to crack or peel off for ages."

"What caused this avalanche?" asked Jo, wiping the tears of laughter from her eyes.

"Have you this week's paper here?" Nell began looking over the papers on the library table.

"No; today's mail has not been brought up."

"Well, that lawyer or someone in Kansas City put a paragraph in the paper and the 'Home Clarion' copied it."

"A paragraph. I don't understand." Jo looked puzzled.

"Oh, slow of wit," drawled Nell. "About 'our fortune,' name and all printed out as large as life."

"Ye gods, what you have ahead of you," said Jo, holding up her hands. "Take to the woods, Nell; go to the farm for your life."

"I'll have to or put iron bars on the doors. Think of it: the paper was out this morning and here are three agents this afternoon. Of course the auto man was from Kansas City, and I did not stay to learn the facts about this last visitor, but incontinently fled when I saw him coming."

"There, stay here till it's dark; then you'll be safe," said Jo, smoothing her shoulder as if she were an irate cat. "People can't inherit fortunes without some attendant discomforts."

"So far the pains have been out of all proportion to the pleasure," said Nell, moodily sitting down to rock the baby to sleep.

"Do you suppose Dick can settle the thing on this trip?" asked Jo, after Nell had laid the sleeping baby on the davenport.

"I have no idea. I can hardly wait to see him and find out. I suppose, however, there is a lot of red tape that will have to be reeled off before we can get hold of the money."

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING

Strawberry "Sunshine"—Three things are necessary for this: First, a strong, steady sunshine; second, hot platters or plates; third, plenty of window glass. Select fruit of good flavor. To each pound of fruit allow three cups sugar. Heat sugar on plates in the oven, taking care not to let it melt or get brown, though as hot as possible without these. Spread a thin layer of hot sugar over the bottoms of hot platters or plates, then a layer of fruit and another layer of sugar. Cover platters with a clean sheet of window glass and place out of doors in the hot sun, or in a sunny window. If the fruit is out of doors it must be brought in when the sun sets and put in a dry place indoors. Return to the sun in the morning. In a few days the fruit will grow plump and firm and the sirup almost a jelly. Pack in tumblers and seal. If the sirup is not thick, boil until clear and thickened, then pour over fruit in the glasses.

Strawberry Conserve—One quart ripe strawberries, one-half pound seeded raisins, one lemon, two oranges, one-half pound chopped walnut meats, one quart sugar. Wash and drain berries, then put them into a preserving kettle with the raisins, sugar, grated rinds and pulps of lemons and oranges. Cook slowly thirty minutes, then add walnuts and cook ten minutes longer. Put into tumblers and cover with melted paraffin. Peaches, plums, grapes and cranberries may be used in place of strawberries.

THE TABLE

Cherry Pineapple Cup—Seed one quart sweet cherries and shred the pulp of a pineapple. Mix cherries and pineapple with one-half cup sugar and chill. Keep cool on ice until ready to serve. Just before serving pour over fruit one-fourth cup lemon juice and one-half cup orange juice mixed with one-half cup [illegible]

Buns—When working the bread out in loaves, take one cup dough, add two-thirds cup sugar, one-half cup lard, one cup warm water, and mix in enough flour to make stiff; then let raise until evening and work out into buns. Let raise in cool place until morning, then bake. Beat white of one egg stiff with a little sugar, spread on top.

Beefsteak Pie—Take steak, not too thick, cut in narrow strips, then in short pieces two inches in length (do not use the fat); put these pieces of beef in the bottom of crock or granite pan (only enough to cover bottom of dish). Over this put a good sprinkling of sifted flour, salt and pepper and lumps of good butter, then put another layer of pieces of beef, with the addition of the flour, salt, pepper and butter, and so continue until the meat is all in the dish, with a generous sprinkling of flour, salt, pepper and butter on top. More than cover this with cold water, then put a granite plate on top, and place in oven for four or five hours, replenishing with hot water as it cooks down dry, as this will make a delicious and rich gravy to be served with the meat when cooked, poured over a hot shortcake or rich biscuit crust cut in squares and placed in a deep hot platter. Pour meat and gravy over this and serve hot. Some of the gravy can be reserved for the gravyboat if desired. There will be plenty of gravy if the meat is kept covered well with hot water while cooking.

Cheese Souffle—Two tablespoons butter, three tablespoons flour, three-fourths cup milk, one cup grated cheese, three eggs, one-half teaspoon salt, cayenne. Put butter into sauce pan; when hot add flour, sift until smooth; add milk and seasoning. Remove to back of stove, add well beaten yolks and cheese. Set to cool. When cold add whites of eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Turn into buttered dish, bake from twenty to twenty-five minutes. Serve the moment it comes from oven.

ROYALS AND ST. JOSEPH TEAMS READY TO CLASH

The Royal Giants and the St. Joseph's are carded to clash at either Parker Field or Hyde Oval tomorrow. This will be the first meeting between these two teams and each is confident of defeating the other. Dan Denny and Harry Moulton will form the Saints' battery, with either "Senor" Maiden or Hall and Joe Garner in the points for the colored boys.

The Royals have received a challenge from the Dikemans, a New York team, which recently was defeated by the Lincoln Giants. The game will take place in the metropolis if the proper arrangements can be made.

ROD AND REEL

The season for catching brown and brook trout and landlocked salmon in this State closed on July 15. The only fishing seasons now open are those to haul black bass, Oswego bass, white bass, calico bass, crappie and pike-perch. The season opened on June 15 and will close December 1. The pike and pickerel season, which opened on the 20th of May, will close on the 1st of December, while the crappie and pike-perch season, which opened June 15, will also close on that date.

Weakfish and fluke can be caught almost at will at the Midland Beach piers.

The vast amount of fresh water running into the bays and rivers is the cause of the erratic fishing, according to some of the baymen who would know something about it. They say that the fish will not feed in brackish water, and that sounds plausible. While there seems to be any number of weakfish about, the good catch of today is offset by a poor one tomorrow, and this is discouraging, as the unsuccessful party doesn't like to be told that he should have been there yesterday.

Owners of motorboats will do well to anchor close to the white buoy opposite Tottenville, in Raritan Bay, when they go fishing Sunday. The weakfish seem to be feeding there and the best catches of the past week have been made on these grounds. Boats from Morgan fish on these grounds, as they are close to Chesequake Creek.

Black bass, large and smallmouth trout, pickerel and perch are numerous at Lake Musconetcong, situated in a very picturesque section of New York State and reached by means of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad.

The "Friday Fishing Five" is out today and ought to register a record catch, the weather being made to order.

Chimney Rock, a few miles back of Bound Brook, is quite a fishing centre for local anglers and the fact that a Plainfielder recently caught an unusually large trout there has done much towards advertising the spot, which has been visited extensively since by fishermen from this city and vicinity.

LOCAL HUNTSMEN AWAIT OPENING OF GAME SEASON

Every year about this time hunters get out the old gun and give it the "once over," put it back and sit down to muse. It is not a long wait until the hunting season will be open, that is, for certain kinds of game. The season for taking various kinds of shore birds opens the first of September and closes on the fifteenth of December. During this time reed bird, bob-o-link or rice bird, rails, coots, gallinules, marsh hen or mud hen may be shot.

The popular hunting season will not open, of course, until November 10, when rabbit, quail, squirrel, only male English ring-neck pheasant, ruffled grouse, prairie chicken and Hungarian partridge can be shot. The woodcock hunting season opens October 10 and closes December 1, and that for catching waterfowl, except wood duck and swan, opens the first of November and closes February 1. The raccoon hunting season begins October 1 and closes December 15.

WESTFIELD MAN PLAYS.

High scores and strange upsets were prominent in yesterday's play in the Shawnee Country Club's annual golf tournament. Ninety actually qualified for the first set seventeen strokes above the local par. The low score was a triple tie at 79 between Warren and Clarke Cochran, brothers, of Baltimore, and Scott Scannell, of Trenton. M. Yamawaki, of Westfield, competed and registered a score of 103. Match play in the other sets will be continued today. The playoff of the tie for the low score gold medal will probably be run off Sunday.

WORD FOR THE "UMPS."

Chicago, July 23.—President Johnson, of the American League, when asked yesterday whether he had received the protest from President Comiskey, of the Chicago White Sox, in regard to the poor umpiring in the league, said he had no comment to make at this time. He said, however, that the American League officials needed no defense, and that their work this year had been entirely satisfactory.

LOCALS AT GARWOOD.

The Plainfield Juniors play the Garwood Y. M. C. seconds at Crescent Oval tomorrow, Butler and Cohen composing the local battery.

The "tariff-instinct" in people makes the "For Sale" ads interesting to them.

"MARTY" O'LOUGHLIN WILL TRY FOR "PRO" GOLF HONORS

Forty professionals and about as many amateurs are entered for the open golf tournament which is to be played over the links of the Shenecossett Country Club, at New London, Conn., today and tomorrow. The second day's event will consist of thirty-six holes of medal play, while for the opening there will be an amateur and professional best ball and driving, approaching and putting contests. The purse is one of the best offered this year in an open golf tourney.

WITH THE FUTURE GREATS

The work of Tommie Heron, the Hope outfielder, has not received the attention it merits. With the stick Tommie has done creditable work, while in the field his ability to get anything that comes his way shows up prominently.

"Art" Thorn will not be on hand tomorrow when his team battles with the Coughlin crew. "Art" has received an offer to attend to the assistant professional's duties at the Golf Club, and has decided to accept.

"Polly" Snyder has graduated, evidently, from the Parker Field League to the City Circuit. Although this ordinarily is quite a jump for a young fellow, "Pol" seems to be hanging on to his job, and, incidentally, grasping all that comes his way.

Phil Mills, the P. H. S. star, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is missed from the diamond this summer, and it is not likely that he will be able to don a uniform again until next year.

Billy O'Loughlin is now a member of the Tab team and performed with it last Saturday. He will be with it tomorrow when it meets the Saurer outfit.

Fans who frequent the City League contests have, with the possible exception of two games, been treated to some nifty exhibitions. Tomorrow's games are going to be the best yet, inasmuch as two of the "Big Trio" get together for the first time, fighting it out at Highland Park.

Haberman, who played one game with the Saurers and was injured shortly after the completion of the game, has not fully recovered from the injuries he received. He will not be able to grace the diamond again this season.

The tallest man in the league is "Dunk" Patterson and the smallest, "Kid" Brennan. Both are stars at their different positions and are popular among their fellows.

SHORTER COURSE FOR RACES.

Duluth, Minn., July 23.—The Northwestern Internationl regatta will be held today and tomorrow over a shortened course. The oarsmen will pull one and a quarter miles instead of one and a half, thus adopting the distance of the National Association. The Duluth and St. Paul crews will go to the national regatta at Springfield, Mass., it has been announced.

California Has Popular Coach.

Pittsburgh Signs 'Em All Up.

WILLARD'S TITLE SEEMS VERY SAFE

Indications Are Kansan's Crown Isn't In Immediate Danger.

CONTENDERS ARE POOR LOT

Judging by the Showing of the Challengers In Recent Battles, the Champion Heavyweight Will Hold on to His Honors For Years.

The heavyweight class still is suffering from a dearth of talent. Judging by the outcome of the Gunboat Smith-Charley Weinert bout and a few others between the challengers of Jess Willard, it will be some time before any of the contenders can be taken very seriously. Apparently championship matches in which the challenger has a reasonable chance are going to be just as scarce as when Jack Johnson was on top.

Although Weinert outpointed Smith without much difficulty, it cannot be said that he made a very favorable impression viewed as a contender for the title. The Newark (N. J.) youngster is clever enough at scoring technical points, but that is all. As yet he is altogether too immature for anything more serious than to demonstrate that his rivals are very weak in generalship.

Perhaps in time Weinert will develop a wallop, but that is very doubtful. He shows little signs of promise in that direction. Apparently he will never be more than a fancy boxer.

Right now Weinert probably could take the measure of Jim Coffey, but for all that the Irishman seems to be the most likely candidate for titular honors. In the long run Coffey is sure to wear better and go further. Although somewhat under a cloud at present owing to his failure to suppress the veteran Jim Flynn in a more convincing manner, Coffey has more real fighting ability than the Newark youngster. For one thing, Coffey is a two handed man, while Weinert depends altogether on his left. The Irishman uses every blow in the list without favoring any particular one. It is possible for him to change his style to fit the occasion. On the other hand, Weinert has one set form of attack. He gives the impression that when he meets an opponent with a good defense for a left hook he will find himself at the end of his resources.

The entry of Tom Cowler, Jim Corbett's man, among the list of challengers will be viewed with interest in the hope that the newcomer will add strength to the class. The newcomer met with great success in Australia, but that means little, as the Australian heavies are a notoriously poor lot. Cowler is very much of a novice as yet, and even if he should happen to be of the right material he will be sadly handicapped by his lack of experience. Therefore if Corbett really has any faith in the future of his protege he probably will be in no hurry to force him to the front.

If Al Reich can win a few bouts it will not be long before he is in line for another chance at Coffey. That is the New Yorker's one ambition just now, and as New York promoters are anxious to stage the bout he may obtain his wish in a few weeks.

Reports from France that Georges Carpentier, who still is safe and sound, hopes to pay America a visit if he survives the war would be highly interesting if there were an immediate prospect that hostilities would cease. There is little doubt that if Carpentier had remained in the ring he would be regarded as Willard's most dangerous rival at the present time. English boxing critics now assert that the young Frenchman could have taken Johnson's measure had he been given the match that fell to Frank Moran.

Whether Carpentier could do anything with the gigantic Willard in a championship battle over a distance is doubtful, but, judging by the showing he made against Joe Jeannette and allowing for the fact that his physique has filled out considerably, he would make things decidedly interesting for the Kansan in ten rounds. If such a match ever is made there is no doubt that it will break all attendance records in New York.

LAJOIE TEACHING MALONE.

Veteran Infielder Now Showing Youngster How to Play Second Base.

Larry Lajoie is showing his real manhood by devoting all his leisure time to teaching Ted Malone, the new second sacker of the Athletics, the intricacies of the second basing job.

Malone is a 1915 college graduate and looks like a comer. Lajoie is old and fading. Without Lajoie's aid it might be two or three years before Malone would develop into a real star. For just that length of time Lajoie would be pretty sure of his job as an Athletic regular.

But Lajoie doesn't think about himself. He is thinking about the man he is working for, Connie Mack, and he is trying to develop his successor as quickly as possible, not minding what will become of him after Malone pushes him out of his regular job.

With the league leaders contending with the hardest opposition they have met in three weeks, the runners-up battling with the reinforced Saurer clan, and the cellarites clamoring for a chance to annex their first win, at the expense of the Clinton Avenue team, the City League games tomorrow are bound to produce some unlooked-for changes in the standing of the teams. If the two first teams lose and the third place outfit wins, they, the Netherwoods, will be the league leaders. The Hopes, however, oppose Coughlin's boys, and have the right to say whether this circumstance shall become a fact or not. The Tabs do not expect to walk away with a victory at the expense of Martin's men, although they can see no reason why they should not run up as big a score as the East Enders did last Saturday.

Several changes have been made in the shopmen's line-up, and these should prove of great value in preventing a repetition of last week's disaster. The poor Baptist combination comes out with another declaration that they are going to win their first game tomorrow. With Patterson on the mound and the other eight men fielding accurately and hitting timely, they should make good their assertion, but they have some real stuff opposed to them. Benny Rosenson is to hurl for the Apgarites, and he has resolved to turn "them Baptists back." The Tab-Saurer battle will bring together Tone Denny and the pride of Giantville, John Gleason, while the Hope-Oriental clash will see Schott, the invincible, and Russ Stewart, the diminutive aspirant to twirling honors, as rival moundsmen.

Remember, fans and players, there is to be no "crabbing" of umpires for the rest of the season. The work of the "arbitrators" during last week's contests was of the highest sort, and few kicks were registered against their endeavors.

Wastes Enough Food to Feed a City of a Hundred Thousand People

Investigation on South Water Street, the great produce market of Chicago, has just revealed that enough fruit, vegetables, butter and eggs are wasted there each year, to feed a city the size of Dayton, Ohio; Albany, New York; and Nashville, Tennessee.

The photographs shown on this page were taken last week and they illustrate how the poor of Chicago forage in the swill barrels after the day's business is over.

The terrific waste has caused considerable thought on the part of the city authorities in Chicago, and plans are being made to move South Water Street to a place where the delay that causes spoilage can be eliminated. Today, strawberries, oranges, cabbage, lettuce, butter, eggs and other products are all delayed in getting to the congested produce district, which happens to be just four blocks from the busiest corner in the world.

Even South Water Street merchants realize their bad situation and are seeking a remedy.

OPEN CAMPAIGN FOR SCOUT CAMP

OWNER DONATES LAND

Funds Will Be Used to Purchase Necessities of the Camp—Commissioner Allen E. Beals Explains the Movement.

A two weeks' campaign opens on Monday for the collection of necessary funds with which to establish a permanent boy scout summer camp in the Netherwood-Fanwood section of the city. The total of $250 is needed for the bare necessities of the camp, the ground having been donated to the use of the Boy Scout movement by William W. Coriell on Terrill road, the working plans having been drawn by Edward V. French, the architect; the material being supplied by John D. Loizeaux; the work of construction being done by the boy scouts under the guidance of a mechanical engineer who has also volunteered his services. The farmers living in the vicinity of the camp have contributed $41, and Brockholst K. Miller, the lawyer, has contributed $1 toward the fund. The philanthropic people of Plainfield are asked to contribute to make the camp as complete as possible.

The initiative work in this matter has been taken by Cedric Ostrom, of 136 Crescent avenue, scoutmaster of Troop 15, in the Netherwood Reformed church, and himself one of the original scouts in this country. Assistant Scoutmaster W. A. W. Thomson, another of the original boy scouts, has volunteered to give his services free as camp master for the remainder of the summer.

Commissioner Beals made this statement regarding the needs of the summer camp this morning as follows:

"The boy scout movement in Plainfield has grown so great that it is no longer practicable to take all the troops out for camp practice in a body. The only alternative is to establish a summer camp for all the troops in the city. The matter was contemplated for action next summer, but is has been found that the people living in outlying sections of the city in the Terrill road-Netherwood district wanted a troop so badly for their sons that, in the absence of a meeting place, they volunteered to supply one and after providing the necessary site, contributed $41 for the purpose. In order to give the camp an all year around feature Scoutmaster Ostrom suggested the immediate establishment of a summer camp for the purpose of giving every troop in the city immediate instruction in the out of doors features of scoutcraft that cannot be given adequately now because there is no place for the boys to have their overnight hikes.

"Camp life is essential to the scout who wishes to advance. There are many out of doors tests that have to be satisfactorily made before the boy can be promoted. This involves lessons in cooking, personal health, surveying, map making, sanitation, etc. Heretofore the entire scout movement has been carried on by dues of five cents a week, paid by boys, intermittent contributions made by generous Plainfielders interested in special troops, and a dollar a year levied upon all the men serving in the Scout Council, amounting to $31 a year. This latter fund takes care of all the executive expenses.

"The financing of this camp is too much of a load for small boys to handle from their earnings and so a committee consisting of Commissioner Allen E. Beals, First Deputy Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., Second Deputy Commissioner E. A. Sprowl, Third Deputy Commissioner F. E. Bach and Scoutmaster Cedric Ostrom, in charge of the Netherwood district have been appointed to solicit funds for this purpose.

"New Brunswick, which was organized last spring by the Plainfield commissioner, has a boy scout camp of considerable size and they have raised $2,000 to maintain it. It has been highly organized and is partly supporting. Our boys need the same advantages. Checks may be made payable to Commissioner Allen E. Beals, 634 East Second street, Plainfield."

Contributions made so far are:

Terrill Road Neighborhood	$41.00
Brockholst K. Miller	1.00

TROUBLE DEVELOPES OVER ENGINE BIDS

Council May Have to Readvertise for Proposals for New Fire Apparatus.

Owing to the fact that several of the bidders neglected to fulfill the requirements of the specifications in making proposals to furnish the city with a new automobile combination hose and chemical engine it now seems probable that the Common Council will have to readvertise for bids. Such was the opinion of the members of the councilmanic fire and buildings committee following a meeting last night, but as yet no action has been taken in this direction. If it is possible to solve the question without involving the added expense of readvertising the committee intends to do so and for that reason definite action was deferred until a later meeting.

Three of the concerns making bids for the contract neglected to state a figure for the old horse drawn hose wagon; it being provided in the specifications that this piece of apparatus be taken as part payment for the new engine. Those proposals failing to consider this item, therefore, will have to be eliminiated from consideration.

Other proposals omitted minor items specified and several were so complicated that the committee will have to confer with the concerns before passing on them. Summarized, last night's meeting was productive of nothing but discussion and it is likely that the members will meet again next week.

REV. J. Y. BROEK SPEAKER AT FRESH AIR SERVICE

The services at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home tomorrow afternoon will be of special interest. The speaker, Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, is a great favorite with the little people and his talks are always greatly enjoyed by the mothers and children. The repeating from memory of the many Scripture verses which have been taught the children, and the singing of sweet songs by a well-trained choir of girls, always proves an interesting feature of these services.

The Home is filled to its utmost capacity with mothers and children from the city, many have been brought out in a sickly condition and even during their short stay at the Home, many have shown a great improvement. A visit to the Home at any time will convince the most skeptical of the great good that is being done in our midst to build up these young people morally, mentally and physically. This service begins at 3:45, and the services on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evening at 7:45. The public is welcome to attend all these services.

FELLOWSHIP PILGRIMAGE.

The Joint Fellowship Circle, of New York and vicinity, will hold interesting meetings tomorrow, at the Friends' Meeting House on Watchung avenue. Meeting for worship at 11 a. m., and afternoon conference at 2:15 p. m.; subject, "Not By Might Nor By Power, But By My Spirit." A cordial invitation is extended to all interested.

FIRST PASTOR TO PREACH.

Rev. William Manchee, of Passaic, the first pastor of the Congregational church of this city, from December, 1879, to December, 1883, will preach at the local church at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. He will doubtless be heard by a large congregation.

SUBJECT TO BE "OPTIMISM."

"Optimism" will be the subject of Rev. J. Y. Broek's sermon at Trinity Reformed church tomorrow morning. There will be a union service in this church in the evening, and Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, will preach.

DR. RANDOLPH'S THEMES.

"The Rock of Our Salvation" will be the subject of Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph's sermon at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church tomorrow morning and in the evening at 7:15 o'clock he will preach on the subject, "The Summer Drift."

MISS MILLER TO SING.

Miss Hope Irene Miller, a former contralto of Trinity Reformed church choir, will substitute for Mrs. Charles Kendall Mason, the quartet contralto, tomorrow.

ONLY TWO PROPOSALS

Park Club Asks Exemption From Sewer Assessments Because the Ground is Low—Alfred Calloway Given $150 for Sewer Rights.

Very little business outside the opening of bids to construct a sewer in Summit avenue and awarding the contract was transacted at the adjourned meeting of the North Plainfield Common Council last night. Only two bids were received, the Wilson Cement Stone Company and Alfred DeNise. The latter bidder was low man and was awarded the contract before the meeting adjourned.

The bid of the Wilson Cement Stone Company totaled $2,280.75, while that of DeNise was only $1,388 for the same work. The sewer in Summit avenue for which the bids were received will be laid between Watchung avenue and Somerset street.

Councilman Cowperthwaite, Stahl and Milne were present. Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., presided. Mayor Clark appointed Councilmen Stahl and Milne a committee to open the bids and a recess of five minutes was taken while the committee considered them. Each bid was accompanied by a certified check for $100, as required by the specifications. A contract between the Common Council and DeNise will be executed in a few days.

A communication from Charles A. Reed, representing the board of governors of the Park Club, stated to the Common Council that because the land of the club is so low only a small part of the club property would derive any benefit from the sewer, and petitioned that the club be exempted from any assessment except a small one to be levied against that part of the club's property at the northern end, which is high. The communication was referred to the sewer committee.

The Council also voted to ratify the action of the Mayor in paying over to Alfred Calloway the sum of $150 for a sewer right of way through the latter's property.

LEON JAFFESS BUYS LOCAL RUBBER PLANT

New Enterprise Will Employ Plainfield Mechanics to Make Auto Tires.

When the building formerly occupied by the now defunct Century Rubber Company on North avenue is opened for business Monday morning at least fifty Plainfield mechanics will be given employment in what promises to be an enterprising factory. Leon Jaffess, one of the best known manufacturers of automobile tires in the United States, has purchased the site and preparations have been completed for beginning work at once. While the number of mechanics to be used at the start will be only fifty the concern is planning to take on many more than the original gang as business increases. Mechanics have been engaged for several days in overhauling the old machinery and installing new features and the plant will be a modern one in every respect.

One of the features of the industry to be developed in this city will be the appliance of Mr. Jaffess' own ideas in reclaiming old tires and making new ones. The sales room for the concern will be located in the North avenue building and branch quarters are already established in Harrison, N. J.; Detroit, Mich.; Cleveland, O., and New York city.

It is proposed by Mr. Jaffess to sell tires at wholesale prices to Plainfield's retail trade, at figures quoted in an advertisement in another column and he will also make large shipments of products to other cities.

Daniel M. Henry, who for five years was with the Century Rubber Company, will be superintendent of the new factory; Phillip Kenhlthau will be tube foreman, and William Marsh is chief engineer. The concern is at present making efforts to secure a railroad siding from the Central Railroad.

Chalmers.

When you buy an automobile, buy one with a name on it that is of value to you. Chalmers means satisfactory service, comfortable riding, definable depreciation, distinctive style and forceful power—all for $1,275, plus $40 freight. Stryker's Garage, next to station.—Adv. 7 21 3-s ***

NEW NOTE IS NOT DISPLEASING

Official Washington Thinks That Document Made Public Today is Satisfaction.

STING IN THE WARNING

Wilson Tells Germans That Any Further Attack on American Boats Will Be Considered Unfriendly Act.

Washington, July 24—It is the belief here that President Wilson's note, made public today, is highly satisfactory to Germany. It is plainly intimated by diplomats in Washington that, barring another unwarranted submarine attack, there will be no further acute friction between the two countries.

Instead of a crisis precipated, the note promises to smooth the way for adjustments on Germany's part which will save her face and at the same time permit continuance of submarine warfare against England under modified but still effective rules.

Without open confession or official change of policy, Germany in the future is expected to take great care not to attack any American ships or to sink unarmed merchant vessels of any nationality without first halting them

JAIL SENTENCES FOR CONNORS' ASSOCIATES

Judge Connolly in Passing Sentence Scores Practise of "Mixing" Prisoners.

Elizabeth, July 24—The system in the county jail of compelling first offenders to associate with hardened criminals was condemned in strong terms yesterday before Judge Connolly in the Court of Common Pleas, by John J. Connolly, a lawyer. The condemnation took place immediately before two of the lawyer's clients were sentenced to six and three months respectively, the shore sentences imposed being very probably due to the attorney's argument.

The men sentenced were Hugh Kelly, nineteen years, of 135 Second street, who got the six months, and Howard Good, nineteen years, of 22 Erie street. These men had been found guilty of aiding in the attempted escape of Charles "Ice Wagon" Connors, who is now at Trenton for robbing the home of former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield, of $17,500 in jewelry.

Kelly and Good had been consigned to the county jail on charges of disorderly conduct. Here they met Connors, who was there awaiting trial for the robbery. Connors persuaded the two to help him escape and preparations were made by the three for Connors' getaway. The plot, however, was discovered in the nick of time, and Kelly and Good held on charges.

LITTLE WORK FOR PAINTERS.

Local painters complain of lack of work this summer, at a time when they ought to be busiest. The matter was discussed at the meeting of the Building Trades Council last night, when it was stated that many members of the Painters' Local Union are idle. The men are hoping that the construction work in the city now going on or contemplated in the near future will furnish enough work for the painters to keep them busy until cold weather sets in.

TROOP D LEAVES FOR MT. GRETNA

Local Cavalrymen in Charge of Lieut. Runkle to Spend Week in Camp.

DRILL WITH REGULARS

First Experience for Plainfield Men Will Be a Severe Test of Ability—Entire First Squadron to Report for Manouevres.

The second platoon of Troop D, First Squadron Cavalry of the New Jersey National Guard, which is composed of Plainfield men and commanded by Second Lieutenant Daniel Runkle entrained this morning at 9:30 for the military camp at Mt. Gutra, Pa. The other platoon of the troop, whose headquarters is Hoboken, was already on the train.

The Plainfield platoon was organized less than four months ago, and will therefore form the newest and least experienced organization in a camp largely composed of regulars. In all there are to be twenty-one troops of cavalry in the camp, including the entire first squadron of New Jersey and some Pennsylvania organizations, all cavalry. Drilling and manoeuvring will begin on Sunday morning and will wind up next Friday with a manoevre involving every organization present. On Saturday the first cavalry will break camp and entrain for home.

As this is the first experience in camp for the Plainfield men it is looked upon as a severe test of ability and spirit, especially as the pace will be set by regulars anxious to search out the weak spots of the amateur soldiers. In fact it was not expected that so green an organization would be called upon and a number of men were therefore unprepared to go. Those who have gone are Corporal Andrews, James Fleming, William B. Tyler, Joseph VanDeventer, Clinton Ivins, Percy Ransome, Ogden Rogers, Edward W. Jeffcott, Maxwell Perkins, Corporal Sherman Joost, William Anderson, John Hall, Clemen Hedman, Walter L. Righter, James B. Brewster, Donald A. McGee, Mellick Tweedy, John Van Deventer, Quartermaster Sargeant J. M. Charles, First Sargeant Brown Rolston and Second Lieutenant Daniel Runkle.

OTHER MERCHANTS TO CLOSE IN AUGUST

Butchers and Grocers Announce That They Will Observe Thursday Holiday.

Through an oversight of those in charge of the matter, yesterday's announcement of the forty local merchants who have decided to close all day Thursday during the month of August did not include the butchers and grocers. Twenty-seven such concerns have also agreed to make Thursdays in August a holiday, giving their employes as well as the proprietors a full day off. This makes sixty-seven of the local merchants who have adopted the August schedule.

As stated yesterday there are a few of the merchants who as in past years close their places of business at noon on Saturday during July and August. The butchers and grocers who have adopted the Thursday schedule are as follows:

E. & W. Schloss, Fred H. Firstbrook, J. L. Bennett, J. A. Smith & Bro., Jacob C. Blimm, Alfred A. Keenan, R. H. Keenan, William J. Firstbrook, Sylvester Sharkey, James T. McCarty, George A. Scheelen, S. J. Carhart, M. R. Giles, H. L. Viebrock, Shipkin (Endress Co.), Roth & Co., H. J. Pasch, W. L. Smalley, David C. Coon, Frank Neidig, Jas. K. Arnold, W. E. Lane, F. M. Lunger, Clifford L. Applegate, F. B. Pierson, Frank L. Scherier, Thos. Callahan & Son.

HOLOCAUST CAUSED BY CROWDING ON THE RAIL

Over 500 Trapped Inside Vessel, Many of Them Women and Children, and no Definite Estimate Can Be Made of Loss of Life Until Interior is Searched—Party Was Starting on Day's Outing to Michigan City.

Chicago, July 24.—The Steamer Eastland capsized in the Chicago River today. There were more than 2,000 persons on board. The police estimated the number of dead from 400 to 800. It will be impossible to place the total loss of life exactly until the interior of the vessel is searched. Many of the victims were trapped in the wreck of the vessel.

At 9:45 o'clock sixty-four bodies had been recovered from the submerged cabins and lower decks of the Eastland. It seemed probable at that hour that the death list would reach 500.

The accident to the Eastland was caused by the boat becoming overcrowded on one side, causing it to turn over. The Eastland was more than 300 feet long and was owned by the Chicago and St. Joseph Transportation Company. The accident happened at 7:40 a. m.

The Eastland had three upper decks which were crowded. A special emergency police call was at once sent out and many injured were taken to hospitals.

The boat was crowded with employes of the Western Electric Company, bound for a picnic at Michigan City, Indiana. There were fifteen boat loads of the picnickers, all in holiday attire, crowding the steamer docks and the Eastland was just swinging away from its dock at Clark and Wells streets, into the river and starting for Lake Michigan.

Suddenly and with no warning the big steamer careened toward the north side of the river. Hundreds of women and children were on the boat when she started to go over. Those who were on deck were toppled into the river with no time to reach for life belts. Of the passengers on board there were fully 500 below who did not have a chance to escape.

The police had a terrific struggle with relatives of the victims of the disaster who surged round about the narrow landing frantic to reach the capsized boat. The policemen beat the crazed mob back with clubs. Every police and hospital ambulance was rushed to the Clark street bridge.

GERMANS EXPECT BIG OFFENSIVE BY ALLIES

Preparing to Meet it and Launch Counter Attack on West Front.

Amsterdam, July 24.—The Germans expect a big offensive move to be launched by the French and British on the west front, and are massing troops to meet it and to put into effect a counter attack, according to private advices from Muenster. Large numbers of the supplementary troops which have been stationed and training in the garrisons in the Rhine province have lately been hurried to the front.

Paris, July 24.—The French War Office gave out the following official statement this afternoon:

"The night was calm on the entire front excepting in the Vosges Mountains, where the enemy has made several attacks at the Reichs Askerkopf Mountain, and on the heights to the east of Metzeral. The Germans have been repulsed everywhere."

London, July 24.—A despatch from Copenhagen states that the National Tidende learns that a new social Democratic party is being formed in Germany by the noted Social Democratic leader, Liebknecht, and that it will be anti-war in its policy. The paper states that numerous leaders of the old Social Democratic party are joining the new organization.

Aberdeen, July 24—The British trawler Star of Peace, has been sunk in the North Sea by a German submarine. The crew was landed today at Stromness.

NETHERWOOD HOTEL WILL OPEN JULY 31

Gang of Workmen Making the Lawn Attractive and Decorating the Interior.

Progress made by the large gang of workmen in charge of the reconstruction work and renovating of the Netherwood Hotel indicates that the big hostelry will be reopened for business not later than July 31. This date is far in advance of the time originally set for the opening, it being at first thought that the preliminary work would consume two months. Many additional workmen have been secured, however, and everything is being rushed.

One of the features of the preliminary work is the activity of twelve men under the personal supervision of Charles L. Stanley, the loral florist. The immense lawn surrounding the building has been rebedded and made attractive for the opening date. The large hedges and flower beds have been trimmed and laid out and the surroundings of the hostelry give promise of being one of its most pleasing attractions.

Considerable renovating has had to be done in the interior and the condition of the rooms and various departments when the new owner took it over called for a great deal of overhauling. Adolph Ruehl, the new proprietor, has been on the scene daily and intends to spare no expense in putting it in first class shape.

"JONAH AND THE WHALE."

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, will preach at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning on "Jonah and the Whale." The congregation will join in the union service at Trinity Reformed church in the evening.

ALVAH GRAY BUILDS AN ADDITION TO PROPERTY

Alvah Gray, president of the local bank, is erecting a small one story addition to the Washington avenue side of his property on North avenue. It will be 20 feet in length and nearly 5 feet in width. It is being built of hollow tile which will be finished over with stucco. In addition it will have a concrete floor which will make it absolutely fireproof. The contractors are Charles Wrage and Firman H. Gise.

While it cannot be confirmed it is believed that the addition is being erected especially for George Cohan, the local newspaper dealer, whose stand is located at present in the Pennock pharmacy.

CHURCH FESTIVAL AND CONCERT GREAT SUCCESS

Fully five hundred people were present on the grounds of Holy Innocents' Episcopal church last evening, enjoying the continuation of the open air concert and ice cream festival under the auspices of the Dutch Arms Band and the church. All of the ice cream was sold. Mr. Hicks-Barrow was chairman of the general committee to plan the affair and then worked untiringly for its success. At least $150 was cleared.

The spacious grounds of the quaint little church, so snugly located among its grove of trees, proved an ideal place for just such an affair, and the attractiveness of this setting was added to by the hard work of the committee on decorations and the silver-like glow of a full moon.

The grounds were lighted by strings of electric lights and numerous Japanese lanterns, which decorated the various booths and ice cream tables. Each of these tables and booths had its individual color scheme. One booth was decorated with purple and white, another in pink and waite, etc. The band stand was decorated with red, white and blue bunting. As for the music furnished by the Dutch Arms Band suffice it to say that that organization sustained its past reputation.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Today our feature will be "The Sands of Time," a Selig production released on the V. L. S. E. program, and will be shown for the first time in Plainfield at this theatre. We also offer the twelfth episode of "The Goddess" and a great Keystone comedy entitled "When Ambrose Dared Walrus."

Continuing its policy, so amply established in the past, of presenting only the more noted dramatic and literary successes in photo productions of the day, the U. S. Astor Theatre will show for two days, beginning Monday, "The Rosary," the stupendous film work by the Selig company, adapted from the famous drama of that name by Edward E. Rose. The production is beyond question one of the biggest ever exhibited in this city and on Monday and Tuesday night the Astor deserves the patronage of every theatregoer of discriminating taste in town. Produced at a great cost this magnificent photo-drama possesses all the color and exactitude of environment necessary to a convincing exposition of the thrilling story. This is one of the most intensely dramatic stories ever produced Kathlyn Williams, the famous Selig star, has put all her genius into the play with the result that it is unsurpassed in the portrayal of the tense emotions called for in the production. Miss Williams' beauty is of the type that photographs with exceptional excellence and she entered into the spirit of producing the photoplay with an unbounded enthusiasm. She is supported by a notable cast.

The Rev. John Y. Broek will be the speaker at the public service tomorrow afternoon at 3:45 o'clock at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. There will be music by the children's choid.

ANNOUNCING THE WANAMAKER AUGUST SALE OF FURNITURE

First Day of Courtesy, Tuesday, July 27

—YOUR HOME

What is the condition of your home today? Its physical condition. Are you letting it run down at the heel because the other half of the world is at war? Are you putting on blue goggles so that you won't see the worn out dingy furniture, the rug that needs replacing, the curtains that need renewal? Are you excusing your action by saying this is not the time to spend money? Well, now, you are doing just the wrong thing.

Your Home Is Your Life

If it isn't your life, Mr. Man, it is your wife's life. That's sure. And the children's life. Everything they hold dear is centered in your home. You are in your office a third of the twenty-four hour day, another third you are asleep. But the Little Mother and her children are at home all the time. They see when things run down. They see the dingy chair. And little by little they run down themselves.

This IS the Time to Spend Money

It is the time to spend money on our homes. It is the time of all times to make our homes cheerful. It is the time not to hoard money, but to put it in circulation.

Our country is naturally prosperous. Crops are good. Money is plentiful and to be had at low rate of interest. What is needed is CONFIDENCE—confidence in ourselves, confidence in each other, confidence in the country. A little optimistic cheerfulness, a willingness to help one another, the putting of some of the hoarded money into motion that it may start up the stagnant mills and give people work and wages—that's what the United States needs.

We Begin Ourselves

In fact, we have never stopped—we have never let our home—the Store—run down; have we, now?

We have bought freely. We have kept up stocks, varieties, gone ahead with improvements—never for a moment stopping or curtailing our service. We have kept up to the top notch all branches of the Store's merchandise and service. And, as a reward, our business is going ahead.

In Furniture

—for the August Sale now ready to open—we have prepared as largely as in other years. No "blues" here. No lack of faith. No lack of merchandise. No surrender to conditions. Nothing but confidence—in the people, in ourselves, in our merchandise, in the times.

Put confidence in YOUR homes. Put cheerfulness there. Put faith there. Put there a new piece of furniture, a new rug, or some improvement to show to your family and to your neighbors that we are moving quickly into better times. Don't let your homes get into the condition of some railroads—so run down that they may never "catch up" again. Once run down, anything costs twice as much as it should to build up. But kept always in good condition, things are kept efficient at the least expense—a railroad, a piece of machinery, a store—or YOUR HOME.

This Little Talk (Above) is to Advertise

The Wanamaker August Sale of Furniture

(ORIGINAL)

A queer advertisement you say.

Practically nothing about the Store or the Sale; merely a talk on keeping up our homes.

But is it a queer advertisement? We know that most people will buy in the Wanamaker August Sale if they make up their minds to buy furniture at all this summer, so we try to show them that they should buy NOW.

Our belief that furniture will be bought now at Wanamaker's, if anywhere, is founded on these facts:

—here are the largest stocks.
—here is the most variety.
—here are the best values.
—here are the lowest prices, quality considered.
—here is the best furniture service.
—here is the original August Sale of Furniture, the trade movement instituted by the Wanamaker Store many years ago; and people like the original, the real, the genuine, and not a copy.

Tuesday, July 27
"First Day of Courtesy"

All the furniture will be on view Tuesday, tagged with August prices, and forehanded selections may then be made, transactions to date as of August.

The Sale includes our entire regular stock of furniture, together with large special purchases, the grand total reaching close to a million dollars' worth in this one store alone.

Furniture at half price—one purchase alone at half price amounts to $80,000.

Furniture a third under regular prices.

No reduction less than 10 per cent. (and this only on staples). Average reduction—from the already low Wanamaker prices—25 per cent.

Furniture for every room in the House. Furniture of all grades—super-fine, fine, medium, good—down to the lowest price it is safe to pay.

And all guaranteed with the Wanamaker guaranty that insures satisfaction as long as you live with the furniture.

Free Delivery Out of Town

The Wanamaker Free Delivery Service by freight takes care of most furniture where a reasonable amount is purchased up to and including the third zone—for instance: 300 miles from New York freight is prepaid on every 100 pounds of furniture for which the customer has paid $10.

BELIEVE NEW NOTE PLEASES

This is asserted to be the unofficial practice of Germany at present. It is in keeping with the statement recently made by Coun von Bernstorff, when he called attention to the fact that no American ships had been sunk nor American lives lost in the war zone since this Government served warning after the Lusitania disaster.

While refraining from comment, the German ambassador today was plainly in much easier frame of mind. He had been very anxious lest the note might precipitate a break in diplomatic relations.

The only unpalatable part is the closing paragraph, which gives warning that there must be no repitition of the Lusitania disaster, no future torpedoing of American ships or violation of neutral rights.

"Repitition by commanders of German naval vessels of acts in contravention of those rights" are the note's final words, "must be regarded by the Government of the United States when they affect American citizens as deliberately unfriendly."

The note follows:

"The Secretary of State to Ambassador Gerard:

"Department of State,

"Washington, D. C., July 21, 1915.

"You are instructed to deliver textually the following note to the Minister for Foreign Affairs:

"The note of the imperial German government dated the 8th of July, 1915, has received the careful consideration of the government of the United States, and it regrets to be obliged to say that it has found it very unsatisfactory, because it fails to meet the real differences between the two governments and indicates no way in which the accepted principles of law and humanity may be applied in the grave matter in controversy, but proposes, on the contrary, arrangements for a partial suspension of those principles which virtually set them aside.

"The government of the United States notes with satisfaction that the imperial German government recognizes without reservation the validity of the principles insisted on in the several communications which this government has addressed to the imperial German government with regard to its announcement of a war zone and the use of submarines against merchantmen on the high seas—the principle that the high seas are free, that the character and cargo of a merchantman must first be ascertained before she can lawfully be seized or destroyed; and that the lives of non-combatants may in no case be put in jeopardy unless the vessel resists or seeks to escape after being summoned to submit to examination, for a belligerent act of retaliation is per se an act beyond the law, and the defence of an act as retaliatory is an admission that it is illegal.

"The government of the United States is, however, keenly disappointed to find that the imperial German government regards itself as in large degree exempt from the obligation to observe these principles, even where neutral vessels are concerned, by what it believes the policy and practice of the government of Great Britain to be in the present war with regard to neutral commerce. The imperial German government will readily understand that the government of the United States cannot discuss the policy of the government of Great Britain with regard to neutral trade except with that government itself and that it must regard the conduct of other belligerent governments as irrelevant to any discussion with the imperial German government of what this government regards as grave and unjustifiable violations of the rights of American citizens by German naval commanders.

"Illegal and inhuman acts, however justifiable they may be thought to be against an enemy who is believed to have acted in contravention of law and humanity, are manifestly indefensible when they deprive neutrals of their acknowledged rights, particularly when they violate the right of life itself.

"If a belligerent cannot retaliate against an enemy without injuring the lives of neutrals, as well as their property, humanity, as well as justice and a due regard for the dignity of neutral Powers, should dictate that the practice be discontinued. If persisted in it would in such circumstances constitute an unpardonable offence against the sovereignty of the neutral nation affected. The government of the United States is not unmindful of the extraordinary conditions created by this war or of the radical alterations of circumstance and method of attack produced by the use of instrumentalities of naval warfare which the nations of the world cannot have had in view when the existing rules of international law were formulated, and it is ready to make every reasonable allowance for these novel and unexpected aspects of war at sea, but it cannot consent to abate any essential or fundamental right of its people because of a mere alteration of circumstance. The rights of neutrals in time of war are based upon principle, not upon expediency, and the principles are immutable. It is the duty and obligation of belligerents to find a way to adapt the new circumstances to them.

"The events of the last two months have clearly indicated that it is possible and practicable to conduct such submarine operations as have characterized the activity of the imperial German navy within the so-called war zone in substantial accord with the accepted practices of regulated warfare. The whole world has looked with interest and increasing satisfaction at the demonstration of that possibility by German naval commanders. It is manifestly possible, therefore, to lift the whole practice of submarine attack above the criticism which it has aroused and remove the chief causes of offence.

"In view of the admission of illegality made by the imperial government when it pleaded the right of retaliation in defence of its acts, and in view of the manifest possibility of conforming to the established rules of naval warfare, the government of the United States cannot believe that the imperial government will longer refrain from disavowing the wanton act of its naval commander in sinking the Lusitania or from offering reparation for the American lives lost, so far as reparation can be made for a needless destruction of human life by an illegal act.

"The government of the United States, while not indifferent to the friendly spirit in which it is made, cannot accept the suggestion of the imperial German government that certain vessels be designated and agreed upon which shall be free on the seas now illegally proscribed. The very agreement would, by implication, subject other vessels to illegal attack and would be a curtailment, and therefore an abandonment, of the principles for which this government contends and which in times of calmer counsels every nation would concede as of course.

"The government of the United States and the imperial German government are contending for the same great object, have long stood together in urging the very principles upon which the government of the United States now so solemnly insists. They are both contending for the freedom of the seas. The government of the United States will continue to contend for that freedom, from whatever quarter violated, without compromise and at any cost. It invites the practical co-operation of the imperial German government at this time when co-operation may accomplish most and this great common object be most strikingly and effectively achieved.

"The imperial German government expresses the hope that this object may be in some measure accomplished even before the present war ends. It can be. The government of the United States not only feels obliged to insist upon it, by whomsoever violated or ignored, in the protection of its own citizens, but is also deeply interested in seeing it made practicable between the belligerents themselves, and holds itself ready at any time to act as the common friend who may be privileged to suggest a way.

"In the meantime the very value which this government sets upon the long and unbroken friendship between the people and government of the United States and the people and government of the German nation impels it to press very solemnly upon the imperial German government the necessity for a scrupulous observance of neutral rights in this critical matter. Friendship itself prompts it to say to the imperial government that repetition by the commanders of German naval vessels of acts in contravention of those rights must be regarded by the government of the United States, when they affect American citizens, as deliberately unfriendly.

RECREATION NOTES

Dancing will be the feature attraction at the Washington School tonight. Lemonade will be served. The small admission fee which is charged supports the project, which receives aid from no other source. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance and that those living in the immediate neighborhood will take an interest in the affairs and come to them often.

The Dramatic Club met in the kindergarten at the Washington School last night, while the colored people held their regular social time in the auditorium.

SIEZE GUNS IN BAYONNE STRIKE

Detectives Raid Hall and Find Rifles, Bayonets and Ammunition.

NO MILITIA AID YET

Governor Thinks That All Necessary Vigilance Has Not Been Exercised By City and County Authorities and Withholds Order for Troops.

Detectives under the leadership of Lieut. John Rigney raided the Bayonne strikers' headquarters in Mydosh's Hall, early today and found fifty new Springfield rifles and thirty-five sword bayonets.

Several boxes of cartridges, how many the police will not say, were found with the guns and bayonets. As soon as the rifles had been carried away a search was begun for a large quantity of ammunition the police have been informed was bought yesterday in Jersey City.

At 1 o'clock all the strikers had dis appeared from the vicinity of the hall, although it was reported many were lying on their stomachs in the marshes waiting for signs of life about the plants.

The detectives entered the hall, made a quick search and found the rifles in a locker. The arms and bayonets were piled into an automobile and carried to the county jail in Jersey City.

No arrests were made at the time, but an hour later Stanley Berokóski, 20, and Ludwig Welichenski, 27, were caught in the act, the police say, of laying large iron gas pipes across a spur of the Lehigh over which cars are run to the Tide Water plant. The men, the police say, work for a company whose employes are not on strike. They are charged with malicious mischief.

There did not seem much likelihood today of State troops being called out to hold in check the 8,000 or 9,000 strikers, although Sheriff Kinkead renewed his request for such aid last night. There was less disorder yesterday and last night than on the preceding day, and the seizure of the rifles early this morning is expected to discourage the agitators.

Governor Fielder has refused twice to send soldiers. He does not believe the municipal authorities have used due diligence in keeping down trouble.

Trouble is feared at the funeral this afternoon of Sterancsak, one of the three strikers killed. A promise has been made to keep it private, but there is nothing to prevent crowds from congregating in the vicinity.

The oil companies today had about 500 guards inside their plants. The Bayonne police force numbers seventy-six men, but only about forty are on duty at one time. The sheriff wants 100 more uniformed men to patrol the strike district and help his 300 deputies.

For two hours the sheriff yesterday faced a mob that seemed every moment to be on the verge of breaking beyond all control. Several times he and Under Sheriff James H. Clark were struck with stones, and while no blood was shed by the firing the situation really seemed the tensest of the strike.

Not an arrest was made as a result of this disorder either by the police or the deputy sheriffs whom Kinkead had sworn in "to protect life and property," as the cards read which they wear in their hats. Yet the sheriff served notice that any man, whether striker or guard, who fired a shot would have to account for it.

CITIZENS ADVISED AGAINST SELLERS OF HEALTH BOOKS

Health Officer Randolph Chandler, of the local department, last night issued a general warning to Plainfielders to be on the lookout for several book agents who, it is alleged, are operating here at the present time, purporting to be selling books with an endorsement of the Board of Health. Chandler wants it distinctly understood that the agents have no affiliations with the health department, although he does not know whether or not their campaign is a bona fide one.

According to information that he has received these agents have been giving the names of Dr. Howard Baker and Dr. Carl Alfred Helguson as references. In other cities the health officers are said to be having similar trouble. In one place an agent called upon a woman whose child was ill with the measles. Representing herself as an officer of the Department of Health the agent offered to sell the woman a book for $1 that told how to cure the ailment. The money was paid and the book received by this woman as has been the case in numerous other incidents.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JULY 24, 1915.

On Saturdays the editorial columns of the Daily Press are conducted by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is United States Senator James E. Martine, who continues his narrative about his recent trip to the Hawaiian Islands. A third article on the same subject will appear in the Daily Press of Saturday, August 7.

OUR ISLAND POSSESSIONS.

In my last letter I left you on the busy wharf of Honolulu. Still the words of the hearty Hawaiian welcome ring in our ears; it is not the word "welcome," but the Hawaiian word "Aloha," which in the native language means both greetings and farewell. Our luggage is quickly checked and passed and we press on to the busy commercial street of Honolulu. Here we are confronted with street cars through the city, but no! no street cars for our distinguished party! The citizens, both gentlemen and ladies, of that paradise of a city had provided a better means of transportation. Splendid automobiles were there to carry us to our hotels. It was a great surprise to find scores of very much up-to-date autos crowding the street "What," said we, "poossible 2,600 miles in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, autos in the Sandwich Islands we used to read about in our school days." Yes, truly I believe there are more real good machines in those islands per capita than in Plainfield. But at last we are off to the hotels assigned us.

We sped along over fine streets a portion of our party stopping at the "Alex Young Hotel," located right in the business part of the city. This is built of stone, taking up a whole block, and would be a credit to any city in our land. Fine stores occupy the first floor and the hotel office, a superb roof garden covers the roof, luxurious tropical growth making it a veritable bower. What a splendid view of Honolulu bay we get! A delicious "menu" is presented, and oh! what an ideal place to dine.

A part of the party stop here. But we go rushing on over smooth asphalt streets, past lovely homes, most of which are of low one story construction, fairly bowered in bloom and luxuriant foliage; the air heavy with fragrance. At last in the outskirts of the city we come to our hotel "The Moana," right on the wonderful blue Pacific Ocean. The building is very pretentious and artistic. As we enter the wide front portal, we are surprised to find practically the whole rear of the building opening on the sea, a glorious sight to behold.

We are shown to our rooms, all nicely fitted and furnished. In a little while we are ready for dinner. We ask for the dining room and are shown a large annex, open on all sides, all screened and fairly hanging over the blue ocean. Ye gods! what a place for a party of hungry Jerseymen to dine. The menu furnished was equal to the best in the country.

But now as to the country and climate. The climate to me is ideal, no frost nor snow, bloom all the year. Though warm in the sun, the nights are cool and most always a good ocean breeze previals. The rainy seasons are during the months of May and November; during the other portions of the year sprinkling and irrigation is resorted to. It is little short of marvelous to note how the soil responds in fertility to irrigation.

The islands in this Archipeligo or group are all of volcanic origin, some towering thousands of feet above the sea, others quite low; a few hundreds and many which are not noted, not even named, just poking their heads above the water. There are eight inhabited islands, the largest being Hawaii, from which the group takes its name; it has an area of 4,015 square miles. The second is "Maui" with 728 square miles; then "Oahu" of 598 square miles; then "Kauai" of 547 square miles; then "Molokai" with 261 square miles; next "Lanai," 139 square miles; next "Niihau," 97 square miles; last "Kahoolawe," with 69 square miles, making a total of 6,449 square miles.

Similar climatic conditions and soil prevail on all the islands. The soil is a disintegrated volcanic ash and the result of erosion of the lava after millions of years exposure. In the valley and on the lower slopes, when irrigated it becomes as rich as the far famed valley of the Nile. All conditions make it ideal for the growth and cultivation of sugar cane and the pineapple. It is a most beautiful sight to view from the sea the rich green foliage of the cane and pineapple fields.

As a rule the land is held in large estates, the cultivation being carried on in a most extensive and systematic way, the land being plowed with great traction engines and other power devices. The sugar cane is planted in rows about four or five feet apart, a joint of the ripe cane being placed in the furrow. The shoot is hoed by Japanese women, much as we would hoe a field of corn, later cultivated by mule power.. Under fair conditions it will reach a height in growth of ten or twelve feet. When ripe the cane is richest in sugar. It is then cut, as we cut corn, and hurried to the great sugar mill to be crushed, and the rich stream of juice conducted to the great boiling pans and there converted into sugar.

At another date I will write of the roads, the people and other subjects.

JAMES E. MARTINE.

SILENT SERMONS GIVEN IN RED BANK CHURCH'S AIRDOME

Red Bank, July 24—In order to help pay the cost of erecting a new edifice, the First Reformed church has opened an airdome on the lot south of the church. The formal opening was held Thursday night and standing room was at a premium, for no admission was charged. The program included motion pictures, stereopticon views of points of interest in the borough and silent sermons. These sermons were pertinent paragraphs printed on glass, and were thrown on the screen like the views. After the exhibition the women of the church sold refreshments on the lawn in front of the airdome.

Dr. Lester Leggett, formerly of Plainfield, pastor of the church, has been told by moving picture men that his is the only Protestant church in the State which is conducting an airdome. Exhibitions will be held in the airdome two or three times a week. Special entertainments will be held from time to time, and Dr. Leggett will hold his Sunday services there as well.

Going to build? See Saturday's Press.

"MIDGE" KLINE ASPIRES TO A REGULAR MANAGER'S TITLE

Believing in the policy that a baseball fan will go anywhere to see a good game, Manager "Midge" Kline, of the Royal Giants, has decided to book feature attractions during the months of August and September. Most of the games he has carded will be played out of town, but Parker Field will be the scene of at least three of the big events.

Kline's team, when it opposes metropolitan aggregations on rivals' grounds, will have only three local players in the lineup, Maiden, "Tune" Kline and Somerset being the fortunate ones. Paul Coleman, who is to assist Kline with the managing end of the job, will be taken along as a "sub" and pinch hitter.

Tommy Washington will likely catch for the locals, but as yet the rest of the lineup has not been signed. The Dikemans, Suburbans and Degnons, of New York, the Newark Giants and the Mohawks are among the teams being considered as opponents by the local managers.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF; "CHICK" EVANS AGAIN FINALIST

Cleveland, Ohio, July 24.—History almost repeated itself yesterday when "Chick" Evans, of Chicago, defeated New Sawyer, of Chicago, two and on in the semi-final match in the Western Amateur Golf Championship. It was the same score by which Evans won from Sawyer in the semi-finals last year.

Today the same men who met in the finals at Grand Rapids last year will clash. Jimmy Standish, Jr., of Detroit, will be Evans' opponent. He won yesterday over H. P. Bingham, the Mayfield Club dark horse, 7 and 6.

ROD AND REEL

The fishing in Weequahic and Branchbrook Park Lakes, Newark, has been fairly good during the past week, good catches of bass and perch having been made practically every day. The fly fishermen are not having very much success, but the man who provides himself with a live bait, minnows, frogs or even the lowly worm, is enjoying fair results.

Bass is running well at Mombashia Lake, N. Y., but most of the fish are small although a few large Oswegos have been caught during the season.

As usual fishing at Lake Hopatcong is good, pickerel and perch being numerous.

Weakfish and fluke have been caught in large numbers by fishermen off Lorillard's Pier, Raritan Bay, during the past week. Eels are numerous around that region also.

Long Branch seems to attract an unusually large crowd of anglers, who register successful catches of fluke and kingfish.

At Point Pleasant striped bass of large size are caught daily, two weighing five and eight pounds respectively being landed during the forepart of the week.

An interesting experience surrounded the fishing trip enjoyed by a Newark fisherman in the St. Lawrence River section recently. He caught a 36-pound maskalonge, which he at first was unable to land. Finally, he succeeded and killed it with a revolver shot.

Near Stroudsburg there are two good trout streams while the Delaware River affords ample chance to fish to your heart's content. A non-resident does not need a license in Pennsylvania, but the trout season in that vicinity will close on July 31.

Catches of weakfish at Perth Amboy have been large of late, especially in those instances when shedder crab was used for bait.

Raritan Bay attracts quite a few anglers from this vicinity and all who take a trip to these grounds are amply rewarded by the catches they register. Seidler's Beach, a new resort around the Perth Amboy section, is also popular with local fishermen.

Fifty-six weakfish were caught by the "Fishing Five" yesterday. Those who helped land the big catch were "Pop" Thorn, Langhorne, Whelan and Blair.

Orrin G. Dodge, of Berckman street, is fishing the Kill von Kull waters today.

PERSONAL.

George E. Greenleaf, of West Front street, is building a new home for himself and family on West Eighth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Newton Crane and children, of Leland avenue, will spend the month of August at Ocean Grove.

William J. Kitchen, former proprietor of the Hotel Kensington, who is to be succeeded tomorrow by J. J. Sullivan, of Point Pleasant, will soon leave for St. Louis, where he will look after some business interests.

Robert Cusen, of West Front street, who has been quite ill for a few weeks, has recovered and returned to business.

BUYS BROKAW PROPERTY.

A. R. Peacock, of Lafayette place, has purchased of Morris Brokaw the latter's residence on West Front street, and will take possession after some improvements are made. The consideration is said to have been $5,000. This was the home of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Brokaw.

PLAINFIELDER'S AUTOMOBILE DAMAGED IN ELIZABETH

In a collision in front of the store at 82 Broad street, Elizabeth, about 10 o'clock last night, the automobile of Robert Spencer, of 129 Grove street, North Plainfield, was damaged by a car owned by James A. Lourie, president of the First Street Association, of that city. Mr. Lourie took all the blame for the accident and upon his promise to pay for the damages, no arrests were made.

Mr. Spencer and his family were in a store and the car was standing at the curb without an attendant. Mr. Lourie's car skidded on the street car tracks and crashed into the Spencer machine, bending the mud guards, breaking a lamp and scratching the paint. N one was injured.

POLITICAL NOTES.

August 21—Union county Republicans hold annual outing at Coney Island.

August 25—Union county Democrats hold annual outing at Witzel's Point View Grove, L. I.

August 27—Last day for filing county nomination petitions with county clerk.

September 7—First registration day.

September 21—Primary day and second registration day.

October 19—State referendum election, and third registration day.

November 2—General Election Day.

The presence of State notables on the Republican excursion August 21 is assured. Nathan R. Leavitt, chairman of the committee in charge, has received acceptances from ex-Governor Edward C. Stokes and ex-Governor Franklin Murphy, who may be candidates for the nomination for United States Senator. Many others of State prominence are expected, including a number of State Senators who are mentioned for the Gubernatorial nomination. Edward Ehlers, chairman of the Morris County Republican Committee, will also be present.

Bergen county Progressives have decided to make a fight this year in the Republican primaries. They will have candidates for the various nominations against the regulars. This decision is in line with what ex-Assemblyman Blauvelt has brought about in Passaic county and is advocating elsewhere.

Congressman Archibald C. Hart has issued a statement explaining his endorsement of S. Dana Ely for postmaster of Rutherford. There were a number of other candidates, but Mr. Ely was endorsed by the county committee. Mr. Hart, in pointing out Mr. Ely's qualifications, refers to his splendid personal habits and his education, being a graduate of the University of Michigan.

If Assemblymen Runyon, Pierson and Morgan were to have any primary opposition, Republican leaders declare that it would have shown itself by now. That any other aspirant for a nomination would have to make a campaign starting early in the summer and continuing until September 28, they assert. Little more than a month remains now for the filing of petitions.

As usual, the county committees of the various parties will be elected on primary day. The Republicans were never more harmonious than now. While there may be no real contests on the Democratic side, the threatened fight against Chairman Lucius T. Russell may yet develop.

The Polish societies of this city will hold a mass meeting in St. Mary's Social Hall tomorrow afternoon. The purpose of the meeting is to form plans whereby aid can be rendered the Polish war sufferers.

You May Find a Worker Trained and Fit to do Your Work.

A worker whose salary you will voluntarily raise in a short time!

"Getting along" with half-competent help, in home, office, store or factory, is a poor plan—a poor business policy.

The quest for the Competent Worker is important enough to justify a real campaign of classified advertising in the Plainfield Daily Press—although it does not often require a very long campaign.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake If You Follow This Plainfield Citizen's Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has acted effectively in many cases in Plainfield. Follow the advice of a Plainfield citizen.

A. K. Mattis, 127 West Fourth street, Plainfield, says: "I confirm all that one of my family said in my favor in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills procured at Randolph's drug store some years ago. The cure they gave me has lasted".

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Mattis had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

DOG-CATCHER BEGINS HIS WORK MONDAY

Another Array of Owners Arraigned Before Judge De-Meza in Court Today.

Another delegation of Plainfielders who had neglected to take out licenses for dogs lined up before Judge DeMeza in the city police court this morning. Despite the fact that this morning's array brought the total number of offenders past the century mark the negligent individuals were fortunate to find the magistrate in his usual good humor and escaped with reprimands.

That bow-wows should sport the cute little German-silver license pendants is the opinion of Judge DeMeza but he is also aware of the fact that certain canine owners are denying their families the proper daily allotment of the staff of life in order to gather together the necessary $2.50 for the credentials to protect the pets against the dog-catcher.

Chief Kiely has at last found a man who will shoulder the rsponsibilities of the dog-catcher's task and he will begin his work armed with a net Monday morning. All stray canines will be picked up and given a ride in the "dog-patrol" to the pound, where they will be put to death if the owners do not produce the necessary wherewithal to redeem them.

MRS. CORNELIA WANDELL DIES AT DAUGHTER'S HOME

Following an illness of about a year, Mrs. Cornelia Wandell passed away at the home of her daughter Mrs. Fred C. Lounsbury, at eight o'clock this morning. Mrs. Wandell was the widow of the late Samuel S. Wandell and daughter of the late William Henry and Catherine Ann Cornell, of New York.

For the past twenty-eight years she has made her home with her daughter in this city. She is survived by two daughters, Miss Cornelia Wandell and Mrs. Fred C. Lounsbury, and by eight grandchildren. Funeral services will be held at the late home, Monday afternoon at o'clock.

HOPE TO SAVE CHILDHEN.

Nw York, July 24—Three small children, aged eight, six and two respectively, are under the care of physicians at their Brooklyn home today as a result of drinking bichloride of mercury out of a glass, mistaking it for water. They are expected to recover. The children are Clara Cumbers and Adelaide and Helen English, her cousins. Mrs. Cumbers had been using the poison to bathe a cut on her arm.

SECURE MAJORITY OF CONSENTS

The right of way committee on the trunk sewer proposition has about completed its work and expects to secure the consents of the remaining few property-owners within the coming week. The committee does not expect to have much trouble in getting these consents and in consequence there should be no delay in the progress of the work.

RAISE IN WAGES GRANTED.

GOLFER'S LICENSE TO JUGGLE THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE HAS MADE QUEER PHRASEOLOGY

Not the least of the intricacies of golf is the phraseology of the game. Many feel that they would be better players if they could master the lingo. The following A B C primer may be of help:

"Par" is the number of shots one is supposed to take for a hole. Two putts are allowed on every green. If the green may be reached in one shot, par is three; if in two shots, par is four.

"Bogey" is a score to play against. It is an imaginary opponent often referred to as "Colonel Bogey." "Par" takes into account the length of the hole, while "bogey" considers also the "trouble."

A player is "one up" when he makes a hole in fewer strokes than his opponent. If the latter wins the next hole the players are "all square."

The expression "3 and 1" as the result of a match means that one player has won the match by three holes with one hole yet to play. This hole is called a "bye" hole and is not played, because no matter what happens on it the result of the match will be the same.

A player is "dormie" when he has to win all the rest of the holes to "square" the match. For instance, he is "dormie" when he is three down and three to play.

If the golfer who was "three down" wins the rest of the holes the players are then "all square" or "even up."

The first winner of a hole, after the match is "squared" on the eighteenth green, wins the match.

A hole is "halved" when both golfers require the same number of strokes to play it.

A ball is "dead to the hole" when it is so close that it would be hard to miss the putt. When one ball is on top of the hole and in the line of the other ball there is a "stymie" if the second ball cannot go down ordinarily without knocking in the ball which is in the way.

When a hole is made in one stroke under par it is called a "bird." Two under par is an "eagle." The winged thing is yet to be born which could describe a hole in three under par.

The law allows two putts on every green. Most golfers would rather take three of four, while some cannot seem to get the ball in "no-how." A New England "pro" steps up at this point, makes his bow, and wishes to state that putting is a cinch.

He says if the golfer wishes to putt straight into the hole, to lay his right thumb straight down the shaft of his putter. If he wants to putt to the right of the hole because of a slope in the green then simply hold the thumb more to the right of the shaft, and if to the left of the hole more to the left of the shaft.

If the ball doesn't go in the first time, try again, we suppose. It is easy to figure out the angle of the thumb by trigonometry.

The general idea today is that if A gets an 89 and has a handicap of 30, he can turn in a card of 59. This will win for him the prize, even though B, with a handicap of four, should turn in a nice 64. In fact, A could afford to sneer at B's card. It might be a record and might win the low net prize, but who cares about that? There is no use in getting worked up over the matter, however, for neither of the above "ifs" is likely to happen.

LUCK IN WINNING WIVES WILL ACCOMPANY THEM TO THE BALL DIAMOND, SAY BENEDICTS

All roads lead to Avon Oval tomorrow, when the married and single members of the local Tab society give an exhibition of baseball, just before the scheduled game between the regular Tabs and the Tiger A. A., of Newark, is run off. As announced on Thursday, the manager of the benedicts is Alexander McDonald, who performed in the Parker Field League several times this year. This was only practice for 'Alec." "Butter" O'Keefe is going to hurl the pill at the "unattached" youths and Albert La Rock is going to catch them if they pass the batter. Rufus La Rue, "Bud" Higgins, Dan Nugent and Alec Mac Donald will attend to the infield work while Eddie Kyle, "Duff" Muldowney and Jimmy Moynihan are going to look after the garden.

The single men, who declare that they cannot help but win inasmuch as they have been lucky up to the present time, are to have as a battery, two minstrel men, Bill Mahoney and Joe Carroll. "Tax" O'Keefe will tackle first for them if Johnny McGraw doesn't need him for use at Long Branch or points South, while Hughie MacDonald, who is not a son of the renowned "Alec," will endeavor to take care of things around the keystone sack. "Paddy" Snyder will remain away from Coney, Sunday, in order that he may be on hand at the difficult station and prove that there is nothing really difficult about the position. Jack Force, Harry Dunn and Tommy Griffen have been engaged to do the "landscape" work for the "horseshders."

The main section of the double bill will be run off just as soon as the ambulances can drag the "prelim" performers away from their argument. The Tigers have played the local Abstainers before and lost, after putting up a game fight. Either Jack Denny or Dick Lawton will hurl for the Plainfielders, while "Art" Kyle will attend to the catching end of the game. Scott, Geary, Brennan and McCarty will compose the infield, and Day, F. Lawton and Tone Denny will be present in the outfield.

Michael O'Keefe and Jack Willis will umpire the first game and either Malanga or Coriell will yell out the decisions in the second encounter.

TO FACE HIS OLD MATES.

Cliff Randolph, the local hurler, who is employed by the Perth Amboy Pacers, will stack up against the crack Suburbans, of Brooklyn, tomorrow. Cliff wil have to pitch "some ball" to beat the Brooklyns as they have been treating all opposition with wonderful indifference this season. Ruddy will catch the local lad and the rest of the team will be the same as that used in all the Amboy City League games. Cliff at one time twirled for the Suburbans.

That funny fellow Scoop is on the classified page.

CONTROL IN PITCHING.

"In my ten years' connection with the American League as umpire, I have seen the fact proven again and again that control is absolutely necessary to win success.

"The more one studies the different features of the art of pitching, the more clearly does he see the value that control plays in the success of the pitcher. If the pitcher knows the weakness of the batter, and intends giving him a fast ball on the inside, and then deliberately pitches to the opposite side, his knowledge of the batter is of no use to him. Lack of control has rendered his knowledge useless. If he knows the short-stop is to cover and then pitches a ball to the batter that makes it easy for him to hit through the position vacated by the shortstop, he nullifies the strength of his infield. Lack of control is again the cause. If the catcher signals for a waste ball, in order to be in a better position to throw out a runner trying to steal, and, instead, he gets the ball right over the plate, he is handicapping the catcher. Lack of control is again the cause. After all, most of the finer points of pitching are based on ability to control the ball."—Billy Evans, in the August St. Nicholas.

YACHTSMEN'S DAY.

The big affair of the year for yachtsmen hereabouts is the sixth annual two-day carnival of the Waterway League of New Jersey, which is composed of fifty-nine yacht and motorboat clubs, and includes something like 700 members, to be held at the clubhouse of the Pavonia Yacht Club, on Newark Bay, today and tomorrow. Not only will Jersey yachtsmen take part in the carnival, but a large delegation is expected from the Waterway League of New York and Long Island, which is working in conjunction with this State's body for improvement of inland and coastal waters in the two States.

TENER AS PEACEMAKER.

Boston, July 24.—The trouble which developed between Umpire Quigley and Captain Johnny Evers, of the Boston Braves, Thursday, when the umpire is said to have punched Evers, claiming that the latter had stepped on his foot, was apparently smoothed over yesterday, after President Tener, of the National League, had personally investigated the incident. Before yesterday's game started Quigley and Evers shook hands, settling their personal quarrel.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Returns gathered from those who have paid recent trips to the fishing banks have prompted many local anglers to get out their rods for an over-Sunday trip. Plainfield will be well represented at the banks tomorrow and if present conditions continue it is likely that some notable catches of the finny tribe will be brought back.

With Labor Day only six weeks in advance no one has mentioned a municipal athletic meet as yet. It's time to get busy!

Whether or not those feminine athletes pull off their athletic festival on Parker Field Labor Day, and it's pretty certain that they will, the male devotee to track and field sports demands that he be given an opoportunity to exhibit his wares.

With a perfectly good athletic field right in our midst and plenty of likely talent there's positively no reason why we should not have a meet this summer.

With this City League in operation independent clubs appear to be having the time of their lives trying to exist. 'Pears to us as though the league stunt was sprung just at the proper moment.

Isn't it about time someone came across with the information that "Doc" Doyle will not manage the Holy Cross football team this fall? Or that the team will not use Cricket Field?

A London sporting editor claims to have in his possession letters to prove that the Johnson-Willard fight was a frame up, the big smoke throwing away his crown. Wonder why this Sherlock Holmes hasn't discovered that the European war is a fake before this time?

Those Plainfield athletes who have grievances to file because we have had no athletic meet here this year may be able to gain some consolation in the fact that the national meet will be held in Newark in 1916. This is the classic of the year and the Queen City should be well represented.

That there will be some Plainfielders who will fall for that automobile racing program at Olympic Park, Newark, this afternoon and tonight is a foregone conclusion. Unless the meet is several thousand times better than the last one held in Jersey's metropolis we're inclined to believe that there will be an array of soreheads stepping from trains at the North Avenue depot tonight.

It's one safe bet that the feminine sex will turn out for that baseball frolic between the married and single men tomorrow afternoon at the Tabs' field. The benedicts' wives just couldn't bear to let them out alone on Sunday afternoon; while the tempting array of unmarried talent promised will lure many a spinster, who doesn't know the difference between a baseball and an onion, to the ball park.

A home run by Pitcher Ruth, made in St. Louis Thursday, is being heralded as the longest four station clout ever registered. What about the ball that one of the City Leaguers swatted into a passing coal train headed for Jersey City?

SPORT BRIEFS

Jim Thorpe, outfielder, has been transferred from Jersey City to Harrisburg, of the International League.

Frankie Burns, the Jersey City bantamweight, easily defeated Jimmy Murray, of New York, in ten rounds at the Far Rockaway A. C., last night.

Ludwig Langer, of Los Angeles, shattered two amateur swimming records, the mile and half-mile tidal water marks over a 110 yard course in Yacht Harbor of the Panama-Pacific Exposition yesterday.

Young Ahearn will be seen in action tonight, when he meets Boer Rodel in the main bout of ten rounds at the Brighton Beach race track.

Chick Evans, of Chicago, defeated Ned Sawyer, of Chicago, 2 and 1 in the semi-final match in the Western amateur golf championship at Cleveland yesterday.

Young Kansas, of Buffalo, outpointed Ad Wolgast in ten rounds at Buffalo last night.

Abraham Bassford, Jr., reached the final round of the Hudson River championship lawn tennis tournament yesterday, when he defeated George King in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4. He is matched to meet J. H. Steinkampf in the finals today.

BOUND BROOK GAME.

The Bound Brook Bees will entertain the Johnson & Johnson team, of New Brunswick, tomorrow. Mike McFadden and Harry Jennings will be the opposing moundsmen. The latter adorned the hillock for Dorflinger's Pets of last year. If the plans of several local managers of semi-professional teams meet with success Jennings and the Johnson team will be seen here in the near future.

THORPE TRANSFERRED.

Harrisburg, Penn., July 24.—James Thorpe, the Indian baseball player, has been transferred from the Jersey City team, of the International League, to Harrisburg at his own request. He will play right field in the double-header against Providence here today. Thorpe fills the vacancy caused by Callahan, who is out with a broken leg.

SETS TWO RECORDS.

San Francisco, July 24.—Ludwig (Ludy) Langer, of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, shattered two American amateur swimming records—the mile and half-mile tidal water marks—over a 110-yard course in Yacht Harbor at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, yesterday. He covered the mile in 24m. 59 2-5s. Langer was timed at the half-mile mark in 12m. 6s., lowering the American record made by him last Wednesday of 12:08 2-5.

SWIMMING RESULTS.

Two races for boys weighing not over 100 pounds were held in the Plainfield High School pool yesterday morning. In the forty-yard race Barry finished first, with Carson second; while Wright finished first in the sixty-yard race, with Yates a close second.

MULLIN AT SEASHORE.

Tommy Mullin, the local "ginger" boy, will accompany the Franklins, of Perth Amboy, tomorrow, when they go to Atlantic Highlands to clash with the team representing that resort. The trip will be made by boat leaving Mulberry Beach at 12:15.

PARKER FIELD TO BE THE SCENE OF AUGUST 7 GAME

Arrangements were completed yesterday whereby the Watchungs and the Oriole A. C. will stage a game of baseball on Parker Field on August 7. Marsh, the N. P. H. S. catcher, is taking care of the interests of the 'songsters," while Smalley is manager of the Watchungs. The "birds" will have a Westfield battery, Crist doing the hurling and Barnes the receiving. "June" Dunning will tackle first; Marsh, second; Ernie Stahl, short, and Bert Trotter, third, while the outer gardens will be taken care of by Cliff Marsh, Lynn March and Loschen.

The battery for the Watchungs will be Demler, pitcher, and Vail, catcher. T. Fetherston, Baker, F. Fetherston and Bodin will be seen in the "mountain" infield, while Schmidt, Bob Young, Herman and Eaton will battle for places in the outfield.

SUNDAY ATTRACTION.

The Queen City baseball team meets the Highlanders on Crescent Oval tomorrow in the first match of a three-game series. Both teams have been treating all comers to trimmings and both are confident of winning tomorrow. A. Stebor and Dodd will probably compose the Highland battery, while Houston and Cohen will be in the points for the Queens. A few shifts have been made in the lineups of both teams but no new men have been signed up to play in tomorrow's affair.

MATHEY A WINNER.

Minneapolis, July 24.—Dean Mathey, of Cranford, and George M. Church, the Princeton tennis stars, were among the entrants in the singles event of the Northwestern tennis tournament when the draw was made yesterday. Other well-known players are entered in the tournament, which begins today.

NEWS OF INTEREST IN THE PLAINFIELD BUILDING WORLD

Homes of Individuality

Selected by Walter J. Keith, Architect

A DOUBLE BUNGALOW DESIGN NO. D-1341

The above illustration depicts an interesting example of a double bungalow. Below is suggested a floor plan in keeping with this attractive elevation. The various rooms have been so located as to secure the most desirable arrangement, and waste as little room as possible in useless hall space.

The living room occupies the front and has an inviting fireplace laid up in brick. A roomy closet is also provided, convenient for outdoor wraps. Adjoining through a wide-cased opening is a cheerful dining room, with a corner china closet, lighted by mullion windows from the side. A door opens to the hall, connecting with bedrooms and bath, and another to the pantry, which in turn connects with a well equipped kitchen. This room and the pantry are lighted by a large skylight provided with an automatic ventilator, and glass adjustable sides to insure light and air.

A desirable feature is the side entry combining inside and outside cellar way, and so doing away with a troublesome cellar hatchway.

The bedrooms are quite generous in size and are supplied with ample closet room, in addition to which there are two closets in the hall.

If it were desired to build this as a single detached bungalow, the central gable should be omitted, and the extending roof feature carried across the entire front. The porch could then be extended in like manner and the approach located in the centre. This arrangement would allow for side windows, thus doing away with the necessity of skylight over kitchen and pantry.

Exclusive of heating, plumbing, electric work, and decorations, this bungalow single is estimated to cost $2,350, double $4,300. Plans and specifications $30.

All inquiries concerning "Homes of Individuality" will be cheerfully answered by simply addressing "Homes of Individuality Department," Plainfield Daily Press.

HARRISON AVENUE SCHOOL IS A MODEL BUILDING

Satisfactory progress is being made by the contractor erecting the Harrison Avenue School, North Plainfield, according to Architect Aylin Pierson, of the firm of J. N. Pierson & Son, of Metuchen and Perth Amboy, who drew the plans. The completion of this building marks the finishing of one million dollars' worth of public school work in New Jersey planned by this firm in the last six years. The Harrison Avenue School has been inspected by school trustees from all over the State and is said to be one of the most modern and best designed schoolhouses in New Jersey. It is being used as a model by many towns.

TRUELL HALL IMPROVEMENTS.

If the negotiations for the leasing of the old Hotel Netherwood, or Truell Hall, as it was called, to Adolph Rhuel, go through quite a little work will be necessary before the hostelry is put in condition for use. Probably between $7,000 and $10,000 will have to be spent in repairs and alterations before the building is in first-class condition and adapted to the use Mr. Rhuel intends putting it to.

Don't fail to see Bushnell's cartoon every day in the Press.

MARKET SHOWS MORE ACTIVITY

Evidence of Awakening Conditions in Building Material and Equipment.

BUSINESS IS EXPANDING

Distributors Generally Admit That Material Prices Today Are at Conciliatory Levels—Quotations Are Given.

New York, July 24.—More evidence of awakening conditions in the building material and financing markets developed this week when Portland cement stiffened so as to include a top level of $1.58 a barrel for delivery over thirty days, structural steel advanced five cents a pound, lumber manufacturers made application to the Federal Trade Commission to expand their business so as to include exports and steel mills extended their output capacities to 100 per cent. and some even took bids for new building to take care of additional business, not only for the manufacture of destructive materials, but for constructive commodities. Structural steel contracts covering metropolitan deliveries totaled 75,000 tons last week and there are 80,000 more tons ready to come out, about half of which is for subway construction. One large firm manufacturing radiators and heating equipment announced withdrawal of all former lists and informed the trade that an advance of prices became effective on orders as of July 15, indicating that the radiator price war has reached an end.

This latter announcement leaves only the common brick market weak on prices and even in this department there are reasons for believing that the brick market is much stronger basically than appearances show.

Owing to the strike in Haverstraw, the barges plying between the wholesale market here and that brick making centre are going elsewhere for cargoes with the result that burned brick is practically being shipped as fast as made. The supply is therefore limited although there is no evidence of a shortage of brick. It will merely mean that there will be a different level for brick in this market before the end of the season. Dealers are buying on the hand to mouth order and when stacking time comes there is likely to be less chance for profitable speculation than there is now.

Distributors generally admit that building material prices today are at conciliatory levels. Some levels are being held where they are under greater pressure because in some departments, such as fireplace goods and ornamental iron work, where war conditions have forced prices up artificially, building equipment interests have seen their margins shrink to almost nothing in order to favor purchasers as much as possible. All expanded metal goods are held at moderate prices, but there is great pressure being exerted in the raw material market tending to make quotations much higher. It was said this week that before another thirty days elapse there will be hardly a single product that will not be at a higher price than now ruling, excepting, possibly, copper and brass sheets, which, however, are stiff because demand and supply at present are just about even. Any sudden movement in London will force copper prices up considerably.

Concrete ingredients, such as sand, crushed stone and gravel, are in moderate though increasing demand in the metropolitan district, reflecting the improvement noted in building construction during the last few weeks. Distributors were not inclined to presage price movements at this time, but they were not at all hesitant about saying that in their opinion there will be a demand for their products this autumn that would be quite unprecented in recent years, largely because of the increasing demand for rough mill construction and inquiry for metropolitan commercial structures and artesans' homes.

There is some significance in the fact that practically every manufacturer of building material is putting in improvements for cutting down his manufacturing costs at the present time. It is interpreted to mean that far-sighted producers foresee a wave of general speculative construction following the wholesale building of factories. The big building boom now in progress in the Bronx is said to be only a part of the immediate building material market. Suburban manufacturers say there is a corresponding trend toward district development in their localities, with the single exception of Queens, outside of Long Island City and Jamaica. Stocks held here and in most manufacturing plants are exceedingly light. There is no reserve stock of Portland cement in the Lehigh Valley and comparatively little in the Hudson zone. Steel output is now at its maximum, quarries are running almost full tilt; ceramic plants are spreading out and are making preparations for a great sanitary construction movement for interiors and heating equipment interests have stopped fighting among themselves and are getting ready for business on a new plane.

WORK COMMENCED ON ALBERT ZABRISKIE'S HOUSE

Work has been started on the new residence which Albert Zabriskie, of Park avenue, is erecting on Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield. The excavating for the cellar has been done and the foundation walls are being laid up. Oakley & Son, of Elizabeth, drew the plans, and the Lincoln Steel Fleming Company, of New York, has the general contract. Local men will be employed, however, in many departments of the work, and some of the subcontractors are local men. C. W. Krausse, of North Plainfield, has the plumbing contract.

The house will cost about $15,000 and will be finished by late fall. The style of architecture adopted is Dutch Colonial, and a feature of the dwelling will be the large living room, which will run through from front to rear of the house at one side. The house will be one of the most attractive in that section of the borough.

THREE HOUSES STARTED ON CHATHAM PLACE

Contractor Charles L. Force, of North Plainfield, is building a neat looking frame cottage for Mrs. Caroline Mordecai, of Elm place, Plainfield. The new house is located at 12 Chatham place, North Plainfield, and is 24 feet front by 31 feet deep, two and one-half stories high. The cost will be about $2,800. Carpenters are engaged in trimming it out this week. Mr. Force expects to have the house finished in two weeks.

On the same street and near Mrs. Mordecai's house, Allen Coddington is building a similar cottage, and another house, adjoining the last mentioned one, is being erected jointly by Mr. Coddington and Andrew Wilson. These are both two and one-half story houses and will be ready for occupancy, September 15, at the latest. Ralph Bullmann is the contractor.

CONTRACTORS START WORK ON HOSPITAL GARAGE

B. F. Tallamy & Brother have been awarded the contract to erect the garage on the Muhlenberg Hospital property in which the new hospital ambulance, soon to be received, will be housed, and have already started work on it. The garage will be finished and ready for use by the time the ambulance arrives, August 26.

In dimensions the garage will be 22x26 feet, one story high. It will correspond with the ward building, the laundry, the administration building and the maternity house in material. It will have a slate roof, electric lights, a washstand for the car and all garage improvements. Living quarters for the chauffeur will be provided. The building will cost $1,150.

You Touch a Magic Button When You Become a "Want Advertiser."

A President presses a button in Washington, and a titanic explosion, thousands of miles away, weds the two great seas.

We are fond, nowadays, of accomplishing big effects with simple processes.

And so the "button-pressing" magic applies to the "little things" of life, as well as to the big episodes.

When you become a "want advertiser" you press a MAGIC BUTTON—and the influence is felt in the homes and business places of the city.

Your quest becomes of interest to the people who are able to help you accomplish it.

If you seek work, and "press the button" of Plainfield Daily Press want advertising publicity, your quest becomes one of personal interest to the people who need you. The same law operates in the working out of every "want ad task."

For classified advertising makes the whole city your market; makes the right people your audience; delivers your message to all people to whom it could have any interest or importance.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR CONTRACTORS

NO PERMITS ISSUED

Dull Week for Building Inspector's Office—Jobs Started — Saurer Plant Extension Necessary and Plans for Addition Are Out.

Not a permit was issued this week by Building Inspector T. O. Doane, although there is considerable activity noticeable in the building line and a number of sets of plans are in the hands of contractors for estimates.

The prospects for a busy fall continue bright, for while some of the school work under way will be finished before long other large jobs—the new postoffice building, the Evergreen Avenue School, the Netherwood Reformed church chapel, the Plainfield Storage Warehouse Company's four-story structure besides numberless small apartment, stores, business buildings, factory additions, dwellings and alteration jobs under way or to be started by September 15—indicate a fair amount of work ahead and an absence of distress among the mechanics.

Plans for an addition to the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company have been drawn and estimates for the work are being received. The addition will be 120x120 feet in dimensions. The plans are from the office of Architect John Brown, of Philadelphia. An extension to the power house is also to be built in the near future.

Conrad Jacobson is receiving estimates for a four-family apartment house which he will erect at 439 West Third street.

Peter Thomson has plans out for two houses of the "double deck" type which will be erected on Webster place. They will be two-family houses. Estimates are now being received.

Improvements to cost between $300 and $400 are being made to the house on H. E. Butler's farm property on Terrill road, near Cushing road. A new enclosure has been erected at one side of the house and the interior is being remodeled. Charles L. Force, of Mountain avenue, is the contractor.

Angelo Brancati will erect a two or a two and one-half story frame house at 451 West Fourth street. Some time ago Mr. Brancati moved the house which stood at No. 451 towards the easterly side of the lot, making the number of the house now 449, and leaving room for a new house where the old one stood. The proposed structure will likely contain a store on the ground floor and apartments above. Br. Brancati is putting an addition to the rear of the old house now located at 449, these improvements being covered by a building permit issued some time ago.

BUILDING OPERATIONS NOTED IN DUNELLEN

Clarence Hallett is building a residence on his truck farm on the road leading from New Market to South Plainfield. The house will cost in the neighborhood of $3,000. William N. Apgar is the architect and Samuel M. Titus, the contractor.

George Romond, of Plainfield, is about to start the erection of a seven-room house on Dunellen avenue, to cost about $3,000. Upon its completion Mr. Romond will move into it from his Plainfield home and occupy it with his family.

The house which A. H. Burdick is building at Washington and Walnut streets is going to make a great improvement in the looks of that end of the borough. The work is rapidly nearing completion.

NEW SCHOOL CONTRACTS TO BE AWARDED SOON

The building and grounds committee of the North Plainfield Board of Education, consisting of J. A. VanMater, Charles L. Holstein and C. W. Krausse, will meet soon for the purpose of awarding the few remaining contracts for the improvements being made to the Somerset School. The general contract was given out before the recent special election to vote on the question of borrowing the sum of $2,000 to make up the amount needed to pay for the work was held. Still to be awarded are contracts for tinning, heating, copper work, etc.

SCHOOL CHILDREN ARE POOR SPELLERS

Seven Out of Every 100 Third Grade Pupils Cannot Spell "Has."

Seven out of every 100 third-grade public school children cannot spell "has." This and other curious evidences of the special problems inherent in the teaching of spelling are brought out by Dr. Leonard P. Ayres, of the Russell Sage Foundation, in a study just published.

As a result of combining the four most extensive studies that have been made to identify the words commonly used in different sorts of English writing, Dr. Ayres has selected the 1,000 words that constitute 90 per cent. of the language ordinarily used. This selection was made from various English authors, from four Sunday newspapers of Buffalo, N. Y., and from the business and family correspondence of over 2,000 adults. The objects of the study was to "develop a scale for measuring attainment in the spelling of common words on the part of school children."

Co-operating with the city superintendents in eighty-four cities of the United States, Dr. Ayres had the 1,000 commonest words tested by an aggregate of 1,400,000 spellings, secured from 70,000 public school children. The result, according to Dr. Ayres, made it possible to accurately measure spelling ability, and to compute the amount of improvement in spelling the same words from grade to grade.

By a scale arrangement, extending on a line from 0 to 100, "spelling ability" is easily and scientifically determined. For example, nine words of most frequent use, viz., "the," "in," "so," "no," "now," "man," "ten," "bed," "top," revealed that second-grade pupils, on an average, spelled correctly 94 per cent. of these words. At the other extreme of the scale the words "judgment," "recommend" and "allege" were found to be spelled correctly by just 50 per cent. of Eighth grade pupils. Percentages above and below these would indicate variations from the normal in spelling.

Dr. Ayres finds that "intellectual abilities are distributed in much the same way among people as are physical traits. Just as there are few dwarfs, many people of medium height, and very few giants, so there are very few exceedingly poor spellers, many medium ones, and very few excellent ones. Few words do most of our work when we write. Fifty words constitute, with their repetitions, one-half of the words written. The child who masters the 1,000 words on the scale given will make no spelling errors in nine-tenths of his writing."

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The World Film Corporation presents the five-part photo-play, "After Dark," based upon the drama of the same name in which, twenty-six years ago, the well-known William A. Brady sprang into popularity by his work in the part of "Old Tom," at Proctor's Theatre Monday. Since that time Mr. Bray has never looked back; he has become one of the most successful theatrical managers in the United States; but his name and fame will always be associated with the play of "After Dark," and the part of "Old Tom."

Ten years before, that is in 1879, the Princess Theatre in London, a great home for melodrama, saw the first production of "After Dark." In the thirty-six years of its existence the play has gone round the globe and has been done in many languages. It is without doubt one of the most successful and touching melodramas ever put upon the speaking stage.

In the film version, in the preparation of which Mr. Brady has taken a deep personal interest, all the great situations and scenes of the old play are shown and photographed. A faithless wife drives Tom Dalton to the bad; he loses sight of his daughter, who becomes a cabaret performer and marries a rich young gambler who gets into trouble through cards and forgery. But he is destined for another girl, so the distracted young wife tries suicide and is rescued by her own father, a human derelict known as "Old Tom."

Then the villians try to kill the hero by laying him senseless across the rails of the subway, but "Old Tom" rescues him and restores him to his wife in whom "Old Tom," now a reformed character, recognizes his own daughter. Then all around happiness is served out, and the old drama ends with touching tag: "After dark comes the light."

The photo-drama is exciting, interesting, thrilling; it is well produced and acted, and it will be highly successful in any theatre in which it is shown.

By HAMLIN GARLAND

CHAPTER X.

Further Perplexities.

PERCEIVING Wayland's return ing weakness, Berea insisted on his lying down again while she set to work preparing dinner. "There is no telling when father will get here," she said. "And Tony will be hungry when he comes. Lie down and rest."

He obeyed her silently and, going to the bunk, at once fell asleep. How long he slept he could not tell, but he was awakened by the voice of the ranger, who was standing in the doorway and regarding Berrie with a round eyed stare.

He was a tall, awkward fellow of about thirty-five, plainly of the frontier type, but a man of intelligence. At the end of a brief explanation Berrie said, with an air of authority: "Now you'd better ride up the trail and bring our camp outfit down. We can't go back that way anyhow."

The ranger glanced toward Wayland. "All right, Miss Berrie, but perhaps your tenderfoot needs a doctor."

Wayland rose painfully, but resolutely. "Oh, no. I am not sick. I'm a lit tle lame, that's all. I'll go along with you."

The Supervisor Waved His Hand.

"No," said Berrie decisively. "You're not well enough for that. Get up your horses, Tony, and by that time I'll have some dinner ready."

"All right, Miss Berrie," replied the man and turned away.

Hardly had he crossed the bridge on his way to the pasture when Berrie cried out, "There comes daddy."

Wayland joined her at the door and stood beside her watching the supervisor as he came zigzagging down the steep hill to the east with all his horses trailing behind him roped together head to tail.

"He's had to come round by Lost lake," she exclaimed. "He'll be tired out and absolutely starved. Wahoo!" she shouted in greeting, and the supervisor waved his hand.

There was something superb in the calm seat of the veteran as he slid down the slope. He kept his place in the saddle with the air of the rider to whom hunger, fatigue, windfalls and snowslides were all a part of the day's work, and when he reined in before the door and dropped from his horse he put his arm about his daughter's neck with quiet word: "I thought I'd find you here. How is everything?"

"All right, daddy. But what about you? Where have you been?"

"Clean back to Mill park. The blamed cayuses kept just ahead of me all the way."

"Poor old dad! And on top of that came the snow."

"Yes, and a whole hatful. I couldn't get back over the high pass. Had to go round by Lost lake, and, to cap all, Old Baldy took a notion not to lead. Oh, I've had a peach of a time, but here I am. Have you seen Moore and his party?"

"Yes, they're in camp up the trail. He and Alec Belden and two women. Are you hungry?"

He turned a comical glance upon her. "Am I hungry? Sister, I am a wolf. Norcross, take my horses down to the pasture."

She hastened to interpose. "Let me do that, daddy. Mr. Norcross is badly used up. You see, we started down here late yesterday afternoon. It was raining and horribly muddy, and I took the wrong trail. The darkness caught us, and we didn't reach the station till nearly midnight."

Wayland acknowledged his weakness. "I guess I made a mistake, supervisor; I'm not fitted for this strenuous life."

McFarlane was quick to understand. "I didn't intend to pitchfork you into the forest life quite so suddenly," he said. "Don't give up yet a while. You'll harden to it."

"Here comes Tony," said Berrie. "He'll look after the ponies."

Nevertheless Wayland went out, believing that Berrie wished to be alone with her father for a short time.

As he took his seat McFarlane said: "You stayed in camp till yesterday afternoon, did you?"

"Yes, we were expecting you every moment."

He saw nothing in this to remark upon "Did it snow at the lake?"

"Yes, a little; it mostly rained."

"It stormed up on the divide like a January blizzard. When did Moore and his party arrive?"

"About 10 o'clock this morning."

"I'll ride right up and see them. What about the outfit? That's at the lake, I reckon?"

"Yes, I was just sending Tony after it. But, father, if you go up to Moore's camp don't say too much about what has happened. Don't tell them just when you took the back trail and just how long Wayland and I were in camp."

"Why not?"

She reddened with confusion. "Because— You know what an old gossip Mrs. Belden is. I don't want her to know. She's an awful talker, and our being together up there all that time will give her a chance."

A light broke in on the supervisor's brain. In the midst of his preoccupation as a forester he suddenly became the father. His eyes narrowed and his face darkened. "That's so. The old rip could make a whole lot of capital out of your being left in camp that way. At the same time I don't believe in dodging. The worst thing we could do would be to try to blind the trail. Was Tony here last night when you came?"

"No; he was down the valley after his mail."

His face darkened again. "That's another piece of bad luck too. How much does the old woman know at present?"

"Nothing at all."

"Didn't she cross examine you?"

"Sure she did, but Wayland side tracked her. Of course it only delays things. She'll know all about it sooner or later. She's great at putting two and two together. Two and two with her always make five."

McFarlane mused. "Cliff will be plumb crazy if she gets his ear first."

"I don't care anything about Cliff, daddy. I don't care what he thinks or does if he will only let Wayland alone."

"See here, daughter, you do seem to be terribly interested in this tourist."

"He's the finest man I ever knew, father."

He looked at her with tender, trusting glance. "He isn't your kind, daughter. He's a nice clean boy, but he's different. He don't belong in our world. He's only just stopping here. Don't forget that."

"I'm not forgetting that, daddy. I know he's different. That's why I like him." After a pause she added: "Nobody could have been nicer all through these days than he has been. He was like a brother."

McFarlane fixed a keen glance upon her. "Has he said anything to you? Did you come to an understanding?"

Her eyes fell. "Not the way you mean, daddy, but I think he—likes me. But do you know who he is? He's the son of W. W. Norcross, that big Michigan lumberman."

McFarlane started. "How do you know that?"

"Mr. Moore asked him if he was any relation to W. W. Norcross, and he said, 'Yes, a son.' You should have seen how that Moore girl changed her tune the moment he admitted that. She'd been very free with him up to that time. But when she found out he was a rich man's son she became as quiet and innocent as a kitten. I hate her! She's a deceitful snip!"

"Well, now, daughter, that being the case, it's all the more certain that he don't belong to our world, and you mustn't fix your mind on keeping him here."

"A girl can't help fixing her mind, daddy."

"Or changing it." He smiled a little. "You used to like Cliff. You liked him well enough to promise to marry him."

"I know I did. But I despise him now."

"Poor Cliff! But the thing we've got to guard against is old lady Belden's tongue. She and that Belden gang have it in for me, and all that has kept them from open war has been Cliff's relationship to you. They'll take a keen delight in making the worst of all this camping business." McFarlane was now very grave. "I wish your mother was here this minute. I guess we had better cut out this timber cruise and go right back."

"No, you mustn't do that. That would only make more talk. Go on with your plans. I'll stay here with you. It won't take you but a couple of days to do the work, and Wayland needs the rest."

"But suppose Cliff hears of this business between you and Norcross and comes galloping over the ridge?"

"Well, let him. He has no claim on me."

He rose uneasily. "It's all mighty risky business, and it's my fault. I should never have permitted you to start on this trip."

"Don't you worry about me, daddy. I'll pull through somehow. Anybody that knows me will understand how little there is in—in old lady Belden's gab. I've had a beautiful trip, and I won't let her nor anybody else spoil it for me."

Wayland was down on the bridge leaning over the rail listening to the song of the water.

McFarlane approached gravely, but when he spoke it was in his usual soft monotone. "Mr. Norcross," he began, with candid inflection, "I am very sorry to say it, but I wish you and my daughter had never started on this trip."

"I know what you mean, supervisor, and I feel as you do about it. Of course none of us foresaw any such complication as this, but now that we are snarled up in it we'll have to make the best of it. No one of us is to blame. It was all accidental."

The youth's frank words and his sympathetic voice disarmed McFarlane completely. Even the slight resentment he felt melted away. "It's no use saying 'if,'" he remarked at length. "What we've got to meet is Seth Belden's report—Berrie has cut loose from Cliff, and he's red headed already. When he drops on to this story, when he learns that I had to chase back after the horses and that you and Berrie were alone together for three days, he'll have a fine club to swing, and he'll swing it, and Alec will help him. They're all waiting a chance to get me, and they're mean enough to get me through my girl."

"What can I do?" asked Wayland.

McFarlane pondered. "I'll try to head off Marm Belden and I'll have a talk with Moore. He's a pretty reasonable chap."

"But you forget there's another tale bearer, Moore's daughter is with them."

"That's so. I'd forgotten her. Good Lord, we are in for it! There's no use trying to cover anything up."

Here was the place for Norcross to speak up and say, "Never mind, I'm going to ask Berrie to be my wife." But he couldn't do it. Something rose in his throat which prevented speech. A strange repugnance, a kind of sullen resentment at being forced into a declaration kept him silent, and McFarlane, disappointed, wondering and hurt, kept silence also.

Norcross was the first to speak. "Of course those who know your daughter will not listen for an instant to the story of an unclean old thing like Mrs. Belden."

"I'm not so sure about that," replied the father gloomily. "People always listen to such stories, and a girl always gets the worst of a situation like this. Berrie's been brought up to take care of herself, and she's kept clear of criticism so far, but with Cliff on edge and this old rip snooping around"— His mind suddenly changed. "Your being the son of a rich man won't help any. Why didn't you tell me who you were?"

"I didn't think it necessary. What difference does it make? I have nothing to do with my father's business. His notions of forest speculation are not mine."

"It would have made a difference with me, and it might have made a difference with Berrie. She mightn't have been so free with you at the start if she'd known who you were. You looked sick and kind of lonesome, and that worked on her sympathy."

"I was sick and I was lonesome, and she has been very sweet and lovely to me, and it breaks my heart to think that her kindness and your friendship should bring all this trouble and suspicion upon her. Let's go up to the Moore camp and have it out with them. I'll make any statement you think best."

"I reckon the less said about it the better," responded the older man. "I'm going up to the camp, but not to talk about my daughter."

"How can you help it? They'll force the topic."

"If they do I'll force them to let it alone," retorted McFarlane, but he went away disappointed and sorrowful.

When the supervisor returned from the camp something in his manner revealed the fact that the situation had not improved.

"They forced me into a corner," he said peevishly. "I lied out of one night, but they know that you were here last night. Of course they were respectful enough so long as I had an eye on them, but their tongues are wagging now."

As bedtime drew near Settle took a blanket and went to the corral, and Berrie insisted that her father and Wayland occupy the bunk.

Norcross protested, but the supervisor said: "Let her alone. She's better able to sleep on the floor than either of us."

This was perfectly true; but, in spite of his bruised and aching body, the youth would gladly have taken her place beside the stove. It seemed pitifully unjust that she should have this physical hardship in addition to her uneasiness of mind.

Berea suffered a restless night, the most painful and broken she had known in all her life. She acknowledged that Siona Moore was prettier and that she stood more nearly on Wayland's plane than herself, but the realization of this fact did not bring surrender. She was not of that temper. All her life she had been called upon to combat the elements, to hold her own amid rude men and inconsiderate women, and she had no intention of yielding her place to a pert coquette, no matter what the gossip might say.

"She shall not have her way with Wayland," she decided. "I know what she wants—she wants him at her side tomorrow. But I will not have it so. She is trying to get him away from me."

The more she dwelt on this the hotter her jealous fever burned. The floor on which she lay was full of knots. She could not lose herself in sleep, tired as she was. The planks no longer turned their soft spots to her flesh, and she rolled from side to side in torment.

Her plan of action was simple. "I shall go home tomorrow and take Wayland with me. I will not have him going with that girl; that's settled."

The hard trip of the day before had seemingly done him no permanent injury. On the contrary, a few hours' rest had almost restored him to his normal self. "Tomorrow he will be able to ride again." And this thought reconciled her to her hard bed. She did not look beyond the long, delicious day which they must spend in returning to the Springs.

She fell asleep at last and was awakened only by her father tinkering about the stove.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Narrow Escape of the Little Water Bug.

All of a Sudden He Saw That Speckled Whale.

"DID you ever notice the little water bugs shooting about on the surface of a stream in the woods?" asked daddy. "It is very interesting, children. Those bugs glide as smoothly as if they were skating, and they seem to zip across the shiny water as if shot from a bow. And they seem so tiny, too, to be flying about so alone.

"There was a little water bug once which had a very narrow escape. A narrow escape, you know, is to be almost caught by some great danger. For instance, sometimes naughty children have narrow escapes from spanking.

"But we are not talking of kiddies, but of water bugs, or, rather, of a particular water bug. This bug enjoyed a golden summer upon the surface of an Adirondack stream. The Adirondacks are lovely wooded mountains up in the northern part of New York state. Among these mountains are many swift streams which flow very fast down the slopes to rivers which eventually carry the water that was in the little creeks and brooks to the sea.

"In one of these streams dwelt the water bug, and he had a very fine time. All he had to do was to dart around on the surface of the water, which hurried along over its pebbly shallows while it sang its gurgling song of summer. The alders bent above the edges of the water, and over them the tall trees stood away up in the air that was scented with balsam and the odors of the pines. So that on hot days there was cooling shade except that at midday the golden shafts of sunlight pierced through the nodding leaves and revealed every pebble in the stream's bed under the clear rushing water.

"The little bug darted here and there, seeking exercise and happiness and finding both. Round about him there were two or three shallow little pools, still as mill ponds, and with minnows whisking about in them. The bug used to skate about on these pools because he left such a pretty wake behind him. You must notice this wake the next time you see a water bug in a still pool.

"But there was one great, dark, still pool that the water bug wanted to glide on, but some of the older bugs warned him against it. 'There's a great big speckled whale in that pool,' they told him, 'and he will eat you sure.'

"But the little bug didn't quite believe it. And one day he ventured out on that still, dark water that was so smooth and started to glide.

"When, all of a sudden, he saw that speckled whale, which was a speckled trout, right under him. And he hastened away as quickly as he could glide.

"You see, it was a narrow escape, children, because that trout was asleep. Had he been awake he would have snapped up that bug for dinner."

LITERARY

IS THE GERMAN WAR MACHINE RUNNING DOWN.

At the beginning of the war the Germans filled the world with a kind of awe. They seemed to have everything, and in a day millions of them, fully armed and equipped, were on the march. No such organization had ever been dreamed of in the world, and the description of the tramp of German armies into Belgium and France oppressed the mind with a sense of irresistible force. They were not a people, they were an incredible engine composed of human beings, who from infancy had been trained to subordinate their wills and sink their own individualities. This machine was fully wound up on the 30th of July. A man motoring from Carlsbad to Paris passed through solid masses of German troops for three hours before he reached the frontier; and after he had passed it he did not see a French soldier for ten kilometres. When the war engine was started the dates of its arrival in Warsaw, Paris and London were advertised. But presently, something went wrong with it, and it was discovered that there was, after all, nothing divine or superhuman about it. It was only a machine like any other. The most remarkable thing about it, however, was its control of the mind of the German people. Individual thinking seemed to cease, the people to be incapable of seeing, believing or thinking anything except what was ordered.

The machine has reached neither Warsaw, Paris, nor London, but it has maintained battle lines of a thousand miles on the east and six hundred miles on the west, which have swayed to and fro now for ten months, and it has mutilated and inflicted carnage without precedent. The German troops, in solid masses, have faced certain death, sometimes literally blindfolded, and the wonder of it still effects many people with woe. Marvellous as it all is, a good deal has nevertheless happened which could only have proceeded from a counsel of desperation, either for the purpose of heartening their own people or of terrifying the enemy; in accordance with the German theory that war "must be directed to the destruction of the whole intellectual and material resources of the enemy."—From "Impressions of the English Attitude Toward the War," by Frederick W. Whitridge, in the August Fiction Number of Scribner's.

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD.

Nell had become wary since the agents had descended upon her, but when she looked out of the window and saw a young girl standing on the porch, she opened the door.

"Mrs. Morton, I believe?" The girl was pink with embarrassment. "I am Callie Thompson. I came over here——" She stopped and began to finger her package nervously.

"Come in," said Nell kindly. The girl slid into a chair and taking off her gloves began to untie her package.

"I am trying to earn money to pay my way through school this winter and mother thought perhaps you would like to have me embroider you a set of table linen. She said rich people entertained a great deal and that if you saw my work perhaps——" The voice died away and her hands trembled as she took out a napkin with an M embroidered in the corner.

"Did you do this M purposely for me?" Nell took the napkin and examined the work.

"Mother had those napkins and she told me to embroider one for a sample. They are new, have never been washed but once. An aunt gave them to her for Christmas."

"If I wanted them would she sell them?" asked Nell in surprise.

"She would do anything to help me go to school. You see I am trying to fit myself to be a stenographer; then we could be quite comfortable together."

"How much do you want for them?" asked Nell, wishing she really had a fortune, that she might help the girl.

"My aunt paid $5 for the napkins, and I work the initials for ten cents apiece." The girl looked wistfully up into Nell's face.

"That is very reasonable for the work, surely. I have some table linen that I want marked. I will give you that to do, and we will see about the napkins later."

Here Nell was interrupted by another knock at the door.

"Why, how are you, Callie Thompson?" said a cheery, plump old woman as Nell opened the door. "Tell Mrs. Morton who I am, will you?"

"It's Grandma Peters," said the girl timidly.

"Come in, Mrs. Peters." Nell sighed as she observed that the woman carried a bundle. The old lady waddled to a chair by the stove.

"Well, Callie, what you up to" she began. "I'm trying to sell one of my rag rugs. I heard say that rag rugs were stylish and that rich people were buying them, so I thought I'd come over and see. Folks here are above rag rugs. They have thrown out rag carpet and they think rag rugs are the same thing; don't know they are stylish, you see. Now, if I could say Mrs. Morton bought a rag rug—she's just come into a fortune and she wants to be in style—I'd get so many orders I could pay off the mortgage on my home." She drew off her mittens and began fumbling with the knot in the string around her bundle, but her hands were cold and she made poor headway.

"Let me untie it for you, Grandma," said the girl, going to her side.

"Thank you, my dear; I forgot my specs; my eyes are not so young as they once were.

"This one is blue. I get my neighbors to give me all their old blue jeans; they're such a pretty blue and heavy enough to lie smooth on the floor." The girl spread out the rug for her.

"That's very pretty." Nell bent over and felt of the thickness. "You leave it here and I will try and find a place for it where it will fit in."

"Thank you; that's kind. The price is tacked on it.

"Well, I'll not hinder you any more," she said briskly. "I'm glad you like it," and the old woman rose to go.

"Come tomorrow and I'll have the napkins ready for you to embroider," said Nell to the girl as she left.

"There are agents and agents," she thought as they closed the gate behind them.

Household Hints

NOVEL VASE

This is a new and unusual way of arranging roses:

Cut a piece of cardboard to fit a deep baking dish, then punch holes in the cardboard and stick the roses through these. The holes should be spaced about one inch apart.

BAKING HINT

If you will give your cakes a few light taps on the table just before putting them into the oven to bake they will never fall. This will cause all the air bubbles to come to the surface and break so that there is nothing to cause the cake to fall in the oven.

TOMATO BOUILLON

One peck tomatoes, twelve small onions, three stalks celery, two peppers (mangoes will answer), one bunch parsley. Cook well, put through sieve, put back on stove, let come to boil, then stir in one-half cup sugar, one-fourth cup salt, one-half cup flour mixed with water (as thickening), one-half cup butter. Cook good; seal while boiling hot.

THE TABLE

Fried Beets, Russian Style—Dip sliced beets into well-beaten egg and then into cracker crumbs. Season by sprinkling with plenty of salt and a little pepper. Fry in butter.

Cherry Pudding—One cup sugar, one cup sweet milk, piece of butter size of egg, two teaspoons baking powder, flour enough to make batter a little stiffer than cake. Dressing: Two cups cherries, one cup sugar, small piece butter, two cups boiling water. Pour dressing over batter and bake three-fourths hour. When done the pudding will be on top and the dressing underneath. Be sure to bake in pan large enough. Serve with sauce or cream. This is good with many other kinds of fruit.

Asparagus Salad—If the stalks of canned asparagus are drained and rinsed they can be used as well as the fresh; cut rings one-third inch wide from a bright green pepper. Place several stalks of asparagus and three long thin slices of cucumber in each ring, arrange on lettuce and serve with French dressing to which has been added one-half tablespoon of tomato catsup.

Berry Shortcake—One-half cup sugar, one egg, butter size of egg, one cup sweet milk, two cups flour sifted with two teaspoons baking powder; mix well. Bake in layers. Put any kind of berries or even sliced apples between. Serve warm with sugar and cream.

Peach Delight—One quart flour, three teaspoons baking powder, two tablespoons sugar, one-half cup shortening, two teaspoons salt, milk, one egg. Peaches fresh or canned. Sift flour, salt, sugar and baking powder together, rub shortening lightly into them with finger tips, add enough milk to make a soft dough. Drop mixture into gem pans. Place one-half peach on each one, fill cavities with sugar and bake in hot oven twenty-five minutes. Serve with whipped cream. Sufficient for twenty "delights."

Caramel Banana Pie—Put butter size of walnut into frying pan, when melted add one cup brown sugar and one-fourth cup milk, cook until thick. While cooking stir into a pan the yolk of one egg (leaving the white for frosting), three tablespoons of flour and two cups of milk. Add to first part and cook until thick. Put into crust which has been prepared before and slice a banana over top. Whip the white of the egg stiff and add two teaspoons of sugar, spread over the top and put in oven till a light brown.

Onion Gravy—One cup finely chopped onion, browned in one tablespoonful of lard or drippings and two tablespoonfuls butter, season to suit taste, two tablespoonfuls flour, brown but don't burn, one pint of water and milk mixed. Cook until done. Serve hot with above. Pan full. It's a meal in itself and good.

Cream of Potato Soup—Slice two large potatoes and one medium sized onion, add one-fourth teaspoonful celery seed, pour on boiling water and cook thoroughly. Then add one pint of rich milk and season with salt and paprika.

RECORDER HAND PERFORMS EARLY MORNING WEDDING

Recorder Fred W. Hand, of the borough, performed an early morning wedding today, uniting in marriage Miss Mary Ricci, of Somerset street, and J. Orpie Renaldo, of Richmond street. The ceremony was performed in the North Plainfield police court room at 7 o'clock, after which the couple left town on a honeymoon.

The ceremony was performed thus early in the morning to accommodate the bridegroom, who wanted to get started on his wedding trip as soon as possible. While both the parties are of the Catholic faith, the groom, in requesting the Recorder to peform the ceremony, stated that he preferred to be married by a civil magistrate. Only the necessary witnesses were present.

BLOODHOUND FAILS TO TRACE THIEF AT BASKING RIDGE

Basking Ridge, July 24—Though a bloodhound was put on the trail, no trace has been found of the burglar who robbed the store of T. C. Henry, in Front street, Wednesday night. The dog, which belonged to Charles Berner, of Gladstone, lost the trail on the railroad right of way.

The store is wired for a burglar alarm and is connected with Mr. Henry's home. He was roused by the ringing of the bell and going to the store saw a man at work on the safe. He roused his neighbors, but before help arrived the man jumped out of a rear window by which he had entered and made good his escape. Nothing was taken.

Where Quality Counts

The reputation of a druggist depends largely upon the quality and the class of drugs and other merchandise he is known to sell.

Quality is the first thought here. The perfect quality of all our many lines of drug store goods has created a reputation of value to us.

Medicines, drugs, chemicals, toilet articles, rubber goods, sick-room supplies and nursery helps—all are of the best; all are carefully selected for class and grade. And this perfect quality costs the buyer no more than the unreliable kind.

FRIENDS DISCUSS PEACE QUESTION

ELOQUENT ADDRESSES

Various Speakers Strongly Oppose War and Increase of National Defense—The Doctrine of "Second Chance" Ably Presented.

Members of the Society of Friends listened to some interesting talks at a conference held in their meeting-house on Watchung avenue yesterday afternoon. The conference was conducted by the Joint Fellowship Circle, of New York and vicinity, the general theme for discussion being these words from the Scriptures: "Not By Might Nor By Power, But By My Spirit."

As the subject suggested, peace held a prominent place in the remarks made by the speakers, but digressions from this topic were made and other subjects were treated. Nelson Smith, of New York, a well known Bible student, who has made a close study of the various religions of the world, preached a doctrine of tolerance towards all religions as well as the different denominations among Christians.

The doctrine of the "second chance" came in for a great deal of attention on his part. Mr. Smith did not declare positively that he believed in this, yet left the inference that he did. According to his statement three-quarters of the world believe they will be given another chance to prepare for the Kingdom of Heaven, or in the reincarnation of the soul, as he termed it. He declared it a belief among many men that it would be unfair in the Judge of the world to condemn men and women who had not had an opportunity of learning the truths of God. He spoke twice, closing his second series of remarks by repeating a blessing or benediction which he said is in use throughout the world by men of all religions. It was very impressive, and he said it is practically alike among all peoples except that in place of the word "God" the believers in religions other than Christianity substitute "Mohammed" or "Zoroaster," etc.

Miss Anna Curtis, also of New York, urged her hearers to be firm in their resolve not to fight. She related a few of the circumstances surrounding the Friends or Quakers living in England who have steadfasly refused to take up arms in this great world war, yet who are among the first to respond to calls for assistance to aid the sick and wounded and are in the forefront when it comes to Red Cross work, feeding the interned Germans, caring for the poor and homeless and occupying positions of danger in the war zone, having no other idea in mind than to alleviate suffering and to help their fellows. Miss Curtis said that Friends are opposed to the recently suggested plan for a national enlistment and at the quarterly meeting of Friends, which she had just attended, a petition had been signed and sent to the President protesting against enlarging the national defense.

Paul Furnas, another member of the circle, spoke three times. His last remarks followed the same trend as those of Miss Curtis, and he read an extract from a Friends' publication in which the young men of the society were urged to remain firm in their opposition to war and enlistment in England and not to take up arms.

Miss Margaret F. Vail, of this city, read a paper which bore on the general theme of discussion. Her paper referred to Bible incidents where victories were won, not by might, but by the Lord's power—Gideon's bloodless victory over his enemy and David's fight with Goliath.

No formal action on war or peace was taken at the meeting yesterday afternoon, but there was much food for thought and it may be taken for granted that no amount of fiery war talk or even ridicule or criticism will induce the Friends of this country to alter their belief as regards war. Other speakers were Charles Lawrence and Jonathan Pierce, also members of the circle, who spoke on general topics.

MOTORCYCLE ON FIRE.

The fire department was called out at 9:10 Saturday night to extinguish a motorcycle fire on East Fourth street, near Sycamore street. A motorcycle had caught fire from some unknown cause and an alarm was rung in from box 61. Before the firemen could arrive bystanders had put the fire out and the motorcycle had been taken away. The fire department did not even get the name of the motorcycle owner.

FIXING THE BLAME FOR CATASTROPHE

Still Removing Bodies From Wreck of Overturned Excursion Boat.

Washington, July 26.—Attorney General Gregory announced today that he had telegraphed instructions to the Chicago branch of the Bureau of Investigation directing that an inquiry be made into the sinking of the Steamer Eastland to ascertain whether any federal criminal statute has been violated.

Chicago, July 26.—Federal and State authorities today took up the task of fixing the responsibility for the overturning of the steamship Eastland at her dock in the Chicago River last Saturday in which probably from 1,400 to 1,500 of the 2,408 excursionists aboard were drowned.

State's Attorney Hoyne began the preparation of evidence for the Cook county grand jury on the theory that the United States inspection bureau erred when it granted a license to the boat to engage in trans-lake business. Mr. Hoyne declared that he was ignoring the question of the filling of the water ballast compartments, and declared that evidence he had in hand already indicated that the Eastland was an unsafe vessel regarless of the diligence of the crew in complying with regulations.

Dickerson N. Hoover, acting supervising inspector of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service, and Captain Charles H. Westcott of Detroit, joined Inspectors Mansfield and Nichols in the examination of the crew of the Eastland to determine whether there had been negligence in operation, and especially if the water ballast compartments were properly filled at the time the Eastland went over on its side. They expect to have this question decided today when every witness held by the city will be examined.

The theory that there was a sudden shift of weight is not credited by them.

Coroner Hoffman announced that he will not hold an inquest until the work of searching for the dead is completed. This was continued throughout the night and today an additional squad of twenty-five divers was sent into the hull to recover bodies believed to be there. The number of bodies recovered so far is 810, and there is a possibility that almost 200 more will be found.

Plans for determining a way of raising the Eastland will be made at a conference, which will be attended by Acting Mayor Moorehouse, State's Attorney Hoyne, Chief of Police Healey, and Coroner Hoffman. Immediately after the conference, at which investigation plans also will be made, Coroner Hoffman says he will again call together the jury which was impanelled Saturday, and a trip to the Eastland will be made. The jurors will make a thorough inspection and then adjourn indefinitely.

An effort will be made to complete the identification of bodies at the Second Regiment Armory today. Only a few remain unidentified. Early estimates of the loss are being constantly lowered, but there is only speculation to indicate the number still in the vessel and in the river.

A fund of $300,000 will be ready tomorrow for general relief work, it was announced. Relief committees which were appointed early yesterday took up their work early today. The finance committee will meet in the mayor's office to complete the plans for raising a fund of $200,000 to which the Western Electric Company has added $100,000.

BOROUGH POLICE CASES.

Three arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct were made in the borough Saturday night. The offenders were Anton Stroke, 19 years old, of 813 Netherwood avenue; Joseph Bishop, 28 years old, of 229 Prospect place, and James Carey, 23 years old, of 1318 Woodlahd avenue. Stroke was fined $5, which he paid, while in the other two cases Recorder Hand suspended sentence.

Roundsman Keller made the arrests. He charged that the three young men were parading down Somerset street arm in arm, and when they got to Pearl street they crashed into the hedge in front of the French property, breaking and injuring it.

MRS. WANDELL'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Cornelia Wandell, mother of Mrs. Fred C. Lounsbury, who died Saturday, will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Lounsbury home, 129 Plainfield avenue. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring will have charge of the services. There will be no bearers, and interment will be made in Hillside cemetery.

AFTERNOON ROBBERY AT VAN EPS' HOME

Mrs. Fred VanEps, of 76 Norwood avenue, reported to the police at 9:30 o'clock last night that her home had been ransacked during the family's afternoon visit to Asbury Park, many articles being taken. According to the list provided by Mrs. VanEps, the following articles are missing: Amethyst stickpin valued at $12; three hatpins, one gold ring with nine diamonds in it valued at $110; one silver card-case, two soft hats, one new suit, one safety razor, one pair white canvas ties.

Mrs. VanEps left for Asbury Park at 1:30 in the afternoon and discovered the robbery immediately upon her return at 9 o'clock. The house was ransacked from top to bottom, but the thieves left no clue. The police departments of Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Newark, Jersey City, Westfield and Jersey City Central Railroad headquarters were notified of the robbery, but up to the present time nothing has developed.

HORSE DROPS DEAD AFTER INJURING TWO

Mrs. Edward Clark and John Fisher Figure in Lively Runaway Accidents.

Mrs. Edward Clark, of Park avenue, South Plainfield, was in a runaway accident this morning in which she sustained minor injuries. The horse ran away a second time as it was being driven home, and after going some distance fell dead near the Spicer plant in South Plainfield.

Mrs. Clark was returning to her home on the Hardy farm after having driven Mr. Clark to the Lehigh Valley station at South Plainfield, when the horse took fright on Oak Tree road, and expert horsewoman as Mrs. Clark is, the animal got the best of her and upset the carriage. Mrs. Clark was thrown out and lay in a half stupor. William Kellogg, who lives near the scene of the accident, went to Mrs. Clark's assistance and drove her to the Hardy farm in his automobile.

In the meantime Rural Free Delivery Mail Carrier Lambert had caught the horse. Mr. Lambert notified one of the Clark employes, John Fisher, to go after the rig. This Fisher did, finding the carriage little the worse for the upset and the horse very nervous, but apparently unhurt. Fisher undertook to drive the animal home, but the horse was so excited that it dashed away, got beyond the driver's control and made for the South Plainfield railroad station again. Crossing the tracks it fell dead near the Spicer plant. Fisher sustained a few bruises in the second accident, but was not badly injured.

BIG THRONG VISITED MUIR AT LAKE HOPATCONG

Twenty-six members of the West End Reminiscent Club, under the leadership of Commodore "Bill" Jaeger, visited Tommy Muir at Camp Ram's Horn, Lake Hopatcong, yesterday, Muir being outside guard of the prominent West End organization. A similar group will pay their respects to the Plainfield camp conductor next Sunday, the number of members signifying their intention of taking the annual excursion this year being so large that it was necessary to divide them into two groups.

Muir acted as host to the party while it was at the lake yesterday, dinner being served at Camp Ram's Horn. After the excursionists had satisfied their appetites with juicy morsels pleasing to the palate they held a reunion on the lake's shores and later enjoyed outings to various interesting points well known to members of the club who have made the trip in previous years. Some indulged in fishing and bathing while others enjoyed various other pastimes at Muir's camp.

LOYAL DAUGHTERS' OUTING.

The third annual outing of the Loyal Daughters' class of Hope chapel Bible school to Palisades Park on the Hudson, will take place Saturday. The trip will be made by trolley without change. A special car will leave West Front street and Grant avenue at 8 o'clock, the postoffice at 8:05 and the Watchung avenue transfer station at 8:15. The destination of the class will be the same as last year.

TEMPERATURE REPORT.

The temperature report from The tate Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 66 degrees; 11 a. m., 74 degrees; 1 p. m., 84 degrees.

FEAT OF SUBMARINE

English Boat Penetrates Into Constantinople Harbor Doing Great Damage—Lull Continues on Western Front.

London, July 26.—A British submarine has eluded the Turkish warships in the Dardanelles and the Sea of Marmora, penetrated into the harbor on Constantinople, sunk two of the Sultan's gunboats and a steamer, and returned in safety to its base. Details of this exploit, one of the most daring carried out by a submarine commander, reached here today in a despatch from Athens.

According to a Mitylene message, the submarine also sank in the Sea of Marmora a Turkish transport. The Athens despatches state that the submarine fired a torpedo at a transport anchored at Tophane, a suburb of Constantinople, between Galata and Peravy. The torpedo missed the transport, but hit the wharf, completely wrecking it. The Mitylene despatch says that the torpedo sunk the transport while it was discharging troops, and it sank within a few minutes.

Athens, July 26.—British aviators bombarded Smyrna yesterday, destroying the gas works and patrol depots, according to Mitylene despatches today.

Paris, July 26.—The lull in infantry fighting showed no break during the night, according to the official communique issued by the War Office this afternoon. It follows:

"There were reported in the course of the night only some artillery engagements between Aix Noulette and Souchez, as well as in the region of Soissons, a conflict with Grenades from trench to trench in the Ailly for-

FIGHT OVER WOMAN HAD SERIOUS RESULT

One Italian Badly Injured and Two Others Were Sent to County Jail.

An Italian scuffle on St. Mary's avenue last night resulted in one man being seriously injured and two more being sent to the county jail by Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning. Chief Kiely, accompanied by Patrolmen Kelly, Henderschott and Fritts, went to the scene in response to a telephone call and found a throng of excited foreigners in front of the house located at 736 St. Mary's avenue. Gaining what information they could from the assemblage the policemen arrested Samuel Jagins, of 736 St. Mary's avenue, and Frank Sandy, of 738 St. Mary's avenue.

They were committed to a cell and Sandy bled profusely from wounds about the head. One man had wielded a razor with telling effect, Sandy's ear being nearly severed. During the progress of the Sandy-Jagins hearing this morning, Joseph Parretti, of 744 St. Mary's avenue, gave himself up. He was sought as the instigator of the fight which developed over the three men's affections for a single woman. Parretti was fined $50 with the option of spending ninety days in the county jail and Jagins got a sentence of $10 or forty days. Sandy was allowed to go on a suspended sentence.

ANNOUNCE MARRIAGE OF ROBERT BROWNING COREY

Announcement of the marriage of Katharine McGillivrae Kilham to Robert Browning Corey, of this city, has been received here. The wedding took place at West Newfield, Me., on Tuesday, July 20. Mr. and Mrs. Corey will be at home at 930 Hillside avenue after September 1.

Mr. Corey is the head of the R. B. Corey Company, 39 Cortlandt street, New York. He is a well-known golfer and a member of the Plainfield Country Club.

MULLLIN WAS BUSY.

Tommy Mullin, playing second for the Rahways Saturday, against the Elizabeth baseball team, scored a run, made a hit and handled four chances with only one slip, and on Sunday, performing for the Franklins against the Atlantic Highlands A. C., he made a hit and handled eight chances without making an error. He also figured in three fast double plays via the Christopherson to Mullin to Cooley route.

SITUATION BLACKER IN BRIDGEPORT STRIKE

Remington Company Refuses to Take Back Striking Machinists and Others Quit.

Bridgeport, July 25.—The Remington plants this morning refused to take back the striking workmen, according to J. J. Keppler, vice-president of the International Association of Machinists. As a result conferences scheduled with the heads of four other plants which are tied up were called off. Structural iron workers who returned to work may be called out again, according to Keppler.

The strike situation here looms blacker than ever today. More than 600 carpenters will be called out this afternoon in sympathy with the strike now on, in an effort to completely tie up the construction work under way for the Remington Company. Both the iron workers and millwrights who had returned to work quit early today when they learned that the Remington Company had refused to take back the striking machinists.

LOCAL GUARDSMEN BEGIN THEIR WORK

Mt. Gretna, Pa., July 26.—Adhering strictly to the essential barricks regulations, the camp of instruction for United States army and State militia cavalry opened here yesterday, without ceremonies of any kind. The New Jersey delegation included Troop D., comprised of Plainfield and Hoboken; Troops A. and C., the "Essex Troop," of Newark, and Troop B., of Red Bank. The New Jersey campers will remain here for one week and are participating in the regular work of the United States army cavalrymen, using government horses and equipment.

The Plainfielders, as well as the rest of the New Jersey cavalrymen, and those from Maryland and Pennsylvania, were out early yesterday morning, drilling in close and extended order by platoons and full troops under the guidance of United States army instructors. Clouds of dust throughout Conewago valley told of the gruelling work of the officers, troopers and horses.

Announcement of duty by Colonel W. E. Wilder, commander of the camp, indicates that the drills will be along the lines of daily progression, from small units of horsemen to battalions, concluding next Friday with a big manoeuvre extending over many miles of territory.

Included in the total of 224 New Jersey Guard cavalrymen now in camp are fifty-five from Troop D, including twenty-one from Plainfield. The Jersey guardsmen made the trip to camp without incident, taking with them 175 horses and twenty mules, heavy tentage and field rations, ranges for one day as the government rations and articles were not issued until this morning, when the tour of instruction formally began.

GARAGE AND AUTOMOBILE BURNED IN LIVELY BLAZE

A frame garage on the property at 1026 West Seventh street, occupied by the Rev. Federick J. Hubach, took fire Saturday shortly after noon and before the firemen could arrive the building was consumed and likewise a new Ford touring car, which had just been placed inside. The cause of the fire is a mystery. The loss amounted to about $650.

Harry Gilmore and family, of East Millstone, had just driven to the Rev. Mr. Hubach's home for a visit, making the trip in their new Ford touring car. Mr. Hubach backed his own car out of the garage to permit his guest to store his car therein. Mr. Hubach said that he had just left the garage and gone into the house for luncheon when his little daughter cried out that the garage was on fire, and looking out he found the small building a mass of flames. An alarm was turned in, but everything was hopelessly burned before the firemen could get there.

C. E. Borden, of 1045 West Seventh street, is the owner of the property. The loss on the garage is placed at $150, and on the car $500.

WAS STOPPED AND CREW ORDERED OFF, AS CARGO OF FLAX WAS DECLARED TO BE CONTRABAND OF WAR.

VESSEL WAS HOMEWARD BOUND FROM RUSSIA

Stocks Take Tumble in New York on Receipt of First News But Recover When Circumstances Become Known—Washington Has No Official Advice as to Torpedoing as Yet—Crew All Safe in Irish Port.

New York, July 26.—Cable advices have been received to the effect that the American freight steamer Leelanlaw, of 1,370 tons, has been torpedoed by a German submarine. Cable advices state that the entire crew has been saved. The steamer sailed from Galveston on May 5 for New York and left this port on May 17 for Kirkhead, where she arrived on June 2. She sailed again from the latter port on June 26 for Archangel, arriving there early in July. The latter part of July she sailed from Archangel for Belfast. The steamer is a freighter and the agents are A. H. Bull & Company, of New York.

A press despatch from London says: "The American steamship Leelanlaw from Archangel, July 8, for Belfast with a cargo of flax, was sunk today by a German submarine off the northwest coast of Scotland. All the members of the crew were saved and brought into Kirkwall in their own boats."

A later report says that the vessel was early this morning off the northwest coast of Scotland on her way to Belfast and was approached by a German submarine, the commander of which ordered the captain on the Leelanlaw to stop. The commander of the submarine then put a crew aboard the ship and inquired after the character of the cargo and was told that it was flax. He immediately declared it contraband and ordered the crew to the boats. After they put off from the ship she was torpedoed and went to the bottom.

An official statement of the German government issued April 18 last, declared flax to be contraband of war.

There was an abrupt change on Wall street immediately after the publication of the cables giving information of the torpedoing of the Leelanlaw. Bethlehem steel dropped from its high record of 222 to 207½; Studebaker, after selling at 82¾, broke to 75; Crucible steel fell from 47⅞ to 41½; steel common, which was in demand in the late forenoon at 64⅞, dropped to 62⅞; American coal products fell from 143 to 134½; American beet sugar declined from 53⅝ to 49½; American-Canadian sold down from 61½ to 56; American locomotive dropped from 53 to 48; the coppers yielded from 1 to 2 points, and leading railroad issues sold at sharp concessions. These losses occurred within a period of fifteen minutes.

After the sharp break in the late forenoon a steadier tone developed and there was a disappearance of the acute nervousness caused by the torpedoing of the Leelanlaw, most of the securities again reaching the points at which they opened this morning.

At the office of the cotton firm of Harris, Irby & Vose it was stated that the Harby Steamship Company, represented only its own interests and was entirely American in character. At the office of the steamship agents, A. H. Bull & Co., it was stated that the Leelanlaw was under the command of Capt. D. B. Delk, an American, whose home is in Philadelphia, and that a big majority of the vessel's crew of 32 were Americans.

Washington, July 26.—The State Department at noon today declared it had received no word of the torpedoing of the American steamer Leelanlaw by a German submarine off the Scotch coast. The department is anxiously awaiting confirmation of the press dispatches. The report when it comes probably will be made by Consul General Washington at Liverpool.

LOOK FOR SURPRISE IN MERNAGH TRIAL

Accused Policeman Will Be Arraigned Before Common Council Tonight.

In accordance with his demand for a public trial, Patrolman William Mernagh, who was recently suspended on the strength of certain charges preferred against him by Chief of Police Kiely, will be arraigned before the Common Council in the city building tonight. The city's case will be prosecuted by Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, while former Mayor G. W. V. Moy, who appointed Mernagh to the force four years ago, will appear as attorney for the defense. What the nature of the defense will be is unknown, but inasmuch as Mernagh has made a staunch denial of all ten counts in the complaint against him unusual developments are not unlikely.

Among other things he is charged with neglecting to report a "speakeasy" conducted by "Slippery" Tompkins in Fairchild's alley, to the department, and with threatening to shoot any man who squealed on him.

President Clay, of the Council, will preside at the trial and the Council will act as a jury. The procedure will be similar to that of a criminal court with the exception of the limiting of the judge's power. All objections to the submission of evidence will be submitted to the Council for a vote, instead of allowing the presiding official to rule out and accept evidence. Should he be found guilty Mernagh is liable to permanent or temporary suspension, this to be determined by the Council after the hearing. On the other hand, if he succeeds in clearing himself, Mernagh will be entitled to full pay from the time he was suspended.

O. Z. T.'S DISPLAY THEIR NEUTRALITY

Alfred Day, of Front street, is absolutely neutral and President Wilson's petition to the nation has not been in vain. Alfred is the son of Editor George W. Day, of the Weekly Call, and also a member of the O. Z. T. Fraternity. On Saturday afternoon it happened that some of the members of the O. Z. T. Fraternity, among which Alfred was one, were aboard the Albany, of the Albany Day Line, as she plowed her way through the waters of the Hudson River toward West Point. The Albany was really headed for the city of Albany, but the O. Z. T.'s and their women friends, who must be included, planned to get off at West Point.

Enchanted by the scenery of the "Rhine of America," the O. Z. T.'s and their friends seated in a circle on the upper deck of the boat were engaged in song. On the left hand side of the river the Palisades sloped down almost to the water's edge and a train on the West Shore Railroad was following its track which twined along their base. On the eastern shore was a little town, its white buildings glittering in the sun. The setting at this point evidently reminded a personage of German nationality, who along with the rest of the throng on the upper deck of the Albany had been enjoying the singing of the O. Z. T.'s, of some spot along the River Rhine, whose blue waters wend their way through his Fatherland, and he was moved to approach the group and ask them to sing "The Watch on the Rhine."

Whereupon Alfred took it upon himself to be the spokesman for the group. "Sing it yourself," Alfred said, "we are absolutely neutral."

At the conclusion of this reply Alfred arose to his feet and commenced singing "The Star Spangled Banner." The rest of the group also arose and joined Alfred and shortly everybody on the upper deck of the boat with bared heads were joining in the song.

The Albany reach West Point at 5:20 in the evening. The party remained there for an hour returning on the Robert Fulton. The following members of the O. Z. T.'s composed the party: George Martin, H. E. Giddes, Benjamin Dodwell, W. Fredericks, George Vliet, Arthur Barto and Peter Benson.

Their guests were Miss Ruth Voorhees, of this place; the Misses L. and S. Holt, of Plainfield; the Misses A. Quiggen and H. Bucklin, of Brooklyn; the Misses H. Cowley and D. Brokaw, of Plainfield, and Miss V. Smith, of Newark.

CONFERENCE ON DEFENSE PLANNED

Will Be Held in Washington October 4-7, Following G. A. R. Encampment.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

Consideration of Measures to Be Taken by Congress and the States to Increase Country's Efficiency the Main Topic.

Washington, D. C., July 26—Plans for the Conference on National Defense, to be held here under auspices of the National Defense League, October 4-7, immediately following the Grand Army of the Republic Encampment, are under full headway. Many thousands of the veterans who attend the G. A. R. Encampment will remain in Washington for the sessions of the Conference on National Defense, which will be presided over by Representative Julius Kahn, of California, chairman, and U. S. Senator Robert F. Broussard, of Louisiana, vice chairman, of the National Defense League.

While the conference will be held under the auspices of the National Defense League it will not be a convention of the League, but a great gathering of representative citizens from every State in the Union, who will consider what measure must be taken by Congress and the States to increase the navy, army, National Guard and coast defenses—to put the country in a military and naval position where it will be able to maintain its dignity and security throughout the world.

The National Defense Conference is unique in that all citizens of the United States, including readers of this newspaper, are invited to attend the conference. Any citizen, man or woman, from any section of this country, can attend the conference as an accredited delegate and participate in the deliberations on national defense simply by sending his or her name and address to the National Defense League, Riggs Building, Washington, D. C., with notification of his or her intention to take part in the conference. No other appointment or credentials are necessary to participate in the conference.

This will be the first great national gathering of any kind in this country where everybody is invited to attend.

A large number of members of Congress, governors of States, members of State Legislatures, mayors of cities, officers of commercial organizations, editors of American newspapers, veterans and members of patriotic organizations, and hundreds of prominent citizens from every part of the country already have signified their intention of attending the conference.

The program, now being arranged, will last four days, and will include some of the greatest speakers and men of national fame in the country. Many prominent men have accepted invitations to speak at the conference. The speakers' program is to be announced later. It will include Cabinet officers, governors, senators, representatives and many prominent citizens.

From the immense amount of mail concerning the conference now being sent to the National Defense League here it is believed the conference will be the greatest convention of any kind ever held in the United States. There is a nation-wide interest in the National Defense problem. A statement issued today by the National Defense League said:

"After more than two years of persistent propaganda and a large amount of work by the National Defense League, which was the first and pioneer defense organization, we rejoice that the people have at last waked up to the necessity for adequate preparation.

"The Washington conference will focus the attention of the country on what all patriotic Americans now desire Congress to do, to put the country on a defense basis, strong enough to protect our republic, our citizens, our ocean commerce, our world-wide interests, and the honor of our flag. We are not in such a position now.

"We must have a larger navy, a larger army, a larger National Guard, more coast fortifications, more naval ships, more field guns, more submarines, more rifles, and more ammunition of every kind."

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR EDWIN CAMPBELL MARTIN

The funeral of Edwin C. Martin, editor and author, who died at his home in Watchung on Friday, was held yesterday morning at 11 o'clock from his late residence. Rev. E. W. Abbey, of Smithtown, L. I., had charge of the services. There were no pall bearers and interment was made privately in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Martin was one of the owners of McClure's magazine. He was born in Hamilton, O., sixty-five years ago and after being graduated from Dartmouth College in 1871, took up the practice of law in Cincinnati.

He frequently contributed to the newspapers and magazines, and in 1880 bought the Richmond Telegram in Indiana, and publishing it as a daily, ran it successfully for ten years. During this time he became an influential writer in favor of low tariff and civil service reform.

In 1893 he acquired an interest in McClure's Magazine, and for the first seven years of its life, was an active editor. After he retired from business, he devoted his efforts to literary and research work, and published a number of stories and essays. His last book was "Our Own Weather," which gave a scientific exposition of the weather of this country.

Mr. Martin was a member of the Authors', McDowell and Dartmouth Clubs.

POLISH MASS MEETING TO AID WAR SUFFERERS

The two Polish societies of this city, the John Sobieski Society and the Falcons, held a joint mass meeting in Social Hall yesterday, for the purpose of discussing plans whereby aid might be rendered the war sufferers in the stricken kingdom of Poland. While no definite plan of action was decided upon, it is thought that the system used by the Polish people in Newark may be followed here. In the Essex county city, tags were sold at all street corners by Polish women, the money received being turned over to the stricken people of Galicia.

Plainfield, N. J., July 26, 1915.

SAFETY FIRST.

According to official report, in the year just closed 16,500,000 passengers were transported over the Southern Railroad with but one fatality, and that was the result of violation of the company's rules against standing on a car platform. Even this excellent showing is excelled by the Pennsylvania Railroad which reports the carrying of 180,000,000 passengers during the past year without a single fatal accident. A number of other railroads are reported to have made an equally good record, and the conclusion inevitably follows that travel by railroad in America was never so safe as now, notwithstanding its vast increase in volume.

There has been no little killing by railway trains, however, for which reckless automobile drivers were responsible and of which the railroads were entirely guiltless. Carriage drivers long ago learned to "stop, look and listen," but too many impatient automobile drivers, confiding in their speed, insist on dashing over the crossings ahead of rapidly approaching trains, often with fatal results. Incredible as it may seem, insensate motor car drivers sometimes attempt to dash across even after the gates are lowered. It is said that some eight or ten of the Long Island Railroad's gates are thus broken every week. The railroads are setting an example of studious effort to secure safety for the traveling public that foolish joyriding automobilists would do well to follow.

A SCHOOL OF INSTRUCTION.

A suggestion that is timely, although it may call forth criticism in certain quarters, is that there should be a school of instruction in the local police department as a means of increasing the efficiency of the force. Within the past few months several promising young men have been appointed patrolmen and they are now doing duty. To take an inexperienced man, put a policeman's uniform on him, give him a club and tell him to "cover" a certain beat, so many blocks this way and so many that way, is not only unfair to the officer, but the city fails to get the best service to which it is entitled. Chief Kiely does the best he can under existing conditions, but better instruction is needed.

There should be some approved method of instructing patrolmen in the duties expected of them. They should be plainly told what they should do under certain circumstances. Otherwise they will be compelled to rely solely on their own judgment which at this stage of their police career may not always be the best, no matter how good the intention.

It may appear foolish to some that a man doing police duty for any length of time should have to be told what to do in his line of work, but such is often the case and there is no good reason why he should not receive proper instruction. It is only a few years ago that a local officer was made the laughing stock of his colleagues and others because he was trying to shoot an injured horse using rim-fire cartridges in a centre-fire gun. He did not know the difference until a spectator in the crowd showed him his mistake. These and many other things directly in the line of police duty every officer should know, so that when the occasion arises he will be able to act promptly and efficiently. But to turn an officer loose on the public with practically no definite instruction is certainly doing him an injustice and is not fair to the city which employs him to protect life and property and maintain order.

Co-operation between the superiors and patrolmen is still another thing that is of the greatest value to the department. A recent incident will illustrate this point. A certain man thought to be in Plainfield was wanted for a crime. The fact was known to two or three members of the force, but all of the men were not informed. It so happened that one of the officers who was kept in ignorance had seen the man several times, but not knowing that he was wanted of course did not take him into custody. The consequence was that some little time was allowed to elapse before the arrest was made. In the meantime the culprit was given ample time to make his escape if he so desired.

THE FORUM

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:

When any crime of a serious nature has been committed in a small town or country district and the criminal or criminals are unknown the residents have generally looked to the detective force of the county to attempt to get clues and endeavor to apprehend the guilty parties. This protection they believe they are entitled to and expect. The very fact that competent officers are really working on a case tends to prevent a repetition, at least. Reilizing that the northern section of Middlesex county was not receiving such protection and believing that the quickest and surest way to remedy the matter was to array facts before the public, the writer contributed an article which not only expressed his personal views but those of our citizens who have sought the aid of the county detectives.

The reply to my criticism which County Detective Peltier is reported as making has done more than my letter to arouse this end of the county to a realization of true conditions. It has raised one question that we desire to have answered: What constitutes a complaint to the prosecutor's office.

Mr. Peltier is quoted as saying that no complaint had ever reached his office regarding the burning of horses. Perhaps, Mr. Peltier, if correctly quoted, is not familiar with circumstances. The fact is that George A. Schenck had a team of horses burned so severely on the night of December 19 that they were rendered useless for his business. There is no doubt in the minds of the many who saw the horses and their stable the following morning that they were "burned in a fiendish manner" and maliciously too. The prosecutor's office was called up at about 9 o'clock and a detective asked for, and two or three days later the same gentleman 'phoned again and Mr. Schenck informs me that about ten days later a county detective actually did come, and he understood that a detective was to be put on the case at once but that was the last of the matter, as far as he knows. Evidently it was. Mr. Schenck wanted a detective quickly so that he could get facts which could not be obtained so well later, as is always the case in such matters. In view of the above facts he was more than surprised to read that no complaint had ever been made.

In the case of the motorcycles the writer personally called at the prosecutor's office with the owner of one stolen machine and the attempt to take another was reported at that time. Perhaps, this is the complaint which is acknowledged. In the case of the last theft, I am told by the owner that the matter was reported by 'phone promptly, and a letter, also, sent to the office and this supplemented with another letter. What then constitutes a complaint? What I have written can be verified by witnesses and no detective work will be needed to find them.

New Market, for twenty years or more, has seldom needed a detective and the suggestion that one or two marshals be employed now will not meet with a very enthusiastic reception, while the idea remains that the county detectives should do the little work that is needed. It would be more appropriate for the township to employ marshals to cover the territory. No one believes that this extra expense should be borne while we do not even have a borough. If the present detective force is not adequate for the entire county, in cases of need, it should be increased. I will take no exception to the reported remark that, "This illustrates the value of the State constabulary plan." A telephone call brings them to the scene of a crime at any hour or time without any delays. I would gladly endorse that remark of the county detective. But we do not have that force in this State now and we must look to the body that we believe should take its place in the present matters until some better system is established.

FRED C. GASKELL,
New Market.

"LIFE'S GREAT QUEST" THEME OF SERMON

Rev. C. S. Gillespie Delivers Strong Discourse at Grace M. E. Church.

"Life's Great Quest" was the subject of Rev. Charles S. Gillespie's sermon at Grace M. E. church last night. The text was taken from Matt. 6:33: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His Righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." The discourse was one of special interest to young people, their attention being drawn to the great number of people who never get anywhere because they have no aim or quest in life; of the majority who measure their quest by the dollar mark and of the few who enter the ministry today whereas formerly it was so often the ambition of parents and young men.

"The cry of the colleges today," said Mr. Gillespie, "is where are the young men for the ministry?. A learned professor gave answer to the question when he said: 'There is not enough money in it.' The life of a well-known character is to be taken on Wednesday in accordance with the law. The question was asked how many would be willing to accept a million dollars and suffer the penalty of death within a week; concluding that the offer would not be taken it was therefore assumed that each one present considered his own life worth more than that."

At the close of the service many responded to the invitation to become Christians. Mr. Gillespie will have charge of the prayer meeting Wednesday evening, when he will give his last talk in the series on "The Lord's Prayer." On Friday he will go to Short Beach, Conn., where he will spend his vacation. Miss Emily March will preach next Sunday morning and evening.

ASBURY PARK AND GROVE ARE HAVING OWN TWINS BED PLAY

Asbury Park, July 26—Once in a while something happens to show that the twin cities—this city and Ocean Grove—do not always lie easy in their twin beds. They're just a little bit restless at this present writing and it all came out at a meeting of the Asbury Park City Commission.

Down on the beach front, near the head of Wesley Lake, are the major boarwalk attractions. Between the Asbury Park Casino and the North End Pavillion, Ocean Grove, there is no mark to distinguish where Asbury Park ends and the Grove begins. To the excursionists, it doesn't matter which town is which, so long as they got a "hot dog," a bag of popcorn or a soda when they want it.

The rivalry between the two cities, however, is intense. To the north of the invisible boardwalk line separating the cities, the shekels of the summer visitors pay tribute to Asbury Park; south of the line they help support the Grove Campmeeting Association. The Grove is advertising their section of the walk with huge electric signs and, of course, so is Asbury.

Most of the visitors, however, go through Asbury Park to the boardwalk—and so the Grove signs are faced toward Asbury. Heretofore many of the excursionists walked down Lake avenue, Asbury, and over a little walk that led around the southern side of the Asbury Park Casino and right into Ocean Grove. The excursionist who took that short cut didn't even have to look at an Asbury Park stand.

Hereafter, however, things will be different. Friday the Commission decided to cut off this short cut by building a hedge all around the path, clean down to the lakeside. So now to get into Ocean Grove from the ocean approach, it is necessary to pass through the Asbury Park Casino.

H. Benjamin Berse and David Berse, of East Fifth street, are spending their summer outing at Kearsberg.

LeRoy S. Hann, of Somerset place, is registered at Hotel Plymouth, Asbury Park, where he will spend his summer outing.

Dr. B. Van D. Hedges, of Watchung avenue, returned home yesterday, after spending a month at Sunapee, New Hampshire.

Ralph Conover, of Jackson avenue, has returned after spending two weeks with his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Conover, of Lebanon.

THE FLY, TIMELY SERMON THEME

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring Presents Pertinent Truths at Union Service.

INFLUENCE ON LIFE

Preacher Tells How a Dead Fly in the Religious Life of a Person Destroys Much That is Good—European War a Sign of the Times.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, was the preacher at the union service held in Trinity Reformed church last night, and his interesting discourse was heard by a large congregation. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church; Rev. J. Y. Broek, of Trinity church, and Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, of the First Baptist church, assisted in the service.

Dr. Herring said in part:

"An old-time preacher started his sermon with these words, 'Dead flies in the ointment of the apothecary causeth it to send forth an unpleasant odor.' (Revised Version)—It was probably a summer meditation, and it is certainly very suggestive. The fly is a wonderful creature. Mother fly is not satisfied unless she can have 21,000,000 children in one season. Think then of the valuable service one performs if at the beginning of the summer he swats just one fly.

"The text, however, speaks of the danger not of living flies but of dead ones when these are in the previous ointment. In the hot and dry climate of Palestine, oil is most refreshing,—and perfumed oil a great delight. In the Scripture it stands for godly character. Now, a dead fly permitted to remain in such precious ointment damages it considerably, and a dead fly in the religious life of a man or woman destroys the good influence of that life.

"I have a collection of a few dead flies for your inspection tonight, which I have discovered in Christian ointment. I presume that most of my audience possess this Christian ointment, for you are church members and church workers. I wonder, however, if the ointment is as clear as it might be. Perhaps you are not as pleasant a personality as you might be. You are a little difficult to understand. Your disposition has soured. Nobody longs to possess your Christianity if it would make them feel as bad as you look, and as you act. Some people who are, no doubt, Christians are hard to understand. I don't see how the angels will manage them when they reach the better land. Nobody can satisfy them here. They are interested in the Lord's work on earth. My! but they are crabed. The diagnosis is simply, some kind of a fly has entered the ointment and died. Remedy: New ointment; not more religion, but a better religion.

"Another specimen I have in my collection. It is in the ointment of the Christian who just loves to tell you something that you don't care to know, but he or she believes in telling the truth,—perhaps the truth is exaggerated. These people are the perfectly frank, but they are brutally frank. They believe in speaking the truth, but not speaking the truth in love or thoughtfulness.

"Another species of fly is found in the ointment of those Christians who have a most ungracious spirit with regard to the religious views of others. Some have an insane antagonism towards the Roman Catholic Church. They may not be intensely religious themselves, but they can see no good in the Catholic Church at all,—and they take every occasion to knock it. True, there are bigoted Catholics, but then there are bigoted Protestants.

"Here is a blue bottle fly. It is found in the ointment of the Christian people who glory in the fact that they possess superior blood. They glory in their social standing. They ask when they come to town, which is the wealthy church—the church society attends? They have no use for the church 'of another type.' Of course, Paul says, 'God hath made of one blood all people,' but Paul did not know everything. He did not know that today we would have so many superwomen among our Christian ladies.

"Here is a man with the hookworm in the ointment. He has lost his Christian energy. He is so easily discouraged—intensely sensitive. I think that one of the most dangerous bugs which fall in the ointment is that one which makes a man feel that the world is now in the hands of the devil and there is no hope for it and all we can do is to sit on the porch and wait for it to go to smash. There is not much use in our endeavor to save it. God has planned to ruin it. The European war is an evidence that the End has come. Does not the Bible tell us that 'wars and rumors of wars' are a sign of the nearness of the end? I wonder if men did not say the same thing about Napoleon's war.

"Eliminate that fly. Get off the fence, and work for better things. Thank God for the men who have vision, who see after this war a rich manifestation of the interracial heart' and the 'international mind,' who see in other words, a new brotherhood of humanity."

STIRRING SPEECHES AT SUFFRAGE RALLY

S. S. Swackhamer, George T. Hughes and James Furber Urge Votes for Women.

The suffrage rally Saturday night brought out a record-breaking crowd on West Front street, the thoroughfare being thronged with interested listeners. The weather was perfect for a street meeting and suffragists took advantage of it. The yellow banner was flying at the postoffice corner and an audience soon gathered to hear the stirring speeches.

Attorney S. S. Swackhamer was the first speaker and was accorded hearty applause and close attention until the honk of an impatient automobile drowned the sound of his voice. "I prefer to blow my own horn," Mr Swackhamer remarked, and then continued with his argument that a government is a corporation in which women hold stock and should certainly vote.

"In a Democracy," he said, "the burden of proof lies on those who deny women a share in the government under which they live and for which they pay taxes."

The second speaker was George T Hughes, city editor of the New York Globe and a well-known Progressive. Mr. Hughes argued that those opposed to woman suffrage are of two kinds: The Chinese minded, who can only think as their grandfathers thought, and those who are afraid of the woman's vote—such as saloon keepers and politicians. He cited Jim Sugen as opposed to votes for women.

The last speaker was former Mayor James B. Furber, of Rahway, who presented a tremendously interesting and instructive plea for the cause. He read from a leaflet which is being circulated by the anti-suffragists and sets forth their objection to the enfranchisement of women. Mr. Furber answered these objections to the complete satisfaction of his hearers. In conclusion he said:

"How can the antis claim that the majority of women are opposed to voting in the face of the following endorsements of woman suffrage: International Council of Women, representing over 7,000,000 women; National Federation of Women's Clubs representing over 1,600,000 women, every State Federation of Women's Clubs where women vote, and many where they do not vote; National Women's Trade Union League, representing twenty-two leagues in thirteen different States; National Order of Maccabees, representing over 50,000 women; International Council of Nurses, representing nine countries National Educational Association, National Grange (men and women engaged in farming, American Federation of Labor, National Miners' Federation, National Purity Conference National Association of Letter Carriers, Grand Council of United Commercial Travellers, The Order of the Maccabees, these represent millions of men and women."

HAD A LOT TO SAY FOR A LITTLE MAN

Midget Threatens to Report Patrolman Welsh to President Wilson.

Unable to see above an ordinary table, but possessing a voice that would make aJck the Giant-killer's much sought prey sigh with envy, George Harris, of Galveston, Texas, spent part of the week-end in a cell at police headquarters expounding on the merits of one Patrolman Martin Welsh as a police officer. Welsh came upon Harris, who, until recently cherished the distinction of being Barnum & Bailey's pet chattel, loitering in Park avenue, in the vicinity of North, Saturday afternoon, engaged in the prohibited business of panhandling.

It appeared to Welsh as though Harris had lingered too long at the gilded bar while charitable friends relayed glittering glasses of amber fluid to him and when the midget became abusive the minion of the law invited him to take a walk around to Sycamore street. Harris, however, vouched his belief that the atmospherical conditions were not suited to a man who had stowed away a sufficiency of the "cup that cheers" and made a dive to get under the swinging doors of a saloon. Welsh bent double and made a grab for the dwarf getting a hold on the latter's head, this part of his anatomy being the largest and most prominent.

This provoked a volley of vile language from the Texan and he continued his discourse on Welsh's qualifications for the copper's job all the way to the police station. Several times he made a break to regain his liberty, on one occasion grabbing the steel pillars of the Central Railroad bridge in his vice-like grip and refusing to let go until the patrolman beat his kunckles with a "Billy."

Welsh finally locked him in a cell, but no sooner had the locked clicked, making him a prisoner, than the midget began a renewed and more strenuous attack on the copper's character. Threatening to write to President Wilson and to summon Welsh to take part in a fistic encounter, Harris whiled away his time in a noisy fashion until the arrival of City Judge DeMeza yesterday morning.

The city magistrate called several time for the defendant after mounting the bench and was finally assured that the culprit was standing before, or under the table directly in front of him. Even when summoned for a trial Harris took occasion to tell those present what he thought of Welsh and concluded his "little say" by threatening to bring out "de gang" when next he visited Plainfield.

"How long will it take those legs of yours to get out of Plainfield?" queried Judge DeMeza.

"I'll be back in Galveston in thirty minutes," was the prompt reply.

"You're on," said the Judge letting loose a smile that he had been suppressing in atempting to uphold the dignity of his position.

Without another word, but taking a side glimpse of Welsh, the dwarf scampered out of the courtroom for parts unknown, but all present were willing to bet their last clean shirt that he wouldn't make Galveston in thirty minutes.

Harris appeared here with Barnum & Bailey's show last year. According to Bertillon measurements he measures three feet seven inches in eighth and when weighed on a postage scale he tipped th "beam" at 115 pounds. He has a body almost as long as the ordinary man's, but his legs strongly resemble those of a piano. His head is as big as a good-sized watermelon.

Games Next Saturday.

Hope at Clinton Avenue.
Netherwood at T. A. B.
Baptist at Saurer.

Quite a shake-up was registered by Saturday's City League games, a new leader forging to the front and several new players being introduced to the fans. The surprise of the afternoon, however, was the defeat of the Hopes by the Netherwoods, while the set-back the Tabs received from the hands of the Saurer crew occasioned quite a little wonder. After being soundly trounced by the Netherwoods last Saturday, the Martin boys were not picked as winners in their match with the Abstainers. However, the addition of two new players worked wonders for the shopmen, Warry MacLaughlin and Harriman being the artists referred to. MacLaughlin hurled a splendid game and will be seen in a Saurer uniform for the rest of the season.

The Hopes had the chance to stop the pacemakers and fell down on the job, having to share their "big berth" with their conquorers. Much was at stake, therefore, in the game and for the Hopes much valuable ground was lost. The Tabs suffered much by their defeat while the Baptists, the third team to taste the bitter dregs Saturday, was, perhaps, the least amazed of the trio. Of the winning teams, the Saurers look to be the most promising, the annexing of "Warry" being the sole reason. The Netherwoods are to be feared most as they are a heavy hitting, fast-fielding aggregation, while the Avenues are terrors in the same branches.

"VET" ANSWERS S. O. S. SOUNDED BY SAURERS

"Old Warhorse" McLaughlin Called Out to Spank Grape Juice Drinkers.

With Warry McLaughlin pitching brilliant ball, the Saurers trimmed the Tabs on the West End avenue lot, Saturday, the score being 9 to 1. Warry was not as invincible as usual, but did not appear to be exerting himself, allowing the bags to become loaded once and two-thirds full on two other occasions. In the first instance only one man was down, but Warry struck the next two batters out. Inability to bunch their hits caused the Tabs' low score, although "Benny" Winters, not a heavy man with the stick, clouted out two doubles and walked once.

"Old Pop" Martin was the sticker of the day, getting three bingles, a triple and two keystone trippers. "Pop" was there with the comedy, too, his humorous act being his retiring in the seventh in favor of Gleason. The on-lookers were all of the opinion that Britt, having clouted 1,000 for the day, did not want to spoil this feat at the last moment by striking out. The fact was, however, Martin sprained a ligament in his neck while sliding to second. "Kid" Brennan was the third heavy sticker of the fray, getting two doubles, while Jack Wilson slammed out two singles.

Ball Clouting Has Helped the East Enders' Fight Considerably.

Defeating Hope, Saturday, by the score of 8 to 3, the Netherwoods entered into a tie for first place honors with their victims. Schott, the best flinger in the league, was knocked out of the box by the East Enders and the veteran Jimmy Montross took up the pitching burden. "Russ" Stewart shot them over for the winners and was tapped for eight safe bingles. "Hoppy" Walls and Art Grisley used their sticks heavily but their teammates failed to follow their lead. Jimmy Montross fielded perfectly as did Lou Slocum, the Netherwood first sacker. Earl Moran, the valuable backstop of the winners, was hit on the knee by a line drive and had to retire from the contest, Eddie Cougalin finishing the game as catcher.

C. B. MORSE SCORES FOR GOLF TROPHY

NOW THEY'VE ALL DECIDED TO MARRY

Abstainers Single Men Are Routed by Benedict Ball Tossers.

That the troubles of married life do not detract from a ball players' ability was amply demonstrated at Avon Park yesterday afternoon, when the Benedicts on the T. A. B. S. roster pounded out a 14 to 12 victory at the expense of the less fortunate single men. Inasmuch as it was a foregone conclusion that the issue would be an assault on the national pastime as a scientific sport the result was not altogether unlooked for.

"Bill" Mahoney shouldered the rifle pit burden for the single men and gained considerable prestige by whiffing the first half dozen batters to face him. At this juncture, however, the Benedicts buckled on their armor and opened a maratnon around the bases. When the third inning blew in the score favored the old men by a count of 7 to 5. In the second half of the third the Bachelors tied the score and another deadlock accurred in the sixth frame. The lucky seventh yielded the married set four more markers while the single men colected a brace, leaving the score 14 to 12 where it was at the windup.

One of the big features of the afternoon was the base running of "Spot" Hines. "Spot," it will be remembered, had a tree fall on him during the past week and when the fracas started it was thought that he was not in the best trim to play. Once on first, however, Hines fully demonstrated his ability to steal bases, sprinting back and forth from second so many times betwen LaRock's fouls that when the time came for him to register a tally he was caught flat-footed ten feet from the home station. Hines, by the way, is looking for a wife and he rang in on the married side yesterday just to fool the public.

The umpires were Mike O'Keeffe and Jack Willis, two likely aspirants to Federal League berths in 1968.

ABSTAINERS NEVER AFRAID OF ANIMALS

Tabs Register Second Victory at Expense of Newark Tigers.

For the second time this season the local Tabs defeated the Newark Tigers on Avon Oval, the score of yesterday's encounter being 12 to 8. Rizzolo was the star of the visiting combination, while "Tush" Jaeger performed brilliantly for the winners. Brennan started the mound work for the Tabs but found the task too big for him. He was rescued by Tone Denny, who held the Essex county crew to one run.

"CHICK" EVANS AGAIN WINS GOLF TITLE; FOWNES' DEFEAT KEEN DISAPPOINTMENT

Cleveland, July 26—Charles (Chick) Evans, of Chicago, Saturday successfully defended his Western amateur golf title by defeating J. D. Standish, the challenger, 7 up and 5 to go in the first round at the Mayfield Country Club.

Evans finished the morning round in a burst of speed and ended with 2 up on his opponent, mainly through a wonderful 100-foot recovery on the eighteenth hole. Standish gave the defender a surprisingly hard battle and was leading at the turn by one hole. Evans appeared to be biding his time and played much below his usual form.

On his second shot for the eighteenth green Evans sliced into a bad stretch of rough and his followers conceded the hole to Standish. Detroiter could have holed out easily in four, but Evans pitched the ball out of the green and it rolled beautifully into the cup.

Evans made the morning round in 71, a new medal score. He made the last nine holes in 34, 2 strokes under par. His score for the first nine, 37, equaled par.

Evans was leading 5 up at the turn in the afternoon round.

W. C. Fownes, Jr., met defeat Wednesday at the hands of H. P. Bingham. He was conceded to be Evans' most formidable opponent and his setback came as a decided surprise.

SWIMS FIVE MILES WITH FIFTEEN POUND SINKER

Incased in a straitjacket and carrying fifteen pounds of iron chain as a sort of extra ballast, Henry Elionsky swam from the Battery to Bay Ridge, yesterday. The distance was about five miles and the time was 2 hours, 40 minutes.

Elionsky was helped by the rushing tide. He had several narrow escapes from the harbor craft, and once a tugboat came within thirty feet of running him down.

GOULLET A WINNER.

Alfred Goullet defeated Caesar Moretti and Frank L. Kramer and captured first place in the final of the Criterion mile at the Velodrome track at Newark yesterday afternoon. Goullet won by two lengths from Moretti. Poor judgment in the last eighth of the mile cost the American champion the race.

CADDIES STRIKE! GOLFERS HAVE TO LUG OWN BAGS

Hackensack, July 26.—The caddies of the Hackensack Golf Club went on strike Saturday, and as a result the members and friends of the club had to carry their own bags and clubs over the eighteen-hole course.

The boys were receiving the sum of 50 cents for carrying the bags over the course. They are now asking to be paid 20 cents an hour.

Boston, July 26—Captain John Evers, of the Boston Nationals, and Umpire Quigley were ach fined $100 Saturday for their part in the dispute during the Chicago-Boston baseball game last Thursday, when Quigley struck Evers, claiming that the Braves' captain had stepped on his foot. OUTHIT HIGHLANDERS, BUT GOT SHORT END OF SCORE

Errors caused the Queen City baseball team's first defeat of the season, yesterday, the Highland A. C. getting the better end of a 5 to 3 argument. The losers outhit the winners, 8 to 5, and had a chance to tie the score in the ninth, but fell down on the job.

Queens stole bases at will and for the fact that their errors were matched, would have walked off with a 3 to 2 victory.

TWENTY-THREE HITS IN THIS ARGUMENT

Baptists and bingles were synonymous Saturday, yet the Clinton Ave. diamond lights drew the better end of an 11 to 9 score. Inability to keep up a pace that was productive of six runs in four innings caused the Firsts' downfall. Stahl adorned the hillock for the "unfortunates" for a time and hurled well, but was derricked when the Avenues began to get to him, "Dunk" Patterson finishing the argument. Several new men appeared on both sides and these helped considerably in building up the large score, making the contest a close and exciting swatfest throughout the whole nine frames.

The features of the game were the fielding of "Box" Apgar, Tom Apgar and Miller and the slugging of Rosenson and Pennoyer.

The Raritan Juniors defeated the Dunellen Boy Scouts, Saturday, by a score of 6 to 2. Teeling, Eder, Coltri and Andreotta were the clouters of the day, nailing the pill to advantage at all times. Collins was less successful in this line, striking out only five of the victors.

JAMES HAS BAD ARM.

Braves' Star Twirler's Salary Wing Giving Him Lots of Trouble.

Bill James, world's series hero and star twirler of the Boston Braves, recently was sent to consult a specialist on muscular ailments. Members of the team fear that the big lad from the coast will pitch but few good games for some time to come, while the scribes traveling with the club are not even that optimistic. Manager Stallings and Secretary Nickerson say that James will probably be all right in a few weeks, but players on the Boston team evidently do not feel the same way about his condition.

After his wonderful work in 1914 it was generally believed that James would be the sensation of the National league this season, and it was freely predicted that he would be a better pitcher than Alexander before the close of the present season. While Alexander is going better than ever in his career, James has been of little use to the Braves, and this is the main reason why Stallings' team is so far down in the race.

James has had trouble with his arm throughout the spring, and this was said to have been due to a cold in his shoulder, caught during the spring training, but scribes on the Pacific coast, where James lives, declare that he, like Leonard of the Red Sox, injured his arm pitching last winter without proper training.

Several times James has shown flashes of his 1914 form, but just when great things were expected of him the big spitballer's arm has gone back on him. James' case is very similar to that of George Chalmers, and he will probably come around in good shape, but will hardly be of much use to the Braves for the rest of the season unless his arm suddenly responds to treatment.

Shrubb to Return to Harvard.

Coach Alfred Shrubb will return to coach the Harvard cross country team. He plans to have his runners begin training by Sept. 1 and return to Cambridge a week earlier. A dual meet with Technology has been arranged one week before the Cornell meet, which will probably be held Oct. 31.

THE fuel question is an important one for the motorist. The veteran tourist makes sure of getting, not merely good fuel, but the same fuel, every time he has his tank filled.

Standard Motor Gasoline is the best motor fuel the Standard Oil Company, with its dependable sources of supply, its costly equipment, and its improved refinery methods, can produce. It is sold by the best garages and supply stations everywhere, and it is uniform wherever you buy it.

Standard Motor Gasoline is a straight-distilled product—not a "blend" or a "mixture." It is absolutely homogeneous—every drop like every other drop. It costs no more than others by the gallon, and less by the mile, because there are more miles in a gallon.

Remember this too. Good oil costs less than a worn out engine. Use Polarine—the Standard Oil for All Motors—obtainable wherever you see the "Standard Motor Gasoline" sign.

TRUCE ESTABLISHED BETWEEN TY COBB AND BAN JOHNSON.

A truce seems to have been established between Tyrus Cobb and Ban Johnson, who a short time ago were named to fill the leading roles in a sketch called "Back to Georgia, or Driven Out of Baseball." They met at Swayne field, in Toledo, the other day.

"How are you, Tyrus?" inquired Johnson, leaning over the rail of his box, which the players were passing. "I am glad to see you."

"How d'ye do?" replied Cobb, walking along after shaking hands.

'TWAS M'CARTY AT THE BAT, BUT HE GOT A HOME RUN

McCarthy's home run clout enabled the Netherwoods, a new Parker Field combination, to defeat the Princetons by the score of 6 to 5. The game lasted only five innings, but was closely contested throughout. Each pitcher allowed eight bingles, McCarthy, the home run swatter, getting three smashes all told. Reasoner and Butler each contributed a double to the hitting column.

BANKERS SEE ADDED BILLION IN AMERICAN FARM PROFITS

Increasing acre yields—the Gold Medal Alfalfa.

A billion dollars or so added in crop returns through improved alfalfa and fertilized crops as a topic of interest to the agricultural commission of the American Bankers' Association kept farm home bathrooms and kitchen conveniences still in second place. Chairman B. F. Harris said: "We will always remember that farming is a life as well as an industry and business. Let us, however, remember that effort and money spent in this cause of better farm life will be the most marvelous earning asset of a magnificent future. We are realizing more and more the necessity of increasing acre yields."

A sheaf of gold medal alfalfa that weighed thirty-two pounds, winner of first awards, showed what scientific methods had done and could do. The dada supplied to Swift & Company revealed benefits of alfalfa to the soil and of fertilizers to the crops which gave promise of new farm wealth reaching the billion dollar mark.

The "best alfalfa in the world" was grown by the Schwartz Brothers of Waukesha, Wis., who offered to tell any banker or farm owner how they have increased farm comforts, profits and crops by the scientific methods advocated by the bankers.

Chairman Harris pointed out that it is only in recent years that the people, including a large percentage of farmers, have begun seriously to appreciate the dominating and the newer and larger possibilities of agriculture. "Despite our tremendous industrial development," he said, "and the 'trend to town'—nothing but our great food supply—which warriors as well as peace makers needed—could have turned recent international cash demands on us into balances in our favor."

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

CHAPTER XI.

The Camp on the Pass.

As soon as she was alone with her father Berrie said, "I'm going home today, dad."

"Going home! What for?"

"I've had enough of it."

He glanced at her bed on the floor. "I can't say I blame you any."

"Oh, I don't mind sleeping on the floor," she replied. "But I want to get back. I don't want to meet those women. Another thing, you'd better use Mr. Norcross at the Springs instead of leaving him here with Tony."

"Why so?"

"Well, he isn't quite well enough to run the risk. It's a long way from here to a doctor."

"He 'pears to be on deck this morning. Besides, I haven't anything in the office to offer him."

"Then send him up to Meeker. Landon needs help, and he's a better forester than Tony anyway."

"I don't know but you're right. Landon is almost as good a hustler as Tony and a much better forester. I thought of sending Norcross up there at first, but he told me that Frank and his gang had it in for him. Of course he's only nominally in the service, but I want him to begin right."

Berrie went further. "I want him to ride back with me today."

He looked at her with grave inquiry. "Do you think that a wise thing to do? Won't that make more talk?"

"We'll start early and ride straight through."

"You'll have to go by Lost lake, and that means a long, hard hike. Can he stand it?"

"If I find we can't make it I'll pull into a ranch. But I'm sure we can."

When Wayland came in the supervisor inquired, "Do you feel able to ride back over the hill today?"

"Entirely so. It isn't the riding that uses me up, it is the walking, and, besides, as a candidate for promotion I must obey orders—especially orders to march."

They breakfasted hurriedly and while McFarlane and Tony were bringing in the horses Wayland and Berrie set the cabin to rights. Working thus side by side, she recovered her dominion over him and at the same time regained her own cheerful self-confidence.

"You're a wonder!" he exclaimed as he watched her deft adjustment of the dishes and furniture. "You're ambidextrous."

"I have to be to hold my job," she laughingly replied. "A feller must play all the parts when he's up here."

It was still early morning as they mounted and set off up the trail, but Moore's camp was astir, and as McFarlane turned in—much against Berrie's will—the lumberman and his daughter both came out to meet them. "Come in and have some breakfast," said Siona, with cordial inclusiveness, while her eyes met Wayland's glance with mocking glee.

"Thank you," said McFarlane, "we can't stop. I'm going to set my daughter over the divide. She has had enough camping, and Norcross is pretty well battered up, so I'm going to help them across. I'll be back tonight and we'll take our turn up the valley tomorrow. Nash will be here then."

"You're a wonder!" he exclaimed.

Berrie did not mind her father's explanation. On the contrary, she took a distinct pleasure in letting the other girl know of the long and intimate day she was about to spend with her young lover.

Siona, too adroit to display her disappointment, expressed polite regret. "I hope you won't get storm bound," she said, showing her white teeth in a meaning smile.

"If there is any sign of a storm we won't cross," declared McFarlane. "We're going round by the lower pass, anyhow. If I'm not here by dark you may know I've stayed to set 'em down at the mill."

There was charm in Siona's alert poise and in the neatness of her camp dress. Her dainty tent, with its stools and rugs, made the wilderness seem but a park. She reminded Norcross of the troops of tourists of the Tyrol, and her tent was of a kind to harmonize with the tea houses on the path to the summit of the Matterhorn. Then, too, something triumphantly feminine shone in her bright eyes and glowed in her softly rounded cheeks. Her hand was little and pointed, not fitted like Berrie's for tightening a cinch or wielding an ax, and as he said "Goodby" he added, "I hope I shall see you again soon," and at the moment he meant it.

"We'll return to the Springs in a few days," she replied. "Come and see us. Our bungalow is on the other side of the river. And you too," she addressed Berrie, but her tone was so conventionally polite that the ranch girl, burning with jealous heat, made no reply.

McFarlane led the way to the lake rapidly and in silence. The splendors of the foliage, subdued by the rains; the grandeur of the peaks, the song of the glorious stream, all were lost on Berrie, for she now felt herself to be nothing but a big, clumsy, coarse handed tomboy. Her worn gloves, her faded skirt and her man's shoes had been made hateful to her by that smug, graceful, play acting tourist with the cool, keen eyes and smirking lips. "She pretends to be a kitten, but she isn't. She's a sly grownup cat," she bitterly accused, but she could not deny the charm of her personality.

Wayland was forced to acknowledge that Berrie in this dark mood was not the delightful companion she had hitherto been. Something sweet and confiding had gone out of their relationship, and he was too keen witted not to know what it was. He estimated precisely the value of the malicious parting words of Siona Moore.

That Berrie was suffering and that her jealousy touchingly proved the depth of her love for him brought no elation, only perplexity. He was not seeking such devotion. As a companion on the trail she had been a joy; as a jealous sweetheart she was less admirable. He realized perfectly that this return journey was of her arrangement, not McFarlane's, and, while he was not resentful of her care, he was in doubt of the outcome. It hurried him into a further intimacy which might prove embarrassing.

At the camp by the lake the supervisor became sharply commanding. "Now, let's throw these packs on lively. It will be slippery on the high trail, and you'll just naturally have to hit leather hard and keep jouncing if you reach the wagon road before dark. But you'll make it."

"Make it!" said Berrie. "Of course we'll make it. Don't you worry about that for a minute. Once I get out of the green timber the dark won't worry me. We'll push right through."

In packing the camp stuff on the saddles Berrie, almost as swift and powerful as her father, acted with perfect understanding of every task, and Wayland's admiration of her skill increased mightily.

She insisted on her father's turning back. "We don't need you," she said. "I can find the pass."

McFarlane's faith in his daughter had been tested many times, and yet he was a little loath to have her start off on a trail new to her. He argued against it briefly, but she laughed at his fears. "I can go anywhere you can," she said. "Stand clear!" With final admonition he stood clear.

"Goodby!" he called. "If you meet Nash hurry him along. Moore is anxious to run those lines. Keep in touch with Landon, and if anybody turns up from the district office say I'll be back on Friday. Good luck!"

"Same to you. So long!"

Berea led the way, and Norcross fell in behind the pack horses, feeling as unimportant as a small boy at the heels of a circus parade. His girl captain was so competent, so self reliant and so sure that nothing he could say or do assisted in the slightest degree. Her leadership was a curiously close reproduction of her father's unhurried and graceful action. Her seat in the saddle was as easy as Landon's, and her eyes were alert to every rock and stream in the road. She was at home here, where the other girl would have been a bewildered child, and his words of praise lifted the shadow from her face.

Wayland called out, "The air feels like Thanksgiving morning, doesn't it?"

"It is Thanksgiving for me, and I'm going to get a grouse for dinner," she replied, and in less than an hour the snap of her rifle made good her promise.

After leaving the upper lake she turned to the right and followed the course of a swift and splendid stream which came churning through a cheerless, mossy swamp of spruce trees. Inexperienced as he was, Wayland knew that this was not a well marked trail, but his confidence in his guide was too great to permit of any worry over the pass, and he amused himself by watching the water robins as they flitted from stone to stone in the torrent, and in calculating just where he would drop a line for trout if he had time to do so, and in recovered serenity enjoyed his ride. Gradually he put aside his perplexities concerning the future, permitting his mind to prefigure nothing but his duties with Landon at Meeker's mill.

He was rather glad of the decision to send him there, for it promised absorbing sport. "I shall see how Landon and Belden work out their problem," he said. He had no fear of Frank Meeker now. "As a forest guard with official duties to perform I can meet that young savage on other and more nearly equal terms," he assured himself.

The trail grew slippery and in places ran full of water. "But there's a bottom somewhere," Berrie confidently declared, and pushed ahead with resolute mien. It was noon when they rose above timber and entered upon the wide, smooth slopes of the pass. Snow filled the grass here, and the wind, keen, cutting, unhindered, came out of the desolate west with savage fury, but the sun occasionally shone through the clouds with vivid splendor. "It is December now," shouted Wayland as he put on his slicker and cowered low to his saddle. "It will be January soon."

"We will make it Christmas dinner," she laughed, and her glowing good humor warmed his heart. She was entirely her cheerful self again.

As they rose the view became magnificent, wintry, sparkling. The great clouds, drifting like ancient warships heavy with armament, sent down chill showers of hail over the frosted gold of the grassy slopes, but when the shadows passed the sunlight descended in silent cataracts deliciously spring like. The conies squeaked from the rocky ridges and a brace of eagles circling about a lone crag, as if exulting in their sovereign mastery of the air, screamed in shrill ecstatic duo. The sheer cliffs on their shadowed sides were violently purple. Everywhere the landscape exhibited crashing contrasts of primary pigments which bit into consciousness like the flare of a martial band.

It was nearly 2 o'clock when they began to drop down behind the rocky ridges of the eastern slope, and soon, in the bottom of a warm and sheltered hollow just at timber line, Berrie drew her horse to stand and slipped from the saddle. "We'll rest here an hour," she said, "and cook our grouse, or are you too hungry to wait?"

"I can wait," he answered dramatically. "But it seems as if I had never eaten."

"Well, then, we'll save the grouse till tomorrow, but I'll make some coffee. You bring some water while I start a fire."

And so, while the tired horses cropped the russet grass, she boiled some coffee and laid out some bread and meat, while he sat by watching her and absorbing the beauty of the scene the charm of the hour. "It is exactly like a warm afternoon in April," he said, "and here are some of the spring flowers."

"There now, sit by and eat," she said, with humor, and in perfectly restored tranquillity they ate and drank, with no thought of critics or of rivals. They were alone, and content to be so.

It was deliciously sweet and restful there in that sunny hollow on the breast of the mountain. The wind swept through the worn branches of the dwarfed spruce with immemorial wistfulness, but these young souls heard it only as a far off song. Side by side on the soft Alpine clover they rested and talked, looking away at the shining peaks, and down over the dark green billows of fir beneath them. Half the forest was under their eyes at the moment, and the man said: "Is it not magnificent! It makes me proud of my country. Just think, all this glorious spread of hill and valley is under your father's direction—I may say under your direction, for I notice he does just about what you tell him to do."

"You've noticed that?" she laughed. "If I were a man I'd rather be supervisor of this forest than congressman."

"So would I," he agreed. "Nash says you are the supervisor. I wonder if your father realizes how efficient you are? Does he ever sorrow over your not being a boy?"

Her eyes shone with mirth. "Not that I can notice. He 'pears contented."

"You're a good deal like a son to him, I imagine. You can do about all that a boy can do, anyhow—more than I could ever do. Does he realize how much you have to do with the management of his forest? I've never seen your like. I really believe you could carry on the work as well as he."

She flushed with pleasure. "You seem to think I'm a district forester in disguise."

"I have eyes, Miss Supervisor, and also ears, which leads me to ask, Why don't you clean out that saloon gang? Landon is sure there's crooked work going on at that mill—certainly that open bar is a disgraceful and corrupting thing."

Her face clouded. "We've tried to put out that saloon, but it can't be done. You see, it's on a patented claim. The claim was bogus, of course, and we've made complaint, but the matter is hung up and that gives 'em a chance to go on."

"Well, let's not talk of that. It's too delicious an hour for any question of business. It is a moment for poetry. I wish I could write what I feel this moment. Why don't we camp here and watch the sun go down and the moon rise? From our lofty vantage ground the coming of dawn would be an epic."

"We mustn't think of that," she protested. "We must be going."

"Not yet. The hour is too perfect. It may never come again. The wind in the pines, the sunshine, the conies crying from their rocks, the butterflies on the clover—my heart aches with the beauty of it. It's been a wonderful trip. Even that staggering walk in the rain had its splendid quality. I couldn't see the poetry in it then, but I do now. These few days have made us comrades, haven't they—comrades of the trail?"

Of Interest to Women and the Home

"Why, that little boy's hair is white!"

Daddy's Bedtime Story—How the First Little Red-Head Happened.

"If you, Jack, or you, Evelyn, had happened to be a red headed child your hair would have been a different color," declared daddy as his kiddies came to him for the evening story.

And then they both laughed very much, for that sounded like a joke. And daddy smiled when he was telling them.

"You see," he went on, "I think red hair is very beautiful. And I think we will make up a little story about it just to settle in our minds which child had the first red hair and how it happened. Shall we?"

"Oh, goodie!" cried the kiddies.

"Well," said daddy, "ever so long ago there wasn't any red hair. There was black hair, and brown hair, and kind of spotted hair, and gray hair, and even white hair when people got very old, but there wasn't any red hair. Nobody had ever heard of such a thing. And, of course, something new must happen once in awhile.

"In those days people didn't look as they do now. They wore clothing of skins, and a barber was unknown, so all the daddies ran quite strongly to whiskers. And the mammas did not wear their hair piled up high on their heads or wound round the backs of them nice and pretty, as they do now. No; they wore their hair down around their shoulders.

"And the families lived in caves. There was such a family, living in a colony of caves, that had a funny little tow headed boy.

"And this little boy was very happy all day long, and he played in the warm sun in front of the cave. He played with mastodon bones or perhaps with the dried tail of a great lizard which his papa had killed. For, you see, children, there weren't many playthings for children in those days.

"This little boy was very nice and did not run away from the cave, for his mamma had told him that if he did a wild ichthotheo—well, whatever it was, something with a great big long name would get him.

"And the red sun looked down at the little boy playing in front of the cave and smiled. The little boy looked so happy and healthy with his tow hair.

"Then, all of a sudden, one day, looking down at the little boy, that red sun had an idea.

"'Why, that little boy's hair is white,' he said. 'Why not make it red, the color of my face?'

"So the red sun burned the little boy's hair red. At first his parents were frightened; then they were delighted. And ever since then there have been red haired children."

A GOOD DRESS FOR THE BIG GIRL

No. 8956.

Too often too little attention is given the question of clothes for the big "little girl." These young ladies need and desire to be just as smartly and well dressed as their older sisters, and the Home Pattern designers have laid especial stress on this point. A very nice product of this attention suitable for girls up to 12 years, is Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8956—a dress that makes up charmingly with embroidered flouncing, has yoke and sleeves cut in one, and a straight gathered skirt with a two-piece gathered tunic. Sizes 4 to 12. Size 12 requires 5 yards 15-inch flouncing and ⅞ yard 36-inch plain material.

FLOCK TO SAINT ANNE.

Quebec, July 26.—The lame, the blind, the sufferers from incurable maladies, and many distorted figures from many sections of the continent are gathered today at St. Anne de Beaupre, the famous shrine, where many cures are made. For today is the festival of Saint Anne, and the pilgrimage is unusually large, thousands looking earnestly for special favors through the intercession of the good saint on the occasion of her own festival. The services at the shrine began at day-break, and during the day many new pilgrims arrived.

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Nell wrote to Olive Dunn:

"Dear Old Pal: What a pity we had not reached our present height of popularity when you were here to help us enjoy the ovation. It is a continuous vaudeville performance. That little paragraph in the paper about our prospective fortune has transformed the representatives of all the different automobiles into our willing slaves. It is regrettable that the weather is too cold to make autoing an unmixed joy. We are called up every day or two by some salesman and asked to go riding. Traveling around with closed curtains and foot warmers leaves something to be desired, but they are not to blame that the spring is cold and late, poor things.

"Then the piano men! One of them after making vain effort to get in the house—I tell you none of them get in now—handed me a folder, containing needles of assorted sizes; his bow was sweeping and he assured me the compliments of the firm accompanied the folder. What it is to be popular!

"A large assortment of articles have been left for us to try. Everything you can imagine is included, from vacuum cleaners to patent water drinking vessels for fowls.

"The mail will have to be brought up in a wheelbarrow soon, if it is delivered at all; it wears Dick out to cart the advertising folders home. The same instinct must guide these business concerns that directs the crows to the carrion on the plains. This sounds as if I were calling the Mortons carrion. Far be it from me. I was only comparing these men to crows—and the end is not yet.

"There's one comfort: I'm sure I'm not known as an easy mark. A young fellow was determined to leave his sewing machine here for me to try. He wanted me to exchange my lovely new machine, hardly two years old, toward one of his and pay the difference. I told him I was born and brought up with this make and he need not try to pry me loose from it, for it would be of no use, and he did not any more, but speedily refreshed me with the north view of a man going south.

"They use all sorts of arguments to get me to buy, but the funniest is to assure me I am a leader of society in Fairport and must set the pace for the town.

"What do you hear concerning Mrs. Ellson? I begin to believe she has dropped over the edge of the world. I am glad that you and the doctor are corresponding. Joplin's attitude about the matter is interesting. Does he imagine he can stop your writing by filing a protest? Some men seem to think they are so important that the stars are disturbed in their courses by any outcry they may make in their far corner of the earth. Young Joplin is doomed to learn sooner or later that he is not the center of the universe.

"Write and tell me all about the parties you attend. Even if I am a leader of society here I seldom leave my own door except to go over to Jo Parsons'.

"Remember us both to your people. Lovingly, NELL."

As Nell was sealing and stamping the letter Jo Parsons ran in.

"Did you know," she said, somewhat breathlessly, "that the doctor is 'called east on business'? His sister told me. She called this afternoon." Jo looked knowingly at her friend.

"What will she do if the doctor really carries off the prize and brings Olive here to live?" A pleased smile hovered around Nell's mouth.

"You don't look worried about his sister's future," laughed Jo.

"Well, no; I was thinking how fine it would be to have Olive here all the time."

Household Hints

CANNING HINTS MAY PROVE USEFUL TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Raspberry Shortcake—Cup of sugar, two-thirds cup of lard, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder. Mix as for pie dough, using milk to moisten. Bake in several layers and spread previously sweetened berries between.

Raspberry Pie—One cup sweet cream, one-half cup flour. Line a pie tin with paste, pour in your cream and flour, rubbing smooth with one cup of sugar. Now fill up with berries. Bake without an upper crust.

To Can Raspberries—Place a colander over a pot of water, put enough berries in the colander for one quart and steam until done. Canned this way they retain their finest flavor.

Raspberry Marmalade—Weigh out berries and sugar, allowing two-thirds as much sugar as berries; place on back of range and let cook slowly, stirring frequently. When clear or thick it is done. Can in glass jars and it will keep for years.

In Canning Strawberries—In order to keep the strawberries from coming to the top of the can, lay the can on its side while hot. Roll occasionally while cooling. It is remarkable how the berries will mix with the juice and stay nice and large.

Record of Canned Fruit—Tack a sheet of paper to the inside of the fruit cupboard door. On this write the number of cans of each kind of fruit you put away. Keep a small pencil hanging at the top of the sheet of paper, and each time you remove a can mark it off. You can see what fruit you have on hand at a glance without moving the jars about.

Fruit Jar Rubbers—To have fruit jar rubbers last, keep them well covered in a jar full of flour until used, and as soon as removed from the emptied jars. One can then afford a good quality of rubber, as kept thus they will safely last several seasons. When there is doubt of old rubbers they may often be made to eke out one more season by using two of the rubbers to each jar and screwing down tight. Always stand newly filled jars upside down until cool, to test the tops and rubbers.

FLY POISON

House flies are more than nuisances; they convey disease and filth wherever they go. So if there are no screens in the house try these simple methods for getting rid of them. In the bedroom put a sponge in a saucer and saturate it with oil of lavender. If this is hung two or three feet above the table one may eat in peace throughout the meal. Pots of rose geranium, or the branches bruised and hung up, are also said to be good for flies. A honey pot of death and destruction to them may be made with two ounces of ground black pepper, four ounces of white sugar and half a pint of sweet milk. Cook the things together for a minute or so, and then fill small plates with the mixture, keeping edibles closely covered. Sweep up the dead flies twice a day and burn them.

Adhesive plaster has a long list of household uses.

It comes in different widths and different qualities. If not warmed before it is applied, a hot iron should be lightly passed over it after it is in place.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — Name It in Three Guesses, Children, And You Can Have It — BY "HOP"

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

London—The romance of pretty Miss Violet Asquith, daughter of the British prime minister, and Bonham Carter, the private secretary of her father, will culminate in a pretty wedding tomorrow, the first marriage in the official family for many a day. Many of the cabinet members will take a breathing spell and attend the wedding, for Miss Violet has been socially prominent here during the past seven years, since her father took up the reins of government. The young groom, who has shown exceptionable ability as an aide to Mr. Asquith, comes of a prominent family.

St. Louis, Mo.—Whether Mrs. Walter E. Keown, of this city, will receive her legacy of $150,000 depends on the decision of her husband, now in hiding, as to whether he will face the government's charge of misuse of mails and come into the open to prove his signature to the will which gives her a fortune. His presence is required to obtain the money for his wife, and the friends of the couple are guessing as to whether he will ever return. If he should return, he will be obliged to stand trial for misuse of the mails in a lumber transaction. He jumped his bail three years ago in Kansas City, and is said to have fled to France. Mrs. Keown has been making every effort to locate him, for she believes he will face out the trouble for her sake.

New York—Ten American girls, homeward bound from their long service nursing typhus patients in Servia, heard the call of suffering humanity at the Island of Malta, and gave up their comfortable cruise in Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht Erin to answer in the emergency. Among them are Misses Fry and Tetrault, of Kansas City; Miss Watson, of Chicago, and Miss Gardner, also from the West. They forfeited their hard-earned vacations to nurse the wounded soldiers of the Dardanelles armies. When the Erin touched at Malta and the need of nurses was told, the girls offered to go ashore at once, to serve as long as they were needed. Sir Thomas Lipton, deeply touched by the magnanimous offer of the American girls, thanked them as they left his yacht and bestowed high praise upon them.

Cincinnati—Through the magnanimous gifts, mostly from women, that have come to the new Medical College here, the foundation for a million-dollar college has been assured. Mrs. Mary Emery gave a quarter of a million to the new college; Mrs. Charles Fleischman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Taft, Miss Alice Levy Kuhn, Miss Anna Louise Taft and Mrs. Christian R. Holmes were among the other contributor of large sums.

Berlin—One of the most serious-minded women at the German capital is Crown Princess Cecilie. Up to the time the war began she was gay, fond of a good time and of pretty clothes. Today, with her four little boys that provide a succession to the throne, and one little girl to appeal to the hearts of the people, she is the most popular member of the Imperial family. It was she who sent throughout Germany what has been called her slogan, "Mobilize the Kitchen." She personally directed the formation of the system now in force, whereby housewives are taught the relative value of foods, the methods of utilizing everything at hand, and were taught the principles of nursing wounded soldiers. She banded the leading women of the city into sewing circles, where knitting and sewing are done for hours each day, in a large hall at the Reichstag. She superintends the packing of gifts for the soldiers at the front.

New York—Miss Grace C. Strachan, of New York, is a candidate for the presidency of the National Education Association which will hold its annual meting at Oakland, Cal., next month. Miss Strachan was one of the leaders in the movement to place a woman at the head of the big association and campaigned successfully for Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, of Chicago, when she won the office.

Chicago—All is in readiness for the marriage of Miss Catherine Barker, reputed to be the richest girl of her age in the world, to Howard H. Spaulding, a young Chicago business man. The wedding will take place on Saturday at Harbor Point, Mich. Miss Barker, who is reputed to be worth $30,000,000, turned down titled foreigners, deciding that her husband must be a typical American.

W. ANDERSON SMITH HAS DOCUMENT 139 YEARS OLD

Peapack-Gladstone, July 26.—Apropos of the great crops of wheat, rye, oats and hay now being harvested by the farmers of this section, W. Anderson Smith, of Main street, Peapack, has dug up a document 139 years old to show that the farmer of today enjoys an advantage over the farmer of these parts before the independence of the country. Then a percentage of the harvest had to be turned over to the King's commissioners.

The paper, which was addressed to David Overton, reads: "Long Island, Sept. 30, 1776. You are hereby ordered to preserve for the King's use, one and one-half loads of hay, three loads of straw, five bushels of wheat, thirty bushels of rye and not to dispose of the same, but to an order in writing from Major John Morrison, commissary of forage, as you will answer the contrary at your peril. (Signed) RICHARD WOODHULL, Justice."

With this paper Mr. Smith had several deeds of property in Long Island, dated previous to the Revolutionary War, one of them having been executed in 1769.

SECRETARY TUMULTY LEAVES FOR INDEFINITE AVON STAY

Washington, July 26.—Secretary Tumulty and a staff of White House clerks left Saturday for Avon, from where Mr. Tumulty will keep in close touch with Washington and the summer White House at Cornish.

Special arrangements have been made for dispatching mail and other matters of importance between here and Avon. Offices will be established at the Avon Inn. The extent of the visit will be determined by the international situation.

WHO OWNS THE BOODLE?

Chicago, July 26.—Judge Hill will render his decision today as to who owns the $500 in "boodle" money which figured in the police protection case. William C. Dannenberg, former morals inspector, has sued to obtain the five hundred, which he claims was paid to him by "Chicken Harry" Cullet to obtain police protection for eleven divekeepers. The policemen who accompanied Dannenberg at his meeting with Cullet searched Dannenberg before the meeting to make sure his pockets were empty. Later they searched him and found the big wad, which was turned over to City Custodian Cregier. As Cullet denied having paid the money, he cannot claim it, and now it is up to the judge to decide whether Dannenberg is entitled to it.

THE ROSARY
The great Selig masterpiece, 7 parts.

The most wonderful picture we have ever exhibited.

We are obliged to charge more for our pictures.

But we believe our patrons appreciate our efforts in securing for their entertainment, more than the ORDINARY motion pictures.

We know that the photoplay attractions offered at this theatre are bigger and better than has ever been offered in Plainfield before.

The best proof of this is, the U. S. Astor Theatre is commanding the most select patronage in Plainfield.

Our house is conducted in a manner for the discriminating theatre goers of Plainfield.

Cheap films have been offered to the public of Plainfield for the past 10 years without any great success. Since we operate this theatre under our high class policy, lovers of artistic photoplays have been quick to respond.

This demonstrates to the management that the people of Plainfield prefer high grade photo productions at reasonable prices, to films of poorer quality at 5c and 10c.

BOARD MAKES GOOD SHOWING

Gratifying Balance to Credit of North Plainfield Schools at Year's End.

CUTTING THE EXPENSES

Saving of $269.12 in Supply Account is Announced—Arithmetics Will Be Changed—Summary of District Clerk's Report.

The business transacted at the meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Education last night, was chiefly of a financial nature. The annual report of the district clerk was read, bills were ordered paid, and the purchase of supplies arranged for. The members of the Board were much pleased with the district clerk's report, for it showed a balance at the end of the fiscal year of about $3,300, as against between fifty and a hundred dollars last year.

A saving of $269.12 in school supplies over last year was announced by the supply committee. Chairman Judd Stewart reported that his committee had placed orders for supplies costing $610.71 as against an expenditure of $978.83 last year. Estimates for supplying the schools with coal were also read by Mr. Stewart, who announced that W. A. Pinto had offered the best proposition. It was found that the saving on school books, etc., would about offset the cost of the extra coal required this year on account of the Harrison Avenue School.

Warrants for $1,729.51 were ordered drawn at the request of the finance committee. Of this amount $1,489.51 was for the current expenses and $240 for July salaries.

Dr. J. H. Cooley, for the teachers and text books committee, proposed a change in the arithmetics used in the schools. The present books have been in use for nine years and Dr. Cooley said they were obsolete. He proposed the adoption of Hoyt & Peets No. 2 arithmetic, their No. 3, and Wentworth & Smith's No. 2. The cost of the necessary number of new arithmetics will come to $189.91. Some money will be received from the sale of the disused books.

The teachers' committee proposed the transfer of Miss Russell, a teacher from the Fourth grade to the Eighth. It was said that Miss Russell is taking a special course in Columbia this summer to fit her for Eighth grade work. This was adopted, and Miss Clara Morris, who has been teaching in the Watchung School for three years, was given Miss Russell's Fourth grade position at a salary of $600 a year.

The action of the President of the Board and the district clerk in signing vouchers for $5,859.29 in favor of the contractors and architect of the Harrison Avenue School, was ratified. As a matter of form a communication from H. C. Krebs, county superintendent of schools, reciting that he had been requested by the Commissioner of Education to report that the Harrison Avenue School has been constructed in accordance with the plans and specifications on file in the office of the commissioner, was read.

The district clerk's report showed a balance on hand in the current expense account of $3,291.72. This was a source of gratification to every member. The report was a lengthy one, a summary of which follows:

Current expenses: Balance on hand June 30, 1914, $51.91; receipts from district, State and county and railroad taxes, tuition, interest, etc., $47,158.92, and expenditures for teachers' salaries, janitors' salaries, fuel, etc., $43,867.20, leaving a balance on hand June 30 of $3,291.72.

Repair account: Receipts, $1,973.85, and expenditures, for repairs, replacements, furniture, etc., $1,714.35; balance, $259.48.

Remodeling Somerset School: Sale of bonds $11,000; expenditures, $3,916.41; balance on hand, $7,183.59.

Harrison Avenue School: Sale of premium on bonds, etc., $30,388.50; expenditures for work, purchase of the land, searching title, etc., $15,722.93, leaving a balance on hand of $14,665.57.

Manual Training Fund: Receipts, $2,967.55; expenditures, $2,931.50; balance, $36.05.

TROLLEY CAR JUMPS TRACK, TWO INJURED

Considerable Excitement Follows An Accident at Gallagher's Corner, Dunellen.

The first truck of trolley car number 2027 bound from Bound Brook to Newark, left the track at Gallagher's Corner about 6 o'clock last evening. The car was crowded and as it bounced over the ground many of the passengers were thrown from their seats and on top of one another. There was considerable excitement for a time, some of the women passengers becoming hysterical and a number fainting.

The trolley, fortunately, was not going fast and the motorman was able to stop it before it had proceeded ten feet. A wrecking crew was called from the Dunellen car barns nearby and the car placed back on the tracks.

In the meantime it was ascertained that outside of a good shaking up and a number of bruises that none of the passengers had been injured and the conductor after taking the names of all the passengers the car proceeded on its way.

Among the passengers to leave the car in town were Mrs. M. Moskovitz, wife of a Somerville upholsterer, and Mrs. M. Baum, the wife of another Somerville merchant. Both women suffered from bruises and a thorough shaking up. Mrs. Moskovitz, in fact, could hardly walk. H. E. Nelson's taxi was hired and they were taken to their respective homes in Somerville.

DIDN'T KEEP PROMISE, BORO POLICE GET HIM

When Joel Coddington, of near Mt. Bethel, was allowed to go home on Saturday night, June 19, by Chief Marshal Weiss, of the North Plainfield police force, having been arrested charged with driving a wagon at night without a light, and had given his promise to appear in the police court the next morning, he probably thought that the police would forget all about him.

But they didn't, and as the days passed and Coddington did not put in an appearance, a warrant for his arrest was sworn out. Coddington heard about the warrant and this morning presented himself to Chief Weiss and was released on bail—not a mere promise this time—for an appearance before the borough recorder tomorrow morning.

Coddington, who is a former freeholder from Warren township, gave various excuses for not having kept his promise, the chief of which were that he had been ill and that he had no money to pay a fine if one were imposed upon him.

MERNAGH GUILTY ON SEVEN COUNTS

Common Council Agrees on Extent of Culpability and Dismisses Patrolman.

MADE GENERAL DENIAL

Accused Patrolman Branded All of Nine Counts as False—President Clay and Councilmen Blatz, Martin and Graves Against Retirement.

Found guilty by the Common Council on seven of the nine alleged infractions of police department rules preferred against him by Chief of Police Kiely, Patrolman William Mernagh was unconditionally dismissed from the force at 1:05 o'clock this morning, that being the hour that the councilmanic jury returned its verdict after fifty-five minutes' deliberation.

The Council voted unanimously to sustain seven of the nine counts but President Clay and Councilmen Blatz, Graves and Martin offered individual explanations in which they put themselves on record as being in favor of action not so drastic as permanent retirement. The vote of Councilmen Hylan, Babcock, Hamilton, Cox, Cose and Edgar, however, ruled the majority and signified dismissal for the accused patrolman. The verdict culminated a trial that had consumed five hours, a throng of over 200 interested spectators remaining throughout.

That Mernagh's demand for a public hearing had aroused keen interest among lawyers, city officials and the municipality's curiously inclined was

RED HOT ARGUMENT SETTLED BY COPPER

Discussion arising over the likeness of a picture displayed in a West Front street show window bore to President Wilson came within an ace of resulting in a fistic encounter on West Front street last night between a German butcher and an Italian barber. Patrolman John Kelley's timely appearance on the scene was all that averted a combat between the foreigners.

The butcher and barber, strolling down West Front street arm in arm shortly after 8 o'clock, were attracted by the photograph which showed a British troop in full regalia. The Italian remarked that the officer in charge bore a strong resemblance to the head of the American nation, but the German was of the opinion that he had Dutch blood flowing through his veins. Unable to settle the question of the likeness of the two characters the men entered into a heated debate regarding the merits of the Italian and German armies. The barber was of the opinion that the sons of Italy could get along for a greater length of time on the battlefield than the Germans could, without beer, while the butcher questioned the ability of the Italians as trench diggers.

The argument waxed warm in a very few minutes and passersby could easy see that trouble was brewing. Finally the German decided the best way to make the recalcitrant Italian believe his remarks was to leave an impression on his cranium with a brick. The formidable appearance of a handy stone of which the Dutch disciple had gained possession caused the hair-cutter's knees to quake and he beat a hasty retreat toward the post of Patrolman Kelley who was stationed about half a block from the scene of the disturbance.

Kelley, who ascertains his heighth once every four years by standing alongside of the leaning tower of Pisa, hurried to the scene, and with his form towering over the heads of the foreigners who were at odds, induced them to shake hands. Kelley explained to them the seriousness of violating America's neutral policy and finally got each to admit that he was glad he was in the United States and that war is a bad business. The barber soon regained his good spirits and elected to bestow the results of a good day of "tipping" on the herculean patrolman in the form of jitney Havanas.

NOTT ENGINE CO. GIVES REDUCTION

City Gets Benefit of $1,500 Decrease Due to Delay in Delivering of Engine.

TWO MONTHS' TEST

Original Contract Figure of $8,000 Reduced to $6,500—Other Conditions of Agreement Between Council and Concern.

After a long period of delay, which elicited no little amount of criticism and expressions of disapproval, the councilmanic fire and buildings committee has succeeded in adjusting the difference between the city and the Nott Engine Company, involving the purchase of an automobile engine for the Netherwood firehouse, in a way that gives every indication of proving satisfactory. Agreeing to accept the engine for a trial period up to September 7 upon the condition that the concern will make a reduction in the original contract price of $1,500, or from $8,000 to $6,500, the Council has effected a saving that was entirely unlooked for. At the same time a second clause has been inserted in the new agreement making it optional with the City Council whether or not the engine will be kept after it has been used until November 1.

In accordance with the present contract the city will pay one-half of the purchase price, $3,250, to the Nott Company on September 8, providing the engine has made satisfactory tests up to September 7, and the remaining $3,250 will be turned over on November 1 providing the engine has in the meantime given the satisfaction expected of it.

In the event that the engine, after it has been used up to November 1 after the initial payment, does not prove satisfactory, the city will have the opportunity to return it and the concern has agreed to return the original payment of $3,250, having provided a surty company's bond for $5,000 to insure this safeguard.

The agreement was arrived at between the councilmanic committee and the representative of the concern following a lengthy investigation into the merits of the engine that was sent here several months ago, and which delivered but 680 gallons of water whereas the contract called for a 700-gallon delivery. It was brought out that the city has been inconvenienced by the delay in delivery and in view of this fact was entitled to some consideration in the contract price. The agreement was a mutual one and the Council considered itself fortunate in being able to bring it about.

COUNSEL ASKS FOR DELAY IN TRIAL OF DEDOOD CASE

Upon the request of counsel, the State's case against Ysbrand DeDood, a local merchant, and Grace Gable, who were arrested last week, was postponed until August 4 by Judge DeMeza, when it came before him in the city police court this morning. The defendants were released under $500 bail each to insure their appearance on that date.

DeDood and the Gable woman figured in a raid made by Constable George Yorke, Sergeant Andrew Saffron and Patrolmen Muir and Kelley in an apartment of DeDood's store on Park avenue last week. Martin Stutsman is counsel for the accused, while William Newcorn represents Mrs. DeDood, who is prosecuting the charge.

BAPTISTS WILL FIND MANY SHORE ATTRACTIONS

If you wish to have an ideal day's outing plan to go with the First Baptist Sunday-school to Asbury Park on Thursday. The season at the popular resort is now in full swing and there are countless attractions to make a day at the shore one full of pleasure for both young and old. The Temple Baptist Sunday-school of this city and the South Plainfield Baptist Sunday-school will join in this excursion. Ample accommodations will be provided for all who intend to make the trip, and the train will include a baggage car for baby carriages, and other luggage that excursionists want to take with them on the outing.

TROOPERS ENJOY LIFE IN CAMP

Local Cavalrymen Putting in a Strenuous Week at Mt. Gretna.

NO SUGAR FOR COFFEE

However, Local Guardsmen Get Plenty to Eat and Are Now Acting Like Regular Soldiers—Praise for Corporal McGee's Squad.

Mt. Gretna, Pa., July 26.—Troop D, First Squadron Cavalry of the New Jersey National Guard, half of which is composed of Plainfield men, went into camp at Mt. Gretna, Pa., Saturday evening at about half-past six. This was late, and gave the Plainfield men some unusually hard work at the very start; they had to unsaddle, picket, water and bed their horses in the twilight and pitch tents in the dark, which seemed to them rather to add than detract from the fun of the expedition. Moreover, they arrived too late to get the proper requisition of rations; supper off baked beans and canned peaches only; and coffee without milk or sugar. But the wit of Troopers Righter and Jeffcott turned this into an occasion for laughter and every one turned in happy, though in the case of Corporal McGee's squad, detailed to pitch the officers' tents, this was not till past midnight.

The reason Troop D was so late was that they were on the last of the trains that brought the twenty-one troops into the cavalry camp,—the last troop in the last train. They arrived at the place of detraining a little before five, and it took an hour to

COUNCIL APPOINTS SPECIAL OFFICERS

Dog-catcher and Pound-keeper Also Named to Begin Work at Once.

Prior to the trial of Patrolman William Mernagh in the City Council chambers last night the Common Council disposed of a small accumulation of business that had come to light since the meeting last week. Mayor Calkins proposed the name of Frank Peterson for the dog-catcher's job and his recommendation was ratified. Peterson has already started his work in rounding up stray bowwows and from now on the campiagn will be waged in earnest.

Patrick Culliney and James Duffey were recommended by the councilmanic police board for special officers' credentials and their appointment was also affirmed. Duffey is the caretaker at the Columbus Club on West Front street and filed his application several weeks ago. They will both be sworn in at once.

Edward Donnelly's name was handed in as an applicant for the position of pound-keeper, it being accepted by the Council.

SETTLEMENT EFFECTED IN PASTE-DAUBERS' MIX-UP

After an accumulation of testimony had been offered by both sides in the case of Harry Allen against Walter Glaentzer in the city police court this morning, Judge DeMeza took the role of mediator and effected a harmony which gives every indication of preventing further troubles between these two youths. Allen, who is employed as bill-poster by the Proctor Theatre management, had Glaentzer arrested for pasting white paper over his posters, thereby making them unrecognizable. Glaentzer is the U. S. Astor Theatre's bill-poster.

Allen was arrested on a similar complaint filed by the Astor Theatre management last week and pleaded guilty. In court this morning Allen was represented by Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of the firm of Reed & Hetfield, and Glaentzer was represented by William Newcorn. Attempts were made to show that Glaentzer had maliciously damaged the Proctor Theatre signs. The young men shook hands and agreed to live peaceably in the future and with that understanding the court dismissed the complaint.

ARRANGE EXHIBITION.

The pictures, which are divided into two reels, will show the drill teams in competition for prizes given at the reception of the Governor of Iowa. A parade of ten thousand Yeomen and other features that appeal to members of this society will make up the rest of the film.

REDFIELD IN CHICAGO AT EASTLAND INQUIRY

Personally Takes Charge of Work—Begin Raising of Vessel Today.

Chicago, July 27.—W. C. Redfield, secretary of Commerce, arrived here this morning to take personal charge of the Federal investigation of the Eastland disaster.

Raising of the steamer Eastland, which toppled over Saturday morning, causing the death of nearly 1,500, was begun today. Two huge dredges were set at work dredging the bottom of the river preparatory to righting the vessel.

Two more bodies were recovered early tonight from the hull of the Eastland. The total number of recovered dead is now 828. At least 400 bodies are still in the hull. This was the estimate made by Coroner Hoffman after a conference with divers and police officials today. It was based on revised figures of State's Attorney Hoyne, who said he was convinced the number on board at the time of the disaster was at least 2,550. Some officials still believed the number of bodies in or about the hull would greatly exceed 500.

Exhausted by almost sixty hours of continuous plunging, the divers did little last night. But by dawn today the men were on the boat and work had been resumed. Shortly afterward the two bodies were taken out. A cluster of bodies was found between the first and second decks and may be released today.

SPANISH WAR "VETS" WILL RE-ORGANIZE

Council of Administration Approves Plans to Revive Ensign Bagley Camp.

In connection with the movement recently launched to reorganize Ensign Bagley Camp, a meeting of Spanish War Veterans has been called for tomorrow night in the Frost building, it being desired that as many as possible be present to assist in the work that has been proposed. The Council of Administration has acted favorably upon the application for permission to reorganize and the veterans have been notified of this action by Department Commander Earl T. Dabb during the past week.

It is especially desired that all members of Ensign Bagley Camp, No. 21, be present at tomorrow night's session and any others who served in the Spanish War, Philippine Insurrection or Chinese Boxer uprising of 1900, or between April 21, 1898, and July 4, 1902, who live in or near this city.

The objects of the re-organization work are to encourage universal liberty and equal rights to all; to inculcate the principles of freedom, patriotism and humanity; to keep alive the memories of the war with Spain; to promote the best interests of those in the service of the United States, who took part in the war and their dependents, and to strengthen the bonds of fraternity.

RUMOR THAT POND'S MEN WILL GET RAISE IN PAY

Although officials of the company refuse to confirm the report that a ten per cent. increase in wages has been made to all employes of the Pond Machine Tool Company in this city, it was learned on good authority this morning that the raise had been authorized by the concern and would go into effect immediately.

When a Daily Press reporter asked an official of the company today if the report was true he merely stated that he "had nothing to say for publication." Asked if he wished to deny the rumor that was current, he said that there was nothing to be confirmed or denied. In response to further questioning the official gave a strong intimation that his company had granted the increase, but that efforts were being made to keep it quiet.

DEPARTMENT ANSWERS TWO ALARMS OF FIRE

Two fires yesterday afternoon at about the same time kept the Plainfield department on the jump for a few minutes. The first alarm was telephoned into headquarters at 3:14 and called the apparatus to 1463 East Second street, where a defective stove pipe had created a small fire in the laundry occupied by C. Neilson & Son. The fire caused a loss of about $200.

A minute after the first alarm had been sent in, a telephone message called the firement to the Babcock building, where another stove pipe scare caused some one to grow frightened. In this case there was no loss. The pipe to a hot water heater in the basement had become disconnected and a volume of smoke was pouring into the room.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

"The Rosary," shown for the first time in Plainfield at the U. S. Astor Theatre, is a big picture, and its bigness does not rely on its length, but mainly on artistic production, which includes, of course, direction, acting and other elements which contribute to a well visualized story.

"The Rosary," which is one of the biggest productions released by the Selig Company this season, made a strong impression on the audience at this theatre last night. The director deserves great praise for the settings he has given this photo-play. Whether it be in old Ireland or in New York, the scenes are nicely appropriate. Particularly was the audience interested in the scenes surrounding the village home of young Brian Kelly, afterwards Father Kelly, about whom the story revolves. The interior of the home itself has the atmosphere of what such a home meant about forty or fifty years ago, in the south or west of Ireland. What a realistic picture is the scene showing Brian's defense of his little playmate and sweetheart, Madge Callahan. Or that fishing scene after the fray is over, or the welcome given Brian on his homecoming several years afterwards! How the old jaunting car, weak in its springs, sags as it jolts over the rough cobblestones and how the [illegible], in their haste to catch sight of Brian, jostle against goats or trip over waddling geese! These all form a study in the art of lending atmosphere and color.

The acting in "The Rosary" is excellent. Not since the death of the venerable Harry Cashman has the role of Father Kelly been played as well as in this photo-play, when the role was portrayed by Charles Clary. In this case the part was far more exacting than on the stage. Many fine heart touches are made by Mr. Clary here and there, by little bits of "business," which convey the delicate effects of light and shade in a masterful portraiture.

Miss Kathlyn Williams, judging from her performance in "The Rosary" can renew her girlhood at will. In the strong emotional scenes between Bruce Wilton and his wife, Vera, Miss Williams meets the requirements fully. Wheeler Oakman has added quite materially to his laurels of his impersonation of Bruce Wilton.

LARGE COMMITTEE FOR CLUB'S EUCHRE

Expect to Produce An Elaborate Program in Columbus Club Hall This Week.

Determined to outdo the male entertainers as pleasure providers, the feminine relatives and friends of Columbus Club members are completing a unique program of entertainment for the euchre and dance to be given in the auditorium of the West Front street hall next Thursday night. Several hundred tickets have been circulated for the occasion and indications point to an attendance that will eclipse that of the recent club gathering which proved so successful financially and socially. An unusually large committee has the arrangements in hand and the male members have been forced to assume a temporary seat in the background for this week at least. The women folks have taken possession of the entire clubhouse and are now busy introducing feminine touches for the big event of the week-end.

Card playing for many handsome and useful prizes will be a predominant feature while dancing will be furnished later in the evening. "Al" Squires' orchestra will render the dance music. During the intermission refreshments will be served.

The committee includes:

The Misses Alice McAfee, Annabelle McAfee, Margaret McDonough, Marie Carty, Anna Doyle, Helen Hagen, Julia Keeley, Nora Callahan, Lucy Traynor, Mary Hines, Nora McCarthy, Margaret McCarthy, Mollie Traynor, Emma Sullivan, Mary McCormack, Frances Cavanagh, Katherine Powers, Florence Hogan, Marian Harrington, Mary McCauley, Margaret Burke, Anna Bray, Rose Bray, May McAfee, Gertrude Blimm, Rose McGuirk, Patricia Kiely, and Mrs. John J Varley, Mrs. Feiring, Mrs. Robert McCormack, Mrs. John Keeley, Mrs. Caffrey, Mrs. Frank Burke, Mrs. Frederick Hughes, Mrs. John J. REV. A. P. TULP DENIES GUILT IN EXPLAINING RESIGNATION

Hackensack, July 27.—Denying that he is guilty of any acts to give grounds for the divorce action which his wife has announced she will bring, Rev. A. Peter Tulp, formerly pastor of Christ Episcopal church here, and at one time pastor of Marconnier church, at Oak Tree, has written a letter to the vestry and congregation of that former church, and this was made public yesterday. It was while Mr. Tulp was at Onteora Park, N. Y., where he was said to be lecturing, that Mrs. Tulp suddenly made it known that she would seek a divorce. Mr. Tulp's resignation was received ten days ago by the vestry and accepted.

Addressed to the vestry and congregation, the letter, which was dated New York, July 24, states that the writer was at Onteora Park when he received a communication from an attorney apprising him that his wife was about to institute divorce proceedings, and that he immediately sent his resignation as rector to the church. He gives as his reason for doing this his opinion that he could better defend the action as a private citizen than as a minister, and his desire to save the church any stigma that might result from the charges.

The writer says that he has consulted with some of his friends, including members of the vestry of Christ church, and has stated his position to them sufficiently to convince them of his absolute innocence. He declares that he will defend the suit, as he owes this to the vestry and the congregation, as well as himself, and requests that judgment be withheld until the action has been decided by the courts.

PEACH FESTIVAL.

The Young People's Society, of the German's Reformed church, will give a peach and ice cream festival at East Front and Church streets on Friday evening, August 20. The Dutch Arms Band will play and there will be other features of an entertaining nature.

LIBRARIES CONTAIN 75,000,000 VOLUMES

According to Statistics Compiled by the United States Bureau of Education.

There are over 18,000 regularly established libraries in the United States, containing more than 75,000,000 volumes, according to statistics just compiled by the United States Bureau of Education. The number of volumes is an increase of 20,000,000 since 1908.

Of the 2,849 libraries containing 5,000 volumes or over, 1,844 are classified as "public and society libraries," and 1,005 are school and college libraries. Public and society libraries have an aggregate of over fifty million volumes, with seven million borrowers' cards in force; 1,446 of these libraries were entirely free to the public.

Libraries reporting from 1,000 to 5,000 volumes numbered 5,453, of which 2,188 were public and society libraries, and 3,265 school libraries. These libraries contained 11,689,942 volumes. Another group of still smaller libraries, comprising those that reported from 300 to 1,000 volumes, increased the total by 2,961,007 volumes.

The distribution of library facilities is still uneven. Of the 1,844 public and society libraries reported for the entire United States, more than half were in the North Atlantic States, and they contained 24,627,921 volumes out of the total of fifty millions; and of the three million volumes added to library collections for the year 1913, almost one-half were for the same section. New York State had 7,842,621 volumes in her 214 libraries; Massachusetts, 7,380,024 in 288 libraries; Pennsylvania, 3,728,070, and Illinois, 3,168,765 volumes. Four-fifths of the borrowers' cards in use were in the North Atlantic and North Central States.

Library activity for the past year was marked, according to the Bureau of Education report, by "considerable extension of the branch system, particularly in the granting of library privileges on the part of cities to neighboring suburban communities; by further development of the country library plan in many States; and in general by a visible growth in the spirit of service that is characteristic of many of the formal educational institutions of today. The period of the library as a mere storehouse of books seems to be safely past; it has yielded to a period of direct community service."

QUARANTINE IS NOW RAISED IN JERSEY

Foot-and-Mouth Disease is Rapidly Disappearing in the State.

Washington, D. C., July 27.—An order effective July 26 reduces the quarantine for foot-and-mouth disease in New Jersey to the Jersey City Stockyards and to those parts of Hudson county which lie within a radius of five miles of infected premises at Secaucus. Within this radius the territory is an exposed area and no live stock can be moved out of it except after inspection and certification by Federal officials. The Jersey City Stockyards are limited to handling animals for slaughter.

The same order frees entirely from quarantine the States of Connecticut, Kansas and West Virginia, and reduces the quarantines in Maryland, Kentucky and Virginia to the same limitations on the stockyards at Baltimore, Louisville and Richmond, as are now imposed upon the yards in Jersey City. In addition, the order frees five counties in New York, four in Pennsylvania, and one in Illinois. With the exception of a number of stockyards which are limited to handling animals for slaughter, the quarantined area in the United States is now practically confined to the section already indicated in Hudson county, and to three counties in New York, two in Pennsylvania, and four in Illinois.

LOCAL CHURCHES WILL HOLD UNION SERVICES

The local Methodist and Episcopal churches will hold union services during the month of August, while their respective pastors are enjoying their annual vacations. The services on the first three Sundays of the month will be held in the Methodist church and the services on the last two in the Presbyterian. This schedule will also include the weekly prayer service. The Rev. Frederick J. Hubach, superintendent of the Elizabeth district of the Methodist Episcopal church, will be the preacher at both services this Sunday. On the two succeeding Sundays, the Rev. William D. Steckley, pastor of the M. E. church at Lebanon, will be the preacher.

A SAFE PRESIDENT.

It is seldom that so universal an approval of a diplomatic document is voiced by the press and people as has greeted the last note of the President to the Imperial German Empire. It has again made the people of the United States rejoice in the fact that Woodrow Wilson is President of the United States. The honor of the country is upheld and the rights of humanity clearly stated. The position of neutrals on the high sea is asserted and maintained. The law of nations is set forth with force and dignity. It is not likely, unless the German Empire is drunk with power, that neutrals will be again molested. We are very sure that in the Imperial offices at Berlin they know that we are right and they must realize that the position the President takes may some day be the position they will wish to take. If conditions were reversed we believe that Germany would stand where we stand today. It is probable that Germany will not make any reply to our note; in fact it does not seem possible that she can.

No man as President has ever been called upon to meet graver questions or questions of more far-reaching consequence than those which Woodrow Wilson has faced and is now facing. The whole country is behind him. He has our confidence to the full and everything indicates that he will pilot us safely through the troubled waters. The steady, calm, self-contained and safe course that President Wilson is taking is winning for him the admiration of the world. You do not hear anyone talking any more about the "schoolmaster in politics."

There is a lot of satisfaction in knowing that the suggestion originally given publicity by the Daily Press regarding the Nott fire engine now garaged at the Netherwood House is to be adopted by the City Council. When the machine arrived in this city, and after several tests was unable to fulfill specifications, pumping but 682 gallons a minute when 700 were called for, the city fathers rightfully refused to accept it. Suggestion was made that it be taken only at a substantial reduction in price, for what the people of the Netherwood section wanted was the protection, and the matter of a few gallons less would make no difference. As it is the machine pumps more than the one now stationed in the center of the city, which has proven adequate for all practical purposes. The city gets the Netherwood engine at a reduction of $1,500 on the contract price, and no taxpayer can complain about the driving of a bargain of that kind. In addition the machine is to be tested for three months, and pending that test only half of the purchase price is to be paid, the engine company giving a bond to refund the money in case everything is not satisfactory. The members of the City Council, especially Chairman Edgar and the those on the fire committee, are certainly deserving of the congratulations and thanks of the taxpayers of the city for what they have done in this matter.

Governor Fielder has notified the Standard Oil Company that he will not send troops to Bayonne, unless he finds such action absolutely necessary for the protection of life. He is indignant at the refusal of the officers to agree to arbitrate the questions at issue between the company and its men, and in this he will find that most people approve of his stand. The men offered to return to work yesterday, pending the submission of their grievances to an arbitration committee, and the company absolutely refused to consider the suggestion. Until it adopted this attitude the oil concern had the sympathy of the general public in the strike. Now it developes that the strikers are much more reasonable in the matter than is the company. A determined sheriff has taken the matter in hand now and it looks today as if things are to be amicably adjusted.

Health Officer Chandler's warning to look out for book agents, who are about town selling a publication which they say "has the endorsement of the Board of Health," is a timely one. Too often unscrupulous peddlers use arguments of this kind which are not justified, and foist on the public documents which are practically worthless. The books in question may be all right, but such statements as the above usually indicate that fraud is necessary in order to complete a sale.

For being up to date, the prize has to be handed to Rev. Charles E. Herring, who preached at the union service on Sunday night on the subject, "Swat the Fly." If there is any one duty Plainfielders are doing more than that little thing, we have yet to hear of it.

These are certainly "dog days" for those thoughtless persons who have not taken out the necessary license to keep the canine pets. Judge DeMeza is having a busy time each morning lecturing those who are remiss.

More than one man who cannot afford to go away for the summer has taken advantage of the statement this year that "the weather is so pleasant at home that I'd rather stay here."

While local news seems to be mighty scarce these days, the happenings abroad and at various points throughout the country more than make up for any shortage in thrillers here.

We do not know whether the President or Secretary Lansing wrote the last note to Germany—and it matters little what the fact may be. There is in it glory enough for both.

That certainly sounds good to us. May more manufacturers of this kind come here!

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Please give the following statement as much prominence as you did the statement regarding Antone Stroke, Joseph Bishop and James Geary. I, Antone Stroke, met Joseph Bishop and James Geary on Somerset street, Saturday night, and through an act of kindness they were taking me home. They were not drunk nor were we coming down the street arm in arm as stated by Roundsman Keller, which I stated in court.

MERNAGH FOUND GUILTY

evidenced by the throng that crowded the guard rail in the District Court room. It was also plainly evident that there were those present who were in sympathy with the defendant and on several occasions when points were scored for his side there was applause. Mernagh remained until the end and when the resolution forever divesting him of the local department's uniform was read he stood mounted on a tier of seats, listening to City Clerk MacMurray's words with an expressionless gaze overspreading his countenance.

The city's prosecution was carried on by Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed and the defendant was represented by former Mayor G. W. V. Moy, who appointed him to the police force in December, 1911. Much testimony was offered by the numerous witnesses produced by both sides and each had a voluminous collection of affidavits to offer should they be demanded. For the city, Captain John J. Flynn, Lieut. Maurice Higgins, and Arthur Tompkins were the most important witnesses, while Mernagh took the stand and was responsible for the bulk of testimony off red in his own behalf.

Flynn and Higgins told of having maintained a watch over Mernagh's actions while he was patrolling posts 9 and 15 during April, 1915, and stated that they had found him "loafing." Flynn's testimony involved the discovery that Mernagh was frequenting Arthur, alias "Slippery" Tompkins' "speakeasy" in Fairchild's alley and that he had given protection to the proprietor. According to the police captain the department had been watching Tompkins' place for over a year, but each attempt to "pull" it was unsuccessful, somone having acted as informant and "tipped" the owner off. Higgins corroborated Flynn's testimony in every detail; the essence of their statements being that Mernagh was delinquent and had failed to report the presence of a "speakeasy" to his superiors when he knew that one existed.

Arthur Tompkins, the proprietor of the "speakeasy" under discussion, was brought from the county jail at Elizabeth yesterday by Higgins, after serving a sentence of thirty days imposed upon him for running the resort, and told on the stand of the protection he received from the policeman. He confessed that Mernagh had several times "tipped him off" and added that the only grievance he had against the accused rested in the latter's failure to "tip him off" the last time when he was arrested and sent to jail.

James Scott and Tompkins declared that Mernagh had threatened "to shoot the first man who squealed on him," branishing a revolver to make the threat more impressive. Sergeant Andrew Saffron dwelt on his findings on the night of April 15, when he discovered Mernagh loitering around Park avenue and Eighth street, it being Saffron's opinion that it took the patrolman twenty-five minutes to walk from the police station to the juncture of these two thoroughfares. Boyd Jackson and John Demey were the concluding witnesses for the city, each corroborating testimony that had been offered for those who had preceded them on the witness stand.

Mernagh's own words comprised the sum and substance of the case offered by the defense. He entered a general denial of the nine counts of which he stood accused at the outset, but later admitted that he had "loafed," but "that this was the extent of his guilt." On direct and cross-examination Mernagh was asked pointedly what he considered the duties of a policeman. He replied that his superiors had told him that he should "do the best he kin and not bother with drunks." This he stoutly professed comprised his knowledge of a patrolman's duties and he worked the sentence "overtime" in his testimony.

The officer claimed he had never been to Tompkins' house with the exception of one time when he went to investigate the report that a fourteen-year-old child was being harbored there unlawfully. The defense attempted to show at this time that the prosecution's witnesses had been told "to move along" by Mernagh while he was patrolling a beat in the business section and that they offered testimony against him because they shared a grievance. Mernagh's denials covered the entire list of charges in a general way.

Michael Commiskey, John Boyle, William Fitzgerald and Maudlin Jackson offered the concluding testimony in Mernagh's behalf. When Commiskey and Boyle left the stand Counsellor Reed brought out the fact that each had long police court records in Plainfield and that they were of questionable character. William Schorb testified to having requested Mernagh to "move" Scott along from his West Front street doorway, despite the latter's statement to the effect that he had never been "posted" by any patrolman.

Brevity was the keynote of the summing up on both sides, each attorney consuming a period of eight minutes for review. Mr. Moy dwelt especially on the psychological side of the case, making an unusual plea in behalf of the patrolman, whom he classed as an enterprising and ambitious young man just entering upon his career. He made a general denial for his client and asked for an acquittal.

Corporation Counsel Reed attacked viciously the character of the witnesses for the defense and classed Mernagh as an individual unfit for the trust imposed in him.

LEELANAW CASE TO BE TREATED SAME AS FRYE

Washington, July 27.—The stand to be taken by the United States government in the case of the sinking of the American freight steamer Leelenaw will be the same as its attitude in the Frye case, it was learned from the State Department today. In both cases the administration assumes that the treaty of 1828 between Prussia and the United States has been violated. In regard to cases of neutral vessels carrying contraband cargoes the treaty definitely provides that the belligerent vessel halting the neutral one shall, on finding a contraband cargo, deliver it out. This the Stat Department interprets as meaning that the cargo shall be thrown overboard and the vessel released.

An effort is being made by the British and American governments, working in conjunction, to avoid declaring cotton contraband, although the German government has announced a government ownership of this product giving Great Britain the right to make it absolute contraband. The official discussions are occurring at frequent intervals both here and in London officials of the State Department said today.

run the wagons off the flat cars, and to lead out and saddle the horses. The saddling was done in a rough field beside the track. To the Plainfielders the horses were quite new, and to the horses army saddles and all the cavalry paraphernalia—rifle, sabre and so on—was equally new. The result was that when the order came to mount, and the men swung into their saddles, several went skyrocketing off in a series of bucks among the underbrush and gullies, and one trooper had a fall.

As the troop, finally mounted, trotted up the road to the camp, a long brown line of uniforms and dust, the sun was just drooping behind the hills on the left as red and round as in a Japanese print, and on the left the moon, as round and almost as large, was rising.

This moon came in very handy, for when the sun finally dropped altogether from sight there was still enough light to read the scare-heads of a newspaper; if this had not been the case the big tents—Chinese puzzles to the inexperienced troops—could hardly have been up before daylight. But after a series of discouraging experiments they were finally erected, and by the time the last officers' tent was up the quartermaster's detail, Corporal McGee's squad were as adept as veterans.

When reveille sounded at five-thirty on Sunday, Troop D turned out well rested to see a small city of gleaming canvas, arranged in regular rows, extending into the distance, and broken by the lines of picketed horses. There was still no sugar for the coffee and cereal of which breakfast consisted, and no milk, but the beauty of the wooded hills about the camp, under a brilliant sun, and the news that this day was to be largely one of rest, brought this "hardship" to nothing; the men went cheerfully to the work of currying and watering the horses and putting their equipment in order.

Any Plainfielders who wish to write to the members of the Plainfield platoon should address their letters: "Trooper So and So, Troop D, First Squad, Cav. N. G. N. J., Cavalry Camp, Mt. Gretna, Pa."

SIXTH SEASON AT CAMP ENDEAVOR

Fifty Children and Mothers Enjoying Life at Scotch Plains.

The sixth season for Camp Endeavor, at Scotch Plains, is well under way and half a hundred children with four mothers are at present enjoying a two weeks' respite from a hot, tiresome existence in some New York tenement through the generosity of people of Plainfield, Westfield, Elizabeth and other places in Union county. These poor people would have no outing at all otherwise. This party forms the second group so far this season at this non-sectarian camp, and like the others, they will remain for two weeks.

Each year the site of the camp and the buildings themselves at Camp Endeavor have been improved until the camp offers many evidences of what can be done by a band of federated societies of young people connected with the churches in this county.

For the present season the cost of running the camp, together with the cost of the necessary improvements, will be about $1,400. The camp has generous friends in many parts of the county. It is important that there be further contributions without delay, and all to whom such a practical Christian work appeals are invited to send their gifts to the treasurer, Purdy F. Benedict, Roselle. Checks should be made payable to "Camp Endeavor, Incorporated."

Mr. Benedict desires to thank the friends who have contributed and to invite them to visit the camp at any time, so that they may have the pleasure of seeing how definitely their gifts are bringing happiness and contentment to the little guests in camp. Miss Jennie Stoddard, the matron, and her assistants—volunteer helpers from the Christian Endeavor Societies of the county—will be glad to welcome any who come. They would be glad to ask visitors to remain with them for dinner or supper, but it will be readily recognized that the funds given for the children of the poor must be carefully expended. Friends may take with them a basket luncheon and enjoy it under the trees.

The camp is reached by Main Line trolley to Park avenue, Scotch Plains; thence by a walk up the mountain through Johnston's Drive. Those who motor to camp may drive right into the grounds.

Not every one is able to grasp the full meaning of such an outing to poor tired mothers and weak children from the slums of New York. Not only does the camp afford the guests a relief from toil and hardship during their stay, with good food and entertainment to take their minds from the everyday life of work and pain, but they get a moral uplift which cannot fail to be of benefit in the days to come.

Contributions to date total about $700. Among the local contributors are the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church, Plainfield, $40; Netherwood Christian Endeavor Society, $5; Congregational Christian Endeavor Society, Plainfield, $2; Westfield Presbyterian Christian Endeavor Society, $10; Friends' First Day School, Plainfield $7.40; Westfield Baptist Sunday-school, $5; Congregational Sunday-school, Plainfield, $1; Fourteen donations from "Plainfield," $14.

JERSEY'S BRICK AND TILE OUTPUT DROPS $2,513,537

Trenton, July 27.—A decrease of $2,513,537 is shown in the brick and tile output of New Jersey in 1914, as compared with 1913, according to a bulletin issued by the State Geological Survey yesterday. In 1913 the income from these industries amounted to $10,866,833, while in 1914 it was $8,353,296. New Jersey's production in this line in 1914 was 6.4 per cent. of all brick and tile for United States.

The figures contained in the bulletin are secured by the State Department, acting in co-operation with the United States Geological Survey, and indicate that New Jersey leads all States in making enameled brick and is second in terra cotta, fire proofing and tile (not drain). It is shown that there are fifty-five manufacturers of common brick, widely distributed throughout the State, and that Middlesex county is the largest producer of brick and tile, its output for 1914 amounting to $5,926,490.

Some of the values in 1914 were: Common brick, $1,944,806; architectural terra cotta, $1,620,791; fire proofing, $1,598,296; tile (not drain), $1,139,895.

GARRY DOES NOT DRINK.

Owing to an error it was stated in yesterday's issue of this paper that James Garry, of 1318 Woodland avenue, was arrested Saturday night in North Plainfield for intoxication. It has since been learned, however, that Garry, who is twenty-three years of age, does not drink and that he was locked up during a scuffle that ensued when he and Joseph Bishop were trying to induce Anthony Stroke, another youth who was intoxicated, to go home. The policeman locked all three up and Stroke was fined $5 yesterday.

THE CAT'S GONE.

Our cat has left home. Well, I'm glad of it. Let her go. I was sick of seeing her 'round. She was no good, anyway.

It all goes to prove, I say, that a cat isn't capable of affection. Some say that cats do have affection for people. Pooh! Nothing in it. Cats merely love places.

Why, just look at that cat of ours! There wasn't a thing that wasn't done for her. She had the best of everything. We fed her things right off the table. And I've got up nights to let her in. And what does she do? Runs away! No more cats for me, thank you!

Gone over to some of the neighbors, I suppose. They're welcome to her. Good riddance, and I hope they get enough of her. If she thinks she can come back here after they get sick of her she's mistaken.

I guess they had something to do with her going, too. Likely they've been feeding her and tolling her away. Pretty business that is. Thank the Lord, I've got common decency enough not to steal my neighbors' cats and dogs! I'd sell and move out of this place to-morrow if I could get my price.

It'll seem kind of funny without a cat around. A cat certainly does keep mice away, even if she doesn't kill many. And they look comfortable-like, sitting 'round spitting on their hands and washing their faces.

I ain't saying that Buff wasn't a good cat either, mind you. She was an uncommonly good tabby. Clean as a whistle. Everyone used to remark about her tidiness.

I've had loads of chances to get good money for her. I don't think I ever saw her climb up on the table—not since she was a kitten. And then she had the funniest look on her face—a kind of "riddle-me-a-riddle" expression that was comical—wasn't it, though? I've laughed at it many a time. . . . Heigho! Queer, ain't it, how attached you can become to a dumb animal?

The baby will miss her. She was just getting so as to grab out at her and pull her tail. And do you know that good old Buff never would let out her claws, no matter what the baby did! You can't say that of many cats.

I'd like to know who stole her. Why, certainly, they must have stolen her. She never would have run away. Before I'd steal my neighbor's cat, I'd—what's that? Why, she came to us one day. She looked so lean and peaked that we just had to take her in. She's been with us ever since, till now.

Well, she's gone, and what's gone is gone, and there's no use crying over spilt milk. But every time I think of her—

What? What's that? Upstairs? Locked in a closet? Now, what do you think of that! Come here, Buff! Come Buff, come Buff! Poo-oor little Buffy! Did they lock her up in the cubby? Did they so? Lock up the dolgarnest petsy in a dark closet——

Myrtle! Myrtle Jones! Here's Buff! Got any milk handy? Poo-oo-r pussy! Pretty kitty!

PHILANTHROPY.

There were once two boys, James and John. James was impetuous. "I will refrain from taking what doesn't belong to me, first, last, and all the time"! he declared, and so lived and died in obscurity.

But John was vastly more crafty. "I will take whatever isn't nailed down, and then, in the fullness of my years, I will give it back!" quoth he, and became a philanthropist whose name filled the earth.

FIX DATES FOR UNPLAYED GAMES

City Amateur Baseball League Arrange for Contests on Labor Day.

FEW PLAYERS DROPPED

Earl Pierson Returns to Captaincy of Baptist Aggregation—Downs Succeeds Dodge and Overland Takes Place of Walls.

Arrangements for playing some of the postponed games and a general discussion of the affairs of the City Amateur Baseball League comprised the principal business at the weekly meeting of the league held at the office of the Plainfield Daily Press last night. There were but few changes made in the list of players, all of the teams apparently being well satisfied with their lineups.

Perhaps the most important change was the announcement that hereafter Earl Pierson will captain and play second base for the Baptist team, and Norman Barnes will go back to his old position at first base. This change should tend to strengthen the nine. Dan Randolph will continue as manager, a position he is filling well. Eugene Downs will succeed Leslie Dodge, the latter being dropped. Burner has also been dropped, Pierson taking his place. The only other change was on the Clinton Avenue team, Overland taking the place of Walls.

Dates for three postponed games were filed, the Baptists playing T. A. B. on Labor Day afternoon on the latter field, this being the contest not played on July 5. Hope and Netherwood will play its postponed game of July 5 on Labor Day afternoon at Hope field and Saurer and Baptist will play its postponed game on Saturday, September 11.

The managers of Clinton Avenue and Hope have arranged to play Saturday's game on Hope field and Saurer will meet the Baptists on the latter's field on West End avenue, it being considered a home game for Saurer. Netherwood will play T. A. B. on the latter's field.

There was a general discussion of the work of the umpires there being some praise and some criticism. It was the opinion that the "umps" should not smoke while working in a game, in fact the league put itself on record as being opposed to the practice.

Although the Baptist team has not yet won a game since the league started, neither the manager nor the players are discouraged. They realize that they have been playing in hard luck, and feel sure that the "breaks" must soon come their way.

Today's Results.

Yale, 5; Netherwood, 1.

Victory came to the Yale team again this morning, the score being 5 to 1. Only one hit was made off Newell during the full nine innings. Keating, Mundy, Clark and Burke all clouted out doubles.

Score by innings:

Red Killifer, the Phillies' star catcher, is in bad with Bill Klem. He was catching a game and thought Klem was off on balls and strikes.

"What did you call that?" he demanded, turning as Klem yelled "Ball!"

"Ball," snapped Klem belligerently.

"What did you call that?" demanded Killifer a minute later.

"Ball," snapped Klem, more belligerently, squaring off for trouble.

"What did you call that?" demanded Killifer when Klem yelled "Strike!"

"I called that a strike," snorted Klem.

"What are you trying to do—outguess me?" asked Killifer mildly.

BAPTISTS TAKING ON ADDITIONAL WEIGHT

Earle Pierson and Downes Look Like Healthy Assets to Cellarites.

At last night's City League meeting the names of former Captain Earle Pierson and Downes were added to the Baptist roster, while that of Overland was added to the Clinton Avenue list in place of Walls, the Bound Brook star. Pierson, who has had considerable experience along baseball lines in this city, performed for the Baptists before but did not enter the league with them. Now he will assume the duties of captain, relieving Dan Randolph of the two-fold work of attending to the manager and captain's business. The addition of Pierson will necessitate a shift in the infield, Barnes going to first and the new man covering second.

The change ought to be of great benefit to the team as a whole as Barnes, having attended to the first station work for the old Clinton Avenues for several seasons, is thoroughly familiar with the bag. Who will be released from active service is a matter of conjecture. Stine and Patterson, a battery, were used in the infield Saturday, giving evidence of the fact that the team is in need of good fast infielders. It is most likely that these two men, when not doing battery work, will be given a rest, unless some infielder or outfielder shows up poorly at bat or in the field. To do this would detract from the batting strength of the team as the two men mentioned are heavy clouters. Where Downes will play is not known but as he is a fast man he will no doubt contest with some of the regulars for a steady berth.

YALE TEAM TAKES LEAD IN JUNIOR LEAGUE RACE

The Yale baseball team grasped the junior league leadership more firmly yesterday by handing the Hartford outfit a 7 to 4 trimming. Joe Newell still has the habit of twirling two-hit games, relieving himself of one yesterday, the only hits made off him being registered by Mullin and Porter, players who can easily hold their own in much faster company. "Pop" Keating and Muir swung their clubs with telling effect every time they were given the chance, while "Dubby" Poling and "Home-run" McCarthy garnered two hits out of two times at bat. Doubles were numerous during the fray and bases were stolen at will.

The score:

GRIMES PLAYED.

"Red" Grimes, the Somerville ballist who performed here several times when the Central New Jersey League existed, played left field for the Knights of St. Anthony at New Brunswick Sunday. The Saints were defeated by the Michelins 2 to 1, and Grimes scored the only run his team made. He registered a safety and handled three putouts without making a slip.

AMATEUR BALL JINGLES

Injuries were numerous in the Netherwood-Hope affair Saturday, Earle Moran getting tapped roughly on the knee in the latter game. "Hoppy" Walls, most of the "pepper" on the Hope team, slid to second on one occasion just as one hopeful East Ender sent the pill flying in that direction, ostensibly to nail "Hoppy." It nailed him all right and now he sports a skin "erasure" back of his left ear.

"Youngster" Brennan found Warry McLaughlin no puzzle, getting his weekly two hits. One of these was a double which the ambitious coacher tried to stretch into a triple, with the result that Brennan was nailed at the difficult corner.

Harriman donned a Saurer uniform again and performed well, assuming responsibility for everything that came his way. At bat he did nothing out of the ordinary, but found the pill for a couple of fouls on each occasion.

It pays to be tall sometimes. In Saturday's Baptist-Clinton Avenue tilt two line drives were hit at "Dunk" Patterson, who was in the pitcher's box. The wallops were good for two bases if they passed the infield. However, Patterson, in each case, made a plunge into the atmosphere and nailed the pill, preventing the men from registering at first.

"Warry McLaughlin was toying with the Tabs Saturday," is the way one local fan expressed himself today. A rabid Tab follower took up the argument and wanted to know if his opponent was not of the opinion that Warry did not fool much when three men were on and only one was out in the fifth inning of the same battle. Both parties agreed on the contested point. Side-line chatter, which did not assume the form of "crabbing," worked on the big fellow's nerves and several times he was on the verge of calling on Coriell for relief. However, he was saved the embarrassment by his "Umps" who removed the "objections."

"Box" Apgar made a splendid catch of a foul fly Saturday, although he fell when he attempted to field the ball. Apgar's work behind the bat has caused considerable comment among the followers of the league sports. He is there with the "chin" action, too, and seems to infuse this sign of good spirits into his fellows.

Saturday's home run hitters? They don't do those things around this vicinity, although doubles and triples are not unusual. "Pop" Martin treated himself to two keystone rides and one three-station ticket. Then he retired.

A little more "pep" on the part of the Tab third sacker wouldn't hurt the game any.

We must commend "Henny" Winters, who though usually weak with the stick, made Warry's shoots look foolish.

Stahl and O'Leary amused themselves with the Baptists and Clintons Saturday. Although both players were not supposed to play a compromise was affected whereby each of the two teams was allowed to make use of one ineligible.

Another Royal match not played. However, we cannot blame Kline for the misunderstanding that resulted Saturday as his team and that of his opponents appeared at Hyde Oval to play and found the place occupied. Through mis-information they understood that the place was not in use for the afternoon.

Manager Willett is still booking games, although his team is being divested of some of its best material by the City League outfits.

"Tush" Jaeger signed up with the Sunday Tabs and played his usual game. The Tiger hurler had nothing that "Tush" failed to solve, although the Newarker's pitching was a decided improvement on that exhibited by the hurlers of several other metropolitan semi-pro combinations that have appeared here at various times.

"Dipper" Jones is still angling for games. He intends going to Newark this week where he will interview one Billy Sims, manager of the Newark Stars.

Cravath Invents Catcher's Glove.

"Gabby" Cravath, outfielder of the Philadelphia Nationals, has invented a new kind of glove for backstops. The glove is much lighter than the heavy, cumbersome ones now in general vogue. The padding in it consists of goat hair. He says that with his new glove the backstop will not feel a sting from the hardest pitched ball.

Fighter Now Army Aviator.

Georges Carpentier, the French heavyweight boxing champion, having obtained his pilot's certificate as an aviator, is now definitely attached to the aviation corps of the French army.

JACK MARTIN HELPS TO WIN CLOSE GAME

Timely Double-decker Brings in the Lone Run of the Game.

Harry Niles and Jack Martin produced the swats that permitted Charley Hall, the veteran St. Paul American Association hurler, to win his tenth consecutive game Sunday. His victims were the Kansas City baseball team and he allowed them only three hits, winning the game 1 to 0. Neither side had scored up to the eighth frame although both sides had threatened on two occasions. In the eighth stanza after Hall had grounded out, Harry Niles tore off his third hit of the afternoon. It was a vicious drive that struck the screen in right field.

The large crowd of fans present were intensely excited and cries of "a little tap, Jack, old boy," greeted the local lad when he approached the plate. The first ball pitched to him was a curve and Jack connected with it for a double scoring Niles and winning the game. In the field Jack did not have a chance to do anything unusual, but he handled four chances without an error. The Saints are in first place, gaining that position after reeling off a cluster of successive wins, many of the games annexed by them being pulled out of the fire by the timely clouting of Niles and Martin. The fact that Jack has been placed second in the batting order goes to show that the great improvement shown by him both in fielding and hitting has been appreciated by Manager Kelly.

PLANK YOUNG AT FORTY.

Time Hangs Lightly on the Shoulders of Veteran Pitcher.

If further evidence than the masterful ball which he has pitched all season were needed to prove that the forty summers he already has endured hang lightly on his strong left arm Eddie Plank of the St. Louis Feds produced it recently.

another crisis in his career, which has been replete with thrills punctuated ever so often with feats of hurling that will live in baseball history. He was asked to oppose Chief Bender, his former teammate, for the first time in his life.

Bender and Plank both have been known as "money" pitchers. They're best in the pinch, and it was their well advertised clash which attracted 10,000 fans to Terrapin park in Baltimore.

So it was up to Plank to do something. And he did. He shut out the enemy, displaying much wizardry.

It was Plank for the money, and he won pulled up, as he has done so often. In last year's world's series, when the Braves sideswiped the Mackmen four straight, Plank's game easily was the best put forth by the A. L. moundsmen. He was beaten 1 to 0 by Bill James in that memorable struggle in which Charley Deal, now Plank's best supporter, turned what appeared to be a "boner" into a brilliant piece of base running in the ninth inning. Deal was trapped off second, but he made third when Schang threw to Barry. Subsequently Whitted singled, beating Plank.

Plank is in his forty-first year. He was born at Gettysburg, Pa., in 1875 and was graduated from Gettysburg college. He first attracted attention as a pitcher for the varsity nine. Connie Mack haled him to Philadelphia in 1901. He made good from the go and helped the Mackmen to pennants in 1902, 1905, 1910, 1911, 1913 and 1914. He was unconditionally released last fall in Mack's scheme of retrenchment.

Fielder Jones claimed him over Bender, although Fielder had his choice. Plank today is one big reason why the Terriers are on top.

ROD AND REEL

Big schools of bluefish are reported as having made their appearance off the lower Jersey coast and they are expected around the northern coast in a few days.

Seabass are running well in the Sheepshead Bay region and are biting readily. In the many messes recently brought in several humpbacks have made their appearance.

Fluke fishing Sunday was unusually poor although no reason can be assigned for the fact.

Seabass and blackfish are numerous in the Wreck Lead. It seems that both these kinds of fish frequent the remains of old hulks.

Kingfish have been caught in great numbers at Deal during the past week and no doubt many local fishermen will take trips to this resort to try their luck.

Channel bass have not appeared in any great numbers off Corson's Inlet during the past week, but they ought to be numerous during the coming week.

Lake Hopatcong is about the only fresh water lake in this vicinity that has not been subjected to poor fishing conditions by the recent heavy rains.

The best position now open to one of your ability and experience will be secured by a want advertiser.

PLAN TO ORGANIZE AN INDEPENDENT SPORT TEAM.

Fred Attlee is the creator of a movement which may result in the organization of a baseball team in the vicinity of Terrill road. There are several good players in that region and a fast combination could be formed from the material on hand. Attlee was identified with baseball when he lived in the west end of the city and made a success of the ventures which he undertook. Art Attlee, Bob Manning and Patrick Murray are three of the most promising artists in the section.

Sametime ago an attempt was made to organize a scout troop in the same vicinity but the plans have not been completed as yet. Camp Coriell, an ideal place to camp, is located on Terrill road and this fact ought to speed the process of getting together a successful troop. Cedric Ostrom is at the head of the movement and has the aid of all the scouts in the city. If a success is made of the venture the new troop will be under the leadership of one from this city. A baseball team, with good coaching and playing facilities, can then be organized and the tiresome process of getting together an independent combine can be eliminated.

The want ad way of tenant-finding is the accepted way—and means small expense and delay.

BALTIC WAS CHASED BY SUBMARINE, BUT ESCAPED

London, July 27—The White Star liner Baltic, from New York to Liverpool, was chased by a German submarine off Fastnet, according to stories told by her passengers, who arrived here today. The Baltic put in at Liverpool yesterday afternoon.

Several possengers reported the incident. They said a British patrol boat sighted the submarine and apparently gave chase.

The submarine appeared just before dusk Friday night, passengers said, and was less than a mile away when first sighted. The ship immediately adopted a zigzagging course, they said, the lookouts evidently having caught sight of the German vessel.

Most of the passengers were at dinner at the time, but several who were on deck vouched for the story.

CONSOLIDATION OF BUSINESS BODIES

National Representative of Trades' Boards Advocates Movement.

Mark P. Prentiss, traveling representative of the National Chamber of Commerce, was a visitor in Plainfield yesterday, and in the afternoon met the trustees of the Business Men's Association informally in the association headquarters on Park avenue and spoke at some length on matters pertaining to the good of the organization.

Mr. Prentiss is employed by the Government to go about and assist Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce, Business Men's Leagues and similar organizations in any matters of difficulty that may beset them, but his visit to Plainfield yesterday was purely an informal one. He has a summer home at Metuchen and ran over to this city in order to look about and investigate local conditions, with no object in view save that of meeting some of the business men. Among others upon whom he called was Herman Schwed, president of the Business Men's Association.

Mr. Prentiss believes in the consolidation of all the various business organizations there may be in a town or city into one large and strong association, and with Mr. Schwed, Mr. Prentiss discussed some of the advantages of such a confederation. So impressed was Mr. Schwed with the soundness of Mr. Prentiss' remarks and so interesting did he find him as a speaker that he proposed an informal meeting for the afternoon at which Mr. Prentiss could present his views to other members of the organization of which Mr. Schwed is president.

There were only about half a dozen men present, but they were all impressed with the soundness of Mr. Prentiss' talk. One strong civic and commercial body was the keynote of his speech, and after the meeting was over Mr. Prentiss expressed a willingness to come over to Plainfield at any time this summer and address a meeting of the association.

Plainfield has four organizations whose objects are similar—the Board of Trade, the Business Men's Association, the Chamber of Commerce and the Credit Men's Association. According to Mr. Prentiss' ideas, these organizations would serve the community best if they were consolidated into one strong body.

KINKEAD WILL ARREST COPS WHO REFUSED AID

Sheriff Determined to Bring Peace to Bayonne—2,500 Back at Work.

Bayonne, July 27.—Policemen of Jersey City and Hoboken sworn in during the night by Sheriff Kinkead of Hudson county as deputy sheriffs, and ordered to report to him in Bayonne at 5 o'clock this morning, failed to comply with his orders. Sheriff Kinkead declared that he would go after them today and if they refused to recognize his authority he would place them under arrest. 2,500 oil strikers returned to work this morning. None of the still cleaners or employes of the barrel or can factories returned, however.

The employes of the Eagle Oil Company's plant at Caven Point, Jersey City, all struck today. None of the 2,000 or more employes appeared for work there today. The strikers gathered outside of the plant and have been annoying the police, but there has been no serious rioting. Two hundred patrolmen are on duty near the plant.

It was an impressive sight today when 2,500 strikers who had promised to go back to work were lined up in front of police headquarters on Avenue C, Bayonne. They were arranged in groups of 300 and 500 men.

Under the escort of Sheriff Kinkead and his deputies the striking workmen were escorted to the plants of the Standard Oil Company and the Tide Water Company. There was no rioting along the line of march and by 9 o'clock all of the 2,500 men were at work.

Mayor Pierre Garven has announced that a committee appointed by the strikers had informed him that all the men would return to work by tomorrow morning.

BRITAIN CHANGES NOTE.

Washington, July 27—Great Britain is preparing another note in addition to the one now in the possession of the State Department, replying to the United States protest against seizure or detention of American ships bound for neutral ports, and today requested that publication of the first be held up. The request came from Earl Grey, and Secretary Lansing immediately cabled his acquiesance. It had been intended to make the existing note public tomorrow. The supplementary note, Secretary Lansing said, is expected to modify the one now in his possession. Sir Edward Grey's message said that the addendum would be ready within a week.

MRS. HENRY HANSEN DIES IN HOSPITAL

Sudden Death Following Operation Shocks Her Many Friends in This City.

Failing to rally from the effects of an operation performed in Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Matilda Hansen, of 334 East Second street, passed away at that institution shortly before midnight. She had long been a sufferer from an intestinal ailment and an operation was decided upon with the hope of benefitting her.

Mrs. Hansen was the wife of Henry Hansen, a well known local liveryman and she had lived in this city for thirty-four years. The family homestead was located on Johnston avenue and Mrs. Hansen was one of the best known women in the Netherwood section. Her genial disposition and warm heartedness made her many staunch friends who will be shocked at her sudden death. Several years ago Mr. Hansen moved with his family to their present home on East Second street and Mrs. Hansen likewise gained numerous friends in that neighborhood.

She was born in Sweden and was educated in that country. Mrs. Hansen is survived by her husband and three children, Harold, living at home; Carl H., and Mrs. Hannah Bozark, of Johnston avenue, Netherwood. She also leaves three grandchildren. The funeral will be held from the late residence Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and interment will be made in Hillside cemetery. The Rev. E. C. Conover will be in charge.

MASTER PAINTERS ATTEND CONVENTION

Local Representatives Leave for Eleventh Annual Session at Asbury Park.

Representatives of the Master Painters' Association of Plainfield left here today for Asbury Park to attend the eleventh annual convention of the New Jersey State Association of Master Painters and Decorators to be held during the next four days. The local delegates are L. B. Woolston, Clarence W. Mundy and James C. Hansen. As a member of the State executive board, Charles Conover, treasurer of the Plainfield body, also went.

The most important question to be discussed at this convention, according to previous reports, is how to keep the price of paints down if the war continues. It it a well-known fact that the conflict in Europe is causing paints to soar in prices, some being up 400 per cent. The average increase, however, is not more than fifteen per cent.

The painters and decorators are said to fear that if the price of paints go up, as it may, judging from present indications, the total amount of painting done will fall off so as to greatly reduce their work. The price of white lead, which is the base of most paints, is also going up because it is made from pig lead, and pig lead is what munitions manufacturers are making ammunition out of at far greater profits than can be obtained by turning it into paint.'

The convention is being held in Hotel Brunswick and the entertainment committee has arranged for a ball game at the athletic grounds Thursday afternoon, after which a clam-bake at Avon will be the attraction. In the evening there will be a ball at Hotel Brunswick.

FAST DRIVING CHARGE NOT SUSTAINED IN COURT

The complaint against Edward Jackson, of 297 Somerset street, who was charged with driving an automobile through Watchung at a faster rate of speed than the law allows, was dismissed by Justice Thomas H. Snape, of North Plainfield, who heard the case last evening.

Jackson was summoned to appear in court on complaint of Officer Henry Allen, of Watchung, who had received complaints to the effect that Jackson dashed through the place on Saturday at a speed of twenty-five miles an hour. At the hearing last night no evidence to prove that Jackson was going at anywhere near the speed alleged was presented, and Justice Snape quickly dismissed the case.

MODESTO, CALIF., USES TAXATION TO ENCOURAGE FARMING

Starting with the Modesto district, four California irrigation districts have been conducting an experiment in single tax as applied to district revenues. The latest to adopt this method was the Turlock district, in which the farmers voted for the new system in a proportion of nine to one. Oakdale and South San Joaquin had already taken the step.

Modesto started in 1887 to tax improvements as well as land, but found that this penalized the farmer who improved his land, planted orchards and erected buildings. At the same time, absentee land owners who held large tracts out of use, were lightly taxed and made large amounts in speculation.

The situation was first met by low assessments on improvements, but speculators objected so strongly that Assemblyman T. F. Griffin secured the passage of a law to put all of the tax on the unimproved value of the land, when the electors should so decide. The election was carried by a large majority in 1911, over the opposition of the larger land owners.

The result has been the cutting up of large tracts into smaller farms, intensive cultivation and unprecedented building activity in the city of Modesto. There is practically no sentiment for return to the old system.

COURT OVERRULES POLICE IN FAVOR OF PASTOR PROPAGANDIST

HERBERT BIGELOW

BIGELOW ADDRESSING STREET CROWD

"Thou shalt not steal," is a text fit to be preached on the streets. Under express sanction of a Cincinnati court, Herbert Bigelow, pastor of the People's church, is preaching it daily and nightly from the street corners.

When Bigelow applied for a permit to speak in public thoroughfares, John R. Holmes, director of safety, declined his sanction, but an action in mandamus forced him to issue the document.

"I want to get to the people and tell them what is meant by the application of Christianity to modern social problems," said Bigelow on the witness stand.

"We have the commandment 'thou shalt not steal.' The electric company is now trying to get a franchise for ten-cent electricity. If current can be delivered at a profit for from three to six cents per kilowatt hour, then a ten-cent rate is stealing, none the less reprehensible because it is done under sanction of law."

Director Holmes testified that he thought Bigelow was furthering an I. W. W. scheme, but declined to give his reason for thinking so.

The court of appeals, in upholding the churchman, cited his service as president of the constitutional convention of Ohio and as a legislator, finding him to be eminently qualified to discuss public questions from his own viewpoint.

JOHN R. HOLMES

Bigelow is now addressing crowds daily and nightly from his automobile. At night he uses a stereopticon to illustrate the points of his speech. A reference by him to the fact that Jesus spoke on street corners drew fire from Charles P. Taft, whose newspaper printed an ironical comparison between Christ's gospel and what it called Bigelow's message of hate.

"Did I ever call anyone a hypocrite, a child of hell, a whited sepulchre, a serpent or a viper?" asked Bigelow in his retort. "All these phrases were used by Jesus toward his critics.

"Mr. Taft owns a piece of ground that, by increase of population will be worth $100,000 more at the end of ten years. I say this increase belongs to the city and should be taken, as it is in German cities. Mr. Taft, I suppose, thinks he has a divine right to easy money. I do not hate him for this. I simply disagree with him."

CHAPTER XII.

The Death Grapple.

"YOU have been very considerate of me, Miss Supervisor," Wayland took her hand. "I've never seen such hands. They are like steel and yet they are feminine."

She drew her hands away. "I'm ashamed of my hands—they are so big and rough and dingy."

"They're brown, of course, and calloused—a little—but they are not big and they are beautifully modeled." He looked at the girl of the forest speculatively. "I am wondering how you would look in conventional dress."

"Do you mean"— She hesitated. "I'd look like a gawk in one of those low necked outfits. I'd never dare—and those tight skirts would sure cripple me."

"Oh, no, they wouldn't. You'd have to modify your stride a little, but you'd negotiate it. You're equal to anything."

"You're making fun of me!"

"No, I'm not. I'm in earnest. You're the kind of American girl that can go anywhere and do anything. My sisters would mortgage their share of the golden streets for your abounding health—and so would I."

"You are all right now," she smiled. "You don't look or talk as you did."

"It's this sunlight." He lifted a spread hand as if to clutch and hold something. "I feel it soaking into me like some magical oil. No more moping and whining for me. I've proved that hardship is good for me."

"Don't crow till you're out of the woods. It's a long ride down the hill and going down is harder on the tenderfoot than going up."

"I'm no longer a tenderfoot. All I need is another trip like this with you and I shall be a master trailer."

All this was very sweet to her, and though she knew they should be going she lingered. Childishly reckless of the sinking sun, she played with the wild flowers at her side and listened to his voice in complete content. He was right. The hour was too beautiful to be shortened, although she saw no reason why others equally delightful might not come to them both. He was more of the lover than he had ever been before, that she knew, and in the light of his eyes all that was not girlish and charming melted away. She forgot her heavy shoes, her rough hands and sun tanned face and listened with wondering joy and pride to his words, which were of a fineness such as she had never heard spoken—only books contained such unusual and exquisite phrases.

A cloud passing across the sun flung down a shadow of portentous chill and darkness. She started to her feet with startled recollection of the place and the hour.

"We must be going—at once!" she commanded.

"Not yet," he pleaded. "It's only a cloud. The sun is coming out again. I have perfect confidence in your woodcraft. Why not spend another night on the trail? It may be our last trip together."

He tempted her strongly, so frank and boyish and lovable were his glances and his words. But she was vaguely afraid of herself, and though the long ride at the moment seemed hard and dull the thought of her mother waiting decided her action.

"No, no!" she responded firmly. "We have wasted too much time already. We must ride."

He looked up at her with challenging glance. "Suppose I refuse—suppose I decide to stay here?"

Upon her as he talked a sweet hesitation fell, a dream which held more of happiness than she had ever known. "It is a long, hard ride," she thought, "and another night on the trail will not matter." And so the moments passed on velvet feet, and still she lingered, reluctant to break the spell.

Suddenly into their idyllic drowse of content, so sweet, so youthful and so pure of heart, broke the sound of a horse's hurrying, clashing steel shod feet, and, looking up, Berrie saw a mounted man coming down the mountain side with furious, reckless haste.

"It is Cliff!" she cried out. "He's on our trail!" And into her face came a look of alarm. Her lips paled; her eyes widened. "He's mad—he's dangerous! Leave him to me," she added.

There was something so sinister in the rider's disregard of stone and tree and pace, something so menacing in the forward thrust of his body, that Berrie was able to divine his wrath and was smitten into irresolution, all her hardy, boyish self reliance swallowed up in the weakness of the woman. She forgot the pistol at her belt and awaited the assault with rigid pose.

As Belden neared them Norcross also perceived that the rider's face was distorted with passion and that his glance was not directed upon Berrie, but upon himself, and he braced himself for the attack.

Leaving his saddle with one flying leap, which the cowboy practices at play, Belden hurled himself upon his rival with the fury of a panther.

The slender youth went down before the big rancher as though struck by a catapult, and the force of his fall against the stony earth stunned him so that he lay beneath his enemy as helpless as a child.

Belden snarled between his teeth, "I told you I'd kill you, and I will!"

But this was not to be. Berea suddenly recovered her native force. With a cry of pain, of anger, she flung herself on the maddened man's back. Her hands encircled his neck like a collar of bronze.

"Let go!" she commanded, with deadly intensity. "Let go or I'll choke the life out of you! Let go, I say!"

He raised a hand to beat her off, but she was too strong, too desperate to be driven away. She was as blind to pain as a mother eagle and bent above him so closely that he could not bring the full weight of his fist to bear. With one determind hand still clutching his throat, she ran the fingers of her other hand into his hair and twisted his head upward with a power which he could not resist. And so, looking into his upturned ferocious eyes, she repeated with remorseless fury, "Let go, I say!"

His swollen face grew rigid, his mouth gaped, his tongue protruded, and at last, releasing his hold on his victim, he rose, flinging Berrie off with a final desperate effort. "I'll kill you, too!" he gasped.

Up to this moment the girl had felt no fear of herself, but now she resorted to other weapons. Snatching her pistol from its holster, she leveled it at his forehead. "Stop!" she said, and something in her voice froze him into calm. He was not a fiend; he was not a deliberate assassin; he was only a jealous, despairing, insane lover, and as he looked into the face he knew so well and realized that nothing but hate and deadly resolution lit the eyes he had so often kissed his heart gave way, and, dropping his head, he said: "Kill me if you want to. I've nothing left to live for."

There was something unreal, appalling in this sudden reversion to weakness, and Berrie could not credit his remorse. "Give me your gun," she said.

Belden snarled between his teeth, "I told you I'd kill you, and I will!"

He surrendered it to her, and she threw it aside, then turned to Wayland, who was lying white and still with face upturned to the sky. With a moan of anguish she bent above him and called upon his name. He did not stir, and when she lifted his head to her lap his hair, streaming with blood, stained her dress. She kissed him and called again to him, then turned with accusing frenzy to Belden: "You've killed him! Do you hear? You've killed him!"

The agony, the fury of hate in her voice reached the heart of the conquered man. He raised his head and stared at her with mingled fear and remorse. And so across that limp body these two souls, so lately lovers, looked into each other's eyes as though nothing but words of hate and loathing had ever passed between them. The girl saw in him only a savage, vengeful, bloodthirsty beast; the man confronted in her an accusing angel.

"I didn't mean to kill him," he muttered.

"Yes, you did! You meant it. You crushed his life out with your big hands—and now I'm going to kill you for it!"

A fierce calm had come upon her. Some faroff ancestral deep of passion called for blood revenge. She lifted the weapon with steady hand and pointed it at his heart.

His fear passed as his wrath had passed. His head drooped, his glance wavered. "Shoot!" he commanded sullenly. "I'd sooner die than live—now."

His words, his tone, brought back to her a vision of the man he had seemed when she first met and admired him. Her hand fell, the woman in her reasserted itself. A wave of weakness, of indecision, of passionate grief overwhelmed her. "Oh, Cliff!" she moaned. "Why did you do it? He was so gentle and sweet."

He did not answer. His glance wandered to his horse, serenely cropping the grass in utter disregard of this tumultuous human drama, but the wind, less insensate than the brute, swept through the grove of dwarfed, distorted pines with a desolate, sympathetic moan which filled the man's heart with a new and exalted sorrow. "You're right," he said. "I was crazy. I deserve killing."

But Berrie was now too deep in her own desolation to care what he said or did. She kissed the cold lips of the still youth, murmuring passionately, "I don't care to live without you; I shall go with you!"

Belden's hand was on her wrist before she could raise the weapon. "Don't, for God's sake; don't do that! He may not be dead!"

She responded but dully to the suggestion. "No, no. He's gone. His breath is gone."

"Maybe not. Let me see."

Again she bent to the quiet face on which the sunlight fell with mocking splendor. It seemed all a dream till she felt once more the stain of his blood upon her hands. It was all so incredibly sudden. Only just now he was exulting over the warmth and beauty of the day—and now—

How beautiful he was. He seemed asleep. The conies crying from their runways suddenly took on poignant pathos. They appeared to be grieving with her, but the eagles spoke of revenge.

A sharp cry, a note of joy sprang from her lips. "He is alive! I saw his eyelids quiver! Quick! Bring some water!"

The man leaped to his feet and, running down to the pool, filled his sombrero with icy water. He was as eager now to save his rival as he had been mad to destroy him. "Let me help," he pleaded. But she would not permit him to touch the body.

Again, while splashing the water upon his face, the girl called upon her love to return. "He hears me!" she exulted to her enemy. "He is breathing now! He is opening his eyes!"

The wounded man did, indeed, open his eyes, but his look was a blank, uncomprehending stare, which plunged her back into despair. "He don't know me!" she said, with piteous accent. She now perceived the source of the blood upon her arm. It came from a wound in the boy's head which had been dashed upon a stone.

The sight of this wound brought back the blaze of accusing anger to her eyes. "See what you did!" she said, with cold malignity. Then by sudden shift she bent to the sweet face in her arms and kissed it passionately. "Open your eyes, darling. You must not die! I won't let you die! Can't you hear me? Don't you know where you are?"

He opened his eyes once more, quietly, and looked up into her face with a faint, drowsy smile. He could not yet locate himself in space and time, but he knew her and was comforted.

Slowly the youth's eyes took on expression. "Are we still on the hill?" he asked.

"Yes, dearest," she assured him. Then to Belden, "He knows where he is!"

Wayland again struggled with reality. "What has happened to me?"

"You fell and hurt your head."

He turned slightly and observed the other man looking down at her with dark and tragic glance. "Hello, Belden," he said feebly. "How came you here?" Then noting Berrie's look, he added: "I remember. He tried to kill me." He again searched his antagonist's face. "Why didn't you finish the job?"

The girl tried to turn his thought aside. "It's all right now, darling. He won't make any more trouble. Don't mind him. I don't care for anybody now you are coming back to me."

Wayland wonderingly regarded the face of the girl. "And you—are you hurt?"

"No, I'm not hurt. I am perfectly happy now." She turned to Belden with quick, authoritative command. "Unsaddle the horses and set up the tent. We won't be able to leave here tonight."

He rose with instant obedience, glad of a chance to serve her, and soon had the tent pegged to its place and the bedding unrolled. Together they lifted the wounded youth and laid him upon his blankets beneath the low canvas roof which seemed heavenly helpful to Berea.

"There!" she said caressingly. "Now you are safe, no matter whether it rains or not."

He smiled. "It seems I'm to have my way after all. I hope I shall be able to see the sun rise. I've sort of lost my interest in the sunset."

"Now, Cliff," she said as soon as the camp was in order and a fire started, "I reckon you'd better ride on. I haven't any further use for you."

"Don't say that, Berrie," he pleaded. "I can't leave you here alone with a sick man. Let me stay and help."

She looked at him for a long time before she replied. "I shall never be able to look at you again without hating you," she said. "I shall always remember you as you looked when you were killing that boy. So you'd better ride on and keep a-riding. I'm going to forget all this just as soon as I can, and it don't help me any to have you around. I never want to see you or hear your name again."

"You don't mean that, Berrie!"

"Yes, I do," she asserted bitterly. "I mean just that. So saddle up and pull out. All I ask of you is to say nothing about what has happened here. You'd better leave the state. If Wayland should get worse it might go hard with you."

He accepted his banishment. "All right. If you feel that way I'll ride. But I'd like to do something for you before I go. I'll pile up some wood"—

"No. I'll take care of that." And without another word of farewell she turned away and re-entered the tent.

Mounting his horse with painful slowness, as though suddenly grown old, the reprieved assassin rode away up the mountain, his head bent low, his eyes upon the ground.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Away Went the Wrinkle.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—The Wrinkle That Wouldn't Stay Put.

"ONCE there was a wrinkle that wouldn't stay put," said daddy to Jack and Evelyn as they came to him for the evening story. "But it tried so hard to stay put. It kept coming back and coming back but it would have to go away again. That wrinkle showed persistence that was worthy of a better cause.

"And where do you suppose that wrinkle was, children? Why, nowhere else in the world than right in the center of a little girl's forehead.

"I guess the reason the wrinkle wanted to stay there was because it was a nice, fresh, young forehead that had not entertained wrinkles very long.

"The little girl woke with the wrinkle one morning. She was usually a good little girl, and so pleasant, but this morning just before she waked along came the wrinkle, and so that little girl got out of bed crosswise.

"And she dressed, and nothing went right, and her buttons wouldn't button, and her hooks wouldn't hook, and she was not a happy little girl at all. And she went downstairs to her breakfast looking as if that wrinkle never would come off, or perhaps I should say come out.

"And her papa saw the wrinkle, and he thought he would drive it away and he said, 'Oh, you puss!' and he caught her and tickled her. And she giggled and laughed, and away went the wrinkle from between her eyes.

"But her daddy left for his work, and back came the wrinkle to bother the poor, patient mother of this little girl. The mamma didn't like to see the wrinkle, and she was very nice to her little girl and made her laugh once or twice, and then away would go the wrinkle. And then it would come back.

"It was vacation time, and after breakfast the little girl went out to play in the yard. And a little playmate from the next house came over for awhile, but she didn't stay. The naughty wrinkle continued to tie up this little girl's forehead, and it made her very cross and naughty. So her little friend cried and went home.

"Her mother had been watching, and now she came out and sat down in a big easy chair on the lawn and took the little girl on her lap and told her about the naughty wrinkles and how much trouble they make in the world. And finally this little girl we are telling about made a great big resolve.

"'Mamma,' she said, 'I won't let the naughty wrinkle stay put.'

"So she smiled instead and then felt happier. And she called her little playmate over and told her how sorry she was, and they had a nice time for the rest of the day."

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Dick rushed up the steps and through the door.

"Hurrah!" he called in a high state of glee. "Nell, my girl, the fortune is ours."

Nell looked out of the bedroom door, and Dick held out a letter to her.

"Is it a big one?" she exclaimed, running to him.

"Now, sit down, dear, and prepare for a shock." Dick solemnly led her to a chair.

"Yes, the best ever. Read it," he commanded, for she sat looking at the outside of the envelope.

Nell drew the paper forth with tremulous fingers. A blue slip dropped to her lap. She picked it up and began to read.

"Pay to the order of R. C. Morton $1.50, annual dividend——" She dropped her hands into her lap and looked at Dick.

"Tell me what this means. Is this your joke?" Tears stood in her eyes and Dick stopped laughing and drew a chair to her side.

"That preposterous old curmudgeon in Sweden willed that only the interest on his property could be paid over to the heirs each year. I suppose he had heard of American spendthrifts and was afraid his hoarded wealth would be dissipated. There is a large family of the Neumans and you may be sure the lawyers lined their pockets; the interest on what was left divided among them equally gives each the princely sum of $1.50 a year. Positively, I think it is the best ever." But he stopped for Nell was sobbing hysterically.

"I wish he'd kept his old money and had it buried with him; he's only succeeded in getting us all unsettled and in the end has set us down with a jolt," she sobbed.

"Now, Nell, look here; we are just as well off as we were before; we've lost nothing and we can surely rise above a little disappointment. How fortunate it is that we quarreled over the proper manner of spending it before it came. We are those quarrels ahead; now I am prepared to be magnanimous. 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow . . . to have and to hold,'" he exclaimed, putting the draft in her hand with a great flourish. "Nell, you shall spend the entire fortune just as you please." Dick made a profound bow. Nell laughed in spite of her disappointment.

"I tell you that deserves framing; a fortune like that isn't heard of every day." He took a frame from the wall. "It will fit in here with an impressive margin." He deftly inserted the draft and replaced the back. "Now, we'll hang this over the mantle for all comers to rejoice over."

"What about the baby's draft?" asked Nell, wiping a few belated tears from her eyes.

"That cannot be touched until the beneficiary is of age. It is to be deposited to his credit at the First National Bank of Kansas City." Dick was reading from the bulky document, sent by the lawyer.

"He will have that much of the much to be desired reserve fund you were so set upon, and by the time he is twenty-one it may be large enough to see with the naked eye. Then you will have 'such a secure feeling,' for you will always have something coming." There was a tinge of bitterness in Nell's tone.

"Doesn't that make a lovely decoration hanging over the mantle? I tell you, Nell, we have a mine of fun in this and anything that adds to the sum of one's laughs is a benefaction. I feel rich," and he drew his wife to his side and kissed the troubled lines in her forehead.

"Anyway we shall get rid of the agents and the plunder they have insisted on loading on us," said Nell with reviving spirits.

Household Hints

FRUIT COMPOTES

Compote of Melons—Peel melons, cut them into slices, remove seeds, trim them and put into sauce pan with enough syrup to cover; add small piece of cinnamon and let them simmer over slow fire for a quarter of an hour, then remove sauce pan from fire and let contents remain for several hours in the syrup. Arrange slices in a compote dish, pour syrup over and serve.

Compote of Gooseberries—Top and tail one quart of gooseberries, drop into boiling water two minutes, drain and let lie three minutes in cold water containing a tablespoon vinegar to restore their color; then drain quite dry. Boil for ten minutes a syrup made from a pint each of sugar and water; drop in the gooseberries and boil them gently until just tender—about ten to fifteen minutes. Pour into a glass dish. Tiny shreds of lemon peel boiled with the syrup improves the compote.

THE TABLE

Fried Tomatoes—Green tomatoes are very nice fried for breakfast or luncheon. Select smooth tomatoes which are quite green. Cut them into thin slices, then dip into beaten eggs and cracker crumbs or fine corn meal. Fry in boiling fat. A poached egg on each slice makes quite a substantial breakfast. Green cucumbers are also very good by paring and slicing the long way and frying the same as tomatoes.

Buster Brown Cake—Cream together two cups medium brown sugar, one-half cup shortening, two eggs (reserve one white for frosting), one cup sour milk with one teaspoon soda, two cups flour sifted three times, pinch of salt, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Bake in two layers. Frosting: Boil one cup granulated sugar with one-fourth cup water till it spins a thread, pour on whipped white slowly, beating all the time. Put in one-half cup chopped raisins, mix well, put between and on top of cake.

Raisin Cream Pie—Make a thickening the same as for a cream pie with milk, cornstarch, eggs and sugar. Then stew about a cupful of the red seedless raisins in a very little water. Strain out and add to the thickening. Add to the already baked crust, frost with the white of the egg, sprinkle with cocoanut and set in oven to brown.

COOL SUMMER DRINK

Take one pound finely powdered loaf sugar, one ounce citric acid, twenty drops essence of lemon.

Mix immediately, and keep very dry.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of this, stirred briskly in a glass of water, will make a good glass of lemonade.

FOR THE GARDEN

If one has no arbor or pergola in the garden, a good substitute is a Japanese paper beach parasol. The handle, which needs to be lengthened with another piece of bamboo spliced on, is simply stuck in the ground. One is large enough to shade a group of people, and looks very pretty.

LICE ON POULTRY

A sure way to get rid of lice on poultry is to get about a pint of stock dip. Warm about three gallons of water and add dip according to directions.

Take each chicken and put it into this liquid up to its head, then with the hands rub under their wings and where the feathers are thickest, then let it loose. Do this on a warm morning.

Now make a much stronger solution and spray the coop and roosts good.

By keeping the coop clean and following these directions about two or three times a summer, you can keep chickens free from lice.

The Crescent Brewery, of Nampa, Idaho, is being transformed into a soft drink factory and cold storage plant and will change its name to the "Overland Beverage Co." All employes will be retained at the new work. The cooling room from which all the beer vats are being removed will be made into a cold storage plant with a capacity of 50,000 boxes of Nampa Valley apples.

All of this is done, it is said, in the name of reform. The brewers are anxious to stem the rising tide of State-wide prohibition sentiment which is just now sweeping the State. Here are some of the things the brewers propose:

Removal from the fronts of saloons all whisky and beer signs and placards of every description, advertising the sale of intoxicants.

Suspension of the beer supply to saloon men who insist in maintaining cabaret shows and other objectionable features.

Prosecution of saloon men who attempt to swell their profits of combining prostitution with the rum business.

Establishing of a booze complaint department, where anybody can file kicks against violations of the law by saloon men.

These are about as drastic reform measures as we have ever seen proposed by brewers. It is getting to be a common thing to read of brewers' public declaration for law enforcement and saloon reform. These reforms are always to be tried out on the saloon keeper, however. We have yet to record an instance where a brewer has refused to sell beer to a blind pig keeper or to supply beer to a disreputable saloon.

The country will watch with interest Philadelphia brewers' attempt to aid reform.

Dr. Coldwter, commissioner of health for New York, says:

"Alcohol impairs the tone of the muscles and lessens the product of laborers; it depreciates the skill and endurance of artisans; it impairs memory, multiplies industrial accidents, causes chronic diseases of the heart, liver, stomach and kidneys, increases the death rate from pneumonia and lessens natural immunity from infectious diseases.

After over two years' struggle to keep out of the State's Prison, Cornelius Harrington, former Alderman of the city of Newark, and proprietor of the notorious Navarro Hotel, was taken to Trenton on July 13 and securely lodged where he belongs, in the State's Prison, to work out his sentence of not less than one or more than three years, with a fine of $1,000.

Many of the readers of The American Issue will remember the strenuous campaign made by the law enforcement department of the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey against the Navarre Hotel, Hotel Broad and a number of other disorderly houses in the heart of the city of Newark, all of which were closed, and all of whose proprietors were sentenced to the penitentiary or the State Prison. Cornelius Harrington was a prominent figure in local politics, and his place was notorious as an open door to white slavery, and was under the patronage of the local "boss," Jim Nugent, City Treasurer Elmer Day and numerous other city officials.

The wheels of justice sometimes go slowly when the criminals have plenty of money to "pull," but our higher courts can usually be depended upon to do their duty.

The agitation in the beautiful residential town of Montclair against the granting of any liquor licenses, resulted in all liquor saloons and wholesale places closed from July 1 to 13 inclusive.

This short respite from the evils of the open saloon resulted from the action of the Town Council in refusing to grant any licences at their meeting on June 28, and the town remained dry while an ordinance was being prepared authorizing the granting of short term licenses. In the meantime it has been arranged to submit a referendum to the people at the next general election on the question of license or no-license, and the councilmen have pledged themselves to be governed by the decision of this referendum, and if the majority of the votes cast is for no-license, then the short-term licenses will not be renewed, and eight saloons, one hotel, two groceries, one wholesaler and one bottler will go out of the liquor business.

The Council chamber on June 28 was crowded by more than 300 persons who were anxious to know what action would be taken by the Council, and an immense overflow meeting was held in the Hillside Auditorium. This overflow meeting was addressed by many notable speakers, among them being Dr. F. G. Wells, head of the medical department of the Equitable Life Insurance Company; F. A. Arnold, editor of Suburban Life; Dr. W. M. Bethell, president of the Board of Education, and Hugo R. Munroe. The liquor dealers in Montclair are very despondent, and making their arrangements to move out in December next.

Weiss' Mid-Summer ONE CENT SALE

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 29, 30 and 31.

The great sensation created by our One Cent Sale held in May last and the many inquiries and requests that we have had for another sale has induced us to have a Great Mid-Summer One Cent Sale that will be even a greater surprise than our last sale. We are authorized by the United Drug Company to run this sale and they have made special concessions to us which will enable us to give our patrons the greatest values possible. As before, this is NOT A CUT PRICE SALE, it is simply another way of advertising. We are willing to lose money to get you acquainted with these high standard goods. You pay full price on the first and get the second for one cent.

FANCIERS PLAN FOR DOG SHOW

No Local Building, Now in View, is Big Enough to House Many Canines.

NOW SEEKING FOR SITE

Elizabeth Armory Being Considered But Efforts Will Be Made to Keep the Event in Plainfield—Expect 600 or 700 Entries This Year.

Although Plainfield has a well founded and unusually active organization of dog fanciers there is a grave possibility that the breeders of canines will this year have to hunt elsewhere for a place to hold their annual one day exhibition. The officials of the Plainfield Kennel Club have been confronted with the task of chartering a building with floor space of sufficient area to accommodate from 600 to 700 dogs and up to the present time their investigation has proven unsuccessful. Several local buildings have been considered, one of which is Columbus Club, but no one is large enough to meet the demands.

Serious attention is being given to the probability of holding the Plainfield club's show in the Elizabeth National Guard Armory, but the officers are determined to first ascertain the sentiment of the public regarding this departure inasmuch as they do not wish to complete details that may later meet with displeasure. President A. C. Wilmerding has been working on the proposition for a number of weeks and in an interview with a Daily Press reporter this morning, he expressed himself as being strongly in favor of holding it within the city limits, but also stated that he was not altogether sure but what it would be found necessary to decide upon the Elizabeth building.

The armory is an ideal place for such an event, being handy to both the Central and Pennsylvania Railroads and all trolley lines. It offers ample floor space for a thousand or more dogs and it could probably be secured without much trouble.

According to present plans the annual bench show will be held during the month of September, probably the first part, and it is imperative that the organization secure a location in the future in order to give the event due publicity. The Plainfield show in past years has been second only to the biggest metropolitan affairs of this nature and it is proposed to make the 1915 exhibition a record breaker. Matters will remain at a standstill, of course, until the site is selected and anyone having knowledge of a suitable place for the holding of the show is invited to communicate with President Wilmerding.

SOLD TO ANSWER CHARGE OF EMBEZZLING FUNDS

Facing a charge lodged against him by the New York Telephone Company, by whom he was formerly employed as a collector, George W. Grantzow was arraigned before Mayor Calkins in the city court, this morning, and held in $250 bail for hearing tomorrow morning before Judge DeMeza. Grantzow was arrested in Newark several weeks ago by Captain John J. Flynn, of the local force.

He is accused of embezzling various sums of money from the telephone concern. The specific charge involves the alleged filing of a bill purporting to have come from the Central Livery Company, the bill presented to the company being a great deal larger than the one originally sent to Grantzow. The telephone company was represented by counsel in court this morning and in the event of Grantzow waiving examination tomorrow morning he will be held for the Union County Grand Jury.

OUTLINE WORK FOR BOY SCOUTS' CAMP

Commissioner A. E. Beals Explains Advantage Offered to Boys of the City.

One advantage of a summer camp for Boy Scouts is that it teaches them resourcefulness and gives the Scoutmasters an opportunity to apply to the boys some of the instructions they have received from them during the winter. It is the purpose of the camp to teach the boys respect for law and order. Each patrol has its leader who is responsible to his assistant Scoutmaster represented at the camp by the campmaster. The Boy Scout troops of Plainfield are singularly fortunate in having a most desirable camp site right within twenty minutes walk of a trolley line, good bathing being nearby. This the element of safety should appeal largely to those who desire to help this cause.

The boy in summer has a great deal of time on his hands when school is closed. It is the purpose of the Plainfield Scout Council to endeavor to give these hundreds of Boy Scouts in Plainfield something constructive to do. Camp Coriell will be a model camp in every particular, entirely self-supporting, once the equipment has been procured. Approximately fifty dollars has been raised in the short time that the campaign has been under way. One contributor writes.

"Here is a small contribution toward the Boy Scout camp. I wish I could give more, because this Scout movement has done more for my lad in making him more willingly obedient, self-respecting and ambitious than any other single influence I know of. I certainly hope you get the full amount needed. More power to the Boy Scout movement."

"Two hundred and fifty dollars is needed," said Commissioner Beals today. "That means only 25 contributions of ten dollars each. There are many times that number of Plainfield people whose interest in the Scout movement will inspire a contribution toward the camp."

Acknowledgements of contributions wil be made by Commissioner Allen E. Beals, 634 East Second street.

CODDINGTON FINED BY MAYOR CLARK

Former Freeholder is Relieved of $2.50 When Arraigned in Borough Court.

Sitting as police magistrate in the absence of Recorder Hand, Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield, this morning, imposed a fine of $2.50 upon former Freeholder Joel Coddington, of Warren township, for not having a light on his wagon after dark on the night of June 19. Coddington was apprehended by an officer of the borough police force on the evening in question and released by Chief Marshal Weiss soon afterwards upon his promise to appear in court the following Monday morning. As he failed to keep his word, a warrant was issued for his arrest. Learning of this, Coddington gave himself up yesterday.

In court this morning the former freeholder said that his hired man had been negligent about the light, not he himself, but Mayor Clark declared the offense an infraction of the well-known principle of law pertaining to master and servant. Coddington's excuse for not attending court on the morning of June 21 was that he was ill. In these days of telephones and postoffice facilities, Mayor Clark told him, his excuse was without foundation. Coddington paid his fine. Had he appeared on the morning he promised to,he might have gotten off with a suspended sentence as has been the verdict in most of the vehicle law infraction cases in the borough this summer.

STRENUOUS DAYS FOR LOCAL TROOP

HIGHLY COMPLIMENTED

Regular Army Officer Speaks in Glowing Terms of Willing Spirit and Determination to Learn—Getting Plenty of Good Meals.

Mt. Gretna, Pa., July 27.—The rumor that Sunday was to be largely a day of rest for Troop D, First Squadron Cavalry, N. G. N. J., now in camp at Mt. Gretna, Pa., was unfounded; for though there was but one regular drill, there was so much trench digging and stable work to be done about the camp that everyone was occupied from reveille at five-fifteen till late in the afternoon.

At their first cavalry drill of the camp there were several exciting incidents. The troop was manoeuvring about the big parade ground a mile or so from camp when one trooper's saddle slipped back and his horse frightened, started off on a bucking run, and kept it up till rid of both rider and saddle. A few moments later as the full troop was coming from column formation into line at a fast trot, a big horse got altogether out of hand and started across the ground on a dead run. His rider turned him once, but unluckily toward the woods a half mile off, and straight into them the horse dashed on till he crashed into a tree. Lieutenant Runkle, who had followed found the rider pretty well done up; his shoulder was dislocated it turned out. But neither of these, nor another instance of the same kind, happened in the Plainfield platoon. Everything went smoothly so far as the

CHARITY SOCIETY REQUESTS FUNDS

Needs Special Contributions to Carry on Summer Work Among Poor.

The Charity Organization Society is facing a shortage of funds this summer usually depended upon for special relief work among poor mothers and their children, and makes an appeal to charitably inclined people to assist them in this good work.

At the last meeting of the trustees of the society the treasurer reported that because of extraordinary expenditures for relief among the needy last winter and the extra burden imposed upon the society of carrying on the work of the Commission for the Relief of the Unemployed after that body was discontinued last spring, the society was facing the special summer relief work with less money in hand than for some time.

For many years it has been the custom of the Charity Organization Society to ask the public for a small special fund of about $350 to provide milk and ice for babies during the hot weather; to pay for one-day outings at the shore for mothers and their children; to provide a two weeks' vacation in the country or at the seashore for boys and girls who really need it, and to help the poor of Plainfield in other ways.

But owing to the great number of appeals made this year upon the public from all sources, the society has tried to get along without asking its regular subscribers for any additional contributions to carry on this work, and as a result the work has been seriously curtailed. The society does not want to make a direct appeal, but hopes that through this publicity enough money will be turned into the society's treasury to permit the carrying on of the work it plans to do this next month. As the amount needed is small, the society expects a response which will make a cessation of its charitable work unnecessary.

LAST DAY OF GRACE.

This is the last day of grace to be allowed the delinquents, it was announced at the office this morning.

REVISED COUNT PLACES EASTLAND LOSS AT 1360

The Board of Trade closed at 1 o'clock today as a mark of respect to the many who perished on the steamer Eastland, and there was a general suspension of all business and amusements for the day.

JUVENILE CULPRITS ARE CAUGHT BY THE POLICE

Richard Craft, Benjamin Starr and Joseph Mango, a group of juvenile culprits who are well hardened to appearing in the city police court, were arrested by Patrolman Martin Welsh yesterday afternoon, and arraigned before Mayor Calkins this morning, on a charge of breaking three windows in the passenger coach of a Philadelphia flyer passing through this city early yesterday morning. The description furnished the police by the engineer directed the finger of suspicion at a read-headed youth, but after investigation Welsh rounded up the trio who later confessed.

Considerable trouble has been experienced by the railroad company along this line, passengers in coaches have had several narrow escapes recently when stones have been thrown through the windows.

MORE DOG LICENSES ISSUED IN BOROUGH

In pursuance of their campaign to let no owner of a dog escape the payment of the annual dog license of two dollars, the North Plainfield officials are still serving notices on residents of the borough who are known to keep canines to come forward and pay up.

Chief Marshal Weiss caused nine such notices to be served yesterday and as a result eight additional licenses were taken out this morning, one defendant failing to put in an appearance. Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., held court in the absence of Recorder Hand, and suspended sentence in all eight cases upon the defendants taking out licenses at once.

A few weeks ago the borough treasury was nearly one hundred dollars short in dog license money over the figures of last year, but since then the police have waged a systematic campaign, and it was said this morning that nearly all the forty odd delinquents had been made to comply with the ordinance.

EIGHT-HOUR DAY TO BE DEMANDED

Local Machinists Determined to Make Employers Sign Permanent Decree.

KEPPLER WILL BE HERE

International Labor Official Will Take Charge of Campaign Monday—Meeting to Be Held Tomorrow Night.

Agitation that has long been brewing among local machinists for an eight-hour day in Plainfield shops is expected to be brought to a head at an open meeting to be held in Trades' Council Hall, on West Front street, tomorrow night, at which time the demands and subsequent action will be discussed. Further emphasis has been accorded to the announcement by a statement made last night by J. J. Keppler, vice-president of the International Association of Machinists, in which he says that he will positively come to Plainfield from Bridgeport next Monday night to inaugurate a general labor fight for the eight-hour day. In the estimate with which he has been supplied Keppler finds that there are more than 1,500 machinists subject to call in Plainfield at the present time. He said, however, that these 1,500 could by their absence effectively paralyze the whole of the shops in which they worked. A grand lodge representative will speak at tomorrow night's session and several other prominent labor leaders will also be in attendance.

In a statement made last night, Mr. Keppler said: "The plans are all laid for a national strike, but the machinists didn't want to do any unnecessary damage to the manufacturers, and any employer who wants to

TO START WORK ON REFORMED CHURCH

Two Old Parish Members Will Turn First Shovelfulls of Dirt Tonight.

Exercises connected with starting work on the new edifice of the Netherwood Reformed church, on Leland avenue, will be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight when the first shovelfulls of dirt for the cellar will be turned. The pastor, Rev. Edward S. Ralston, will have charge of the exercises, which will take the form of a short prayer service, and Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will deliver an address.

The old building, a portable affair which has been used by the Netherwood Reformed congregation as a house of worship for several years, has been moved from its former location to another position in order that the new building may be built on the rear end of the church lot. Mobus Brothers moved this building last week, and tomorrow B. F. Tallamy & Brother, who have the general contract for the new building, will commence the work of excavating for the celler.

The first actual work on the new building will be done tonight by two old parish members, S. O. Rush and O. P. Wahlig. They will be given the privilege of throwing out the first shovelfulls of dirt. This will take place at some appropriate time during the brief service. Besides Mr. Broek's address, there will be prayers offered. It is expected that the church congregation will be well represented at the open-air gathering tonight.

The building which will be begun at the present time will eventually be the Sunday-school room and will be located on the rear of the lot so as to leave room for the main structure or church proper which is to be erected some time in the future. Until the main church edifice is built the chapel will be used for all church purposes. The chapel will be of hollow tile construction, finished with stucco. The estimated cost of the chapel is $13,000.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS' HIKE.

The camp fire girls of the First Presbyterian church are requested to meet at the Y. W. C. A., Friday, July 30, at 12 o'clock noon, for the postponed hike to Watchung Mountain. Each girl will bring her own luncheon. If it rains Friday, the hike will be postponed to the following Friday, August 6, at the same time and place. Miss Karner will be in charge of the party.

CITY CLERK A MOTORIST.

City Clerk James T. MacMurray has joined the ranks of motorists. A brand new Hudson six was delivered to him the other day.

SUFFRAGISTS PLAN SUMMER CAMPAIGN

Warm Weather Does Not Lessen Enthusiasm of Local League Members.

The Equal Suffrage League is holding monthly meeting this summer instead of taking a recess in the "heated season," as was formerly the custom. The meeting yesterday afternoon showed ideas and energy unabated by the warm weather. Canvassing methods were discussed with a cold determination that was actually refreshing.

Miss Esther Ogden was quoted as saying that the most successful canvass in Elizabeth was made in the business section. The window committee, Mrs. MacMillan, chairman, promised a new window for each week in competition for the $5 prize. The prize will be awarded the decoration which, in the opinion of the window committee, is best in regard to beauty, propaganda qualities and carrying qualities. It must be visible across the street by the commuters on the way to the train.

Some criticism was offered concerning the beauty of the present window, but there was no doubt it attracted attention and pointed a moral.

Those in charge of street meetings offered a program of interesting speakers who will be heard Saturday nights throughout the summer. Plans were perfected for Plainfield's share in the big automobile procession to the former home of Lucy Stone in Orange on August 13. The only damper on the enthusiasm of the occasion was the deep regret felt by all at the departure of Mrs. Witmer, who has been the headquarters secretary, but is now leaving New Jersey and moving to Massachusetts, another campaign State.

Volunteers at once offered to serve at headquarters, 110 Depot avenue, from 9 to 12 in the morning during August. The place will be closed, however, in the afternoon. The president, Mrs. A. B. Jones, reported an increasing number of ministers in favor of votes for women and the meeting closed with the confident belief that if the friends of suffrage rally at the polls on October 19 victory is assured.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST AUTO SPEED ARTISTS

Netherwood Residents' Association Hot on the Trail of Guilty Commuters.

Unless certain commuters living in the Netherwood section of the city exhibit their sanity to better advantage than they have been doing recently in driving their automobiles to and from the east end New Jersey Central station they are going to find themselves in serious trouble. Such was the opinion advanced by a prominent member of the Netherwood Residents' Association to a Plainfield Daily Press reporter this morning. The practice some automobilists have made in leaving their homes at the last minute for trains stopping at the Netherwood station and racing down Belvidere avenue is not going to be tolerated any longer; at least, that is what the peace-loving populace of that section has decreed.

According to one man who lives on Belvidere avenue that thoroughfare has been made a regular speedway between the hours of 7:30 and 8:30 each morning by commuters who linger too long over their last cup of coffee or became so interested in the doings of the Kaiser that they forget to start for their trains in ample time.

The Netherwood Residents' Association, which, by the way, has among its membership some of the community's most influential citizens, has posted a notice on Belvidere avenue warning motorists to live within the law and warning these afflicted with speed mania that repeated violation of the law will eventually mean prosecution in the police court.

Summarized, the activity of the association in the movement to reduce the speed of vehicles that make a highway out of Belvidere avenue in approaching the Netherwood station, is to impress upon careless drivers' minds the old maxim that "a stitch in time saves," or that less speed will insure pedestrians against being bothered by the hazards they now have to dodge at that point.

DRIVE GERMANS FROM TRENCHES

French Troops Have Violent Fight With Enemy North of Souchez.

MARK TIME IN RUSSIA

Germans Believed to Be Concentrating for Great Drive to Take Warsaw—Italians Continue Advance—Sea and Air Raid on Zeebrugge.

Paris, July 28.—Today's French war statement says:

"In Artois, to north of Souchez, the Germans after a heavy bombardment launched against our positions at three different points last night, several attacks. After a violent battle they were driven out of the trenches which they had succeeded in penetrating with the exception of one point where they still hold 20 yards of a mine works before our front.

"Soissons was bombarded during the night. In the Argonne in the region of La Fontaine Aux Charmes, the enemy launched an attempted attack. He was thrown back into his trenches by our infantry fire. On the rest of the front the night was calm."

The following additional statement was also given out by the War Office today:

"At the Dardanelles there is nothing to report with exception of slight advances by us on our right wing and some activity by our aviators who successfully bombarded the new aviation camp of the enemy north of Chanak. They struck the Hangars with bombs and also an oil depot. A considerable blaze resulted."

That a rupture between Germany and the United States is probable sooner or later is declared by the Petit Parisien, which comments on the situation with a statement that it has been greatly aggravated by several recent events.

Refugees from Rheims state that in the latest bombardment 600 shells of all calibres fell within four hours. Fires broke out at many points in the city.

London, July 28.—Two persons were killed and fifteen injured by the explosion of a British miliary airship at Wormwood Scrubs today. The explosion occurred while the airship was in its shed. Both machine and shed were completely wrecked.

A despatch from Copenhagen says that the Swedish bark Madonna, loaded with timber, has been set on fire in the North Sea by a German submarine.

A despatch from Petrograd says that an Imperial Ukase issued today calls to the colors men born in 1896.

Whether the check to Von Hindenburg north of Warsaw is a temporary cheering ray for the Allies or a rift of real portent in the battle cloud remains to be seen. While Petrograd despatches are optimistic, the latest Berlin statement furnishes the interpretation that the Germans between the Bug and the Narew rivers have gained a new foothold for a further extension of their strength. According to this report, Von Hinderburg is once more under way, pressing toward the Bug and the Petrograd railway that lies within the shelter of that river.

A Berlin despatch by way of Amsterdam hints that unexpected difficulties have arisen in the Warsaw campaign and says that the next plenary session of the Reichstag has been postponed ten days, or until August 19, by which time, it is expected, the Polish capital will fall.

The German drive from the Baltic provinces to flank the defences of the River Niemen is the new factor in the situation that worries Petrograd. A Russian counter-attack from Mitau was repulsed, according to the official Berlin statement.

Gen. von Buelow is now expected to turn southwest in an attempt to outflank the Russians opposing Von Hindenburg. In the mentime the Teutonic forces in the far north are moving on the Petrograd railway.

The fighting is at its height on the Narew from Dobwolenka to the Novo Georgievsk region. On the left bang of the river, says Petrograd, the enemy was held back by counter attacks. The battle rages in the forest east of Rozan. Enormous German reserves appeared above Serock, but on both bank of the Narew the Russians, it is asserted, where successful in their counter attacks. The defendants captured a Zeppelin, 700 prisoners and several Maxims.

Amsterdam, July 28.—A combined sea and air attack has been made upon Zeebrugge, the German naval base in Belgium, by the Allies, according to information received here today. A French cruiser bombarded Zeebrugge last Friday, badly damaging a German torpedo boat. This was followed by four air attacks made upon successive nights by Allied aviators.

MYSTERIOUS MAN IS CAPTURED BY POLICE

Stranger Gives His Name as John Daly and Residence, Bridgeport, Conn.

The residents of Middlesex borough can rest easy for a while at least because the mysterious and quickly disappearing man, whom the police of the borough have been diligently searching for since he made his appearance ten days ago at the residence of Mrs. Charles Murphy and tried to force his way past her into her home, is now believed to be safely lodged behind the bars in the county jail.

The police have believed that the fellow would make his appearance again and their belief was verified a 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, when a daughter of Mrs. Nelson Giles, of Harris Lane, telephoned Marshal Sisty that a queer acting man was hanging around her home and instead of going away when told had gone into a small outbuilding.

When the marshal got there he was told by the young woman that the man had finally left her premises going in the direction of the Harris lane schoolhouse. The marshal hastily gave pursuit. As the marshal neared the school property he saw a man kneeling on the steps of the schoolhouse. He was hatless, barefooted and unkempt. When asked by the marshal what he was doing he said he was repairing the steps of the school.

He gave his name as John Daly, of Bridgeport, Conn., and said that he lately worked at Millville, in the Dixon Powder Works and that he had been on a two weeks' spree. He was seeing things that did not exist and told several rambling stories. He told the marshal as he was being taken to jail that he thought he was in Fairfield, Conn.

Marshal Sisty had no difficulty in landing his man in the borough jail. When searched by the jailer the prisoner was found to have $2.36 and a pocket full of apples. Whether this is the man who presented himself at the Murphy home will not be definitely known until Mrs. Murphy and some others have had a look at him.

It is known, however, that he is the man who kept half of Middlesex borough awake Sunday night, breaking down fences and entering poultry houses and outbuildings.

The prisoner's bare feet are badly cut and bruised and he is in bad shape generally. He has no recollection of where he has been for the past two weeks and all of his talk is rambling, dating back to the Millville nitric acid room two weeks ago.

POSTAGE AND PACKING.

"When I was a gander-necked youth," pessimisti-reminiscently remarked the Old Codger, "I had a habit of answering advertisements wherein Wonder Books, Golden Boxes of Goods, and other rare bargains were offered absolutely free; all I had to do was to send a certain number of cents to pay for postage and packing. Somehow, when I received my loot, the Golden Boxes didn't glitter enough to injure my eyesight, the Wonder Books caused me to wonder why anybody wondered at them, the rare bargains were more or less raw, and, of course, the postage and packing cost more than the goods were worth.

THOSE OLD SONGS.

"I cannot sing the old songs!"
Her voice rang sweetly clear;
It filled my heart with happiness,
It calmed my every fear.
"I cannot sing the old songs!"
Gadzooks! But that's all right!
For these are those she used to sing
From early morn till night:

"Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?"
"School Days."
"Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet."
"I've Got Rings On My Fingers."
"Garden of Roses."
"By the Light of the Silvery Moon."
"Yip-I-Addy-I-Ay."
"That Mesmerizing Mendelssohn Tune."
"What's the Matter With Father?"
"Take Me Out to the Ball Game."

She cannot sing the old songs
As in the days of yore—
I'm glad of that; I've heard them all
Ten thousand times or more.
She cannot sing the old songs!
What rare, good luck, by gee!
They may be dear to some folks, but
They are not dear to me!

TO OUR SUMMER APHRODITE

Men come and go; changes harass
Old ocean rounds his seasons' surge;
New customs age, and pall, and pass—
Still dost thou cut thine old-time splurge.

Dainty, superb; Venus or elf;
Fair, fond or frigid, bold or coy;
Through time and fashion's change, thyself,
Still dost thou work us grief—and joy.

A dryad laughing in the sea;
A mermaid musing on the shore;
A siren, luring men to thee—
Still art thou as thou wert of yore.

A narrowed skirt, an altered curve;
A freer reach of limb and arm;
A frill put off or on, maybap;
Still leave thee maid of ruth—and charm.

A siren, Diana, Venus, maid,
Temptress and angel, lure and meed,
Hail! As thy generations fade
Still dost thou bloom to meet our need.

TOURISTS RETURN HOME

Mrs. George Leighs, who acted as chaperone, left the party in San Francisco and will make a prolonged visit in the West. The Daily Press group of four persons had a delightful transcontinental journey visiting all of the notable points of interest on the trip to San Francisco and return.

According to the returned tourists the chance to view the West was "one opportunity of a lifetime" and they were unusually pleased and impressed by the country over which they travelled. The Panama-Pacific Exposition came in for special praise on the part of the tourists, their inspection of the great national exhibition being one of the prominent features of the outing. Not a single incident occured to mar the trip and the two young women who returned last night were in the best of health themselves and reported that they had left the other two Press tourists in the same condition in San Francisco.

A written description of the trip, by Miss McGuiness, follows:

Under date of July 20, Miss McGuiness takes up the description of the trip begun by Miss Leighs and published in the Daily Press recently, and writes as follows:

"We are now on the train going from Salt Lake City to Colorado Springs, and up to this time have had a wonderful trip. We have seen so many interesting things it is hard to tell of them all.

"After leaving Los Angeles we went to Santa Barbara. The mission of this name is, of course, the main point of interest there. A Franciscan father took us through and told us many interesting facts about the mission and the surrounding country. It is a beautiful place. When we came back to our train we were surprised to find the coaches decorated with flowers and little boys distributing small bouquets of pansies to each one. We afterward learned that this was a greeting from the ladies of the Chamber of Commerce.

"Our next stay was at Del Monte. There we took the famous seventeen-mile drive through Monterey. This was one of the most delightful side trips we have taken. We left Del Monte about 3:30 o'clock and arrived at the big trees about 7:30. These are well named. One cannot see the tops of some of them.

"We arrived in San Francisco late Tuesday evening. We were taken to the hotel in large busses and I believe 'Fried' has never welcomed a jollier crowd than 'Cook's Special Tour A.' We sang and gave our yells on the way. It was a great pleasure to find the Plainfield Daily Press awaiting us.

"One morning we all went sightseeing on a trip through Golden Gate Park and Presido. The rest of our time was spent at the fair grounds.

"It would be almost impossible to describe all that we saw there. The most impressive building is the Tower of Jewels. By daylight it is a mass of sparkling gems and if possible, is more beautiful at night when the colored lights are thrown upon it.

"Saturday, July 17, was 'Liberty Bell Day.' The bell was welcomed with a great demonstration. This was the biggest day the Exposition had known.

"Sunday evening we left San Francisco and all seemed sorry to leave the city, as that was the turning point of our journey. This morning at 4:30 o'clock we crossed the Great Salt Lake. The trestle over this lake is the longest in the world, being twenty-two miles in length. We arrived at Salt Lake City about 7:30 in the morning. A sight-seeing trip was immediately arranged. This took in many interesting places. We attended the organ recital at the great Tabernacle.

"Salt Lake City is probably one of the best laid out cities in the union. Streets. Each street is 132 feet wide. One hundred feet are roadway and there are sixteen feet of sidewalk on each side. In each block there are ten acres.

"We left here about 6 o'clock in the evening and are now crossing the Wasatch Range of the Rockies. In a short time they will attach four more engines to our train to take us over the highest peak. We will have to go seven miles in order to make one mile. We are at this writing 7,400 feet above sea level. All of the party are well; none are affected by the altitude excepting that our appetites, perhaps, are a little more keen.

"I will now close with kind regards to the Daily Press and to all our friends who made it possible for us to enjoy this splendid trip.

"I am sincerely yours,

"ANNA MC GUINESS."

The third member of the party, Miss Harris, takes up the narrative at this point and concludes as follows:

"And now I must complete the story of our wonderful trip which we have been allowed to enjoy because of the kindness of our friends.

"Colorado Springs was thoroughly enjoyed by all. We were taken by automobile to Marniton which is close under the shadow of Pike's Peak and almost surrounded by lofty mountains. We stopped for a few minutes to drink from one of the fourteen springs of which there are no two alike. The melting snow on the mountains surrounding the city is the source of the water supply.

"The Garden of the Gods is perhaps better known and more often spoken of than any of the other wonders of Colorado. The gateway to the garden is really the grandest feature. Its great rocks seem to speak a welcome as you enter within their domains. Within their portals, gifted with an imagination, one may see many grotesque sights. For instance, the 'Kissing Camels,' an old lady carrying a pail of water, the ship, bear and seal, and the balance rock, under which we had our pictures taken on burros.

"Our trip to Crystal Lake will never be forgotten because, though wonderful, it was quite terrifying to many. We went up, up, up a narrow road full of curves and turns until we were 8,500 feet above sea level. The view we had of the surrounding country would be hard to equal.

"But best of all was our trip to the Cave of the Winds which we took at twilight. Our car wound up among the rocks of the mountains and as we looked back we could see the dim outlines of the objects passed and the lights twinkling in the city far below us. When we arrived at the cave we were taken through the rooms by a very interesting guide. The temperature of the cave is 52 degrees, summer and winter. A few of the rooms I will mention—the Curtain Hall, Cathedral Hall, Crystal Palace, Fluted Curtain, Diamond Hall, Stalactite Hall and the Old Maid's Kitchen, where we did not forget to leave a hairpin. The guide told us that if we did not find the man we wanted within a year's time we could come back and have our choice of the guides. We also made a wish under the 'Wishing Well' which they informed us was sure to come true. The different formations are beyond the imagination. We saw the 'Frying Pan,' a white rat, a bunch of California grapes and a slice of bacon, which looked very real.

"I cannot write about Pike's Peak for I did not take that trip, but I was told by those who went that they would not have missed it.

"Our last stop, Denver, was delightful. We were taken on a sightseeing tour around the city and points of interest were pointed out to us. In the afternoon we were agreeably entertained for an hour at the Chamber of Commerce. Our time to leave came around too soon. I must not forget to mention that the tourists presented our two guides, who have been so good to us, with traveling cases. This took place while at luncheon in the Hotel Savoy. We left this hotel singing songs and giving yells.

"And now we shall soon be back among our friends to tell our story to those who wish to hear it. The pictures we have taken we will be glad to show those interested. We have given but a faint idea of the wonders we have seen, but we are glad to have told about them if they have been of interest to any. I close with kind regards to all.

"LORENA B. HARRIS."

Mrs. Hartney was a granddaughter of the late John Quincy Adams, who resided in this city for more than thirty-five years. The funeral will be held at the late home, 159 Ettwien street, Bethlehem, Pa., tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

ARRANGE FOR SERIES OF MUSICAL SERVICES

The Temple Baptist Bible school will begin a series of musical services on Sunday, to continue during the entire month. They will take the place of the morning session from 9:45 to 11 o'clock. A special program has been arranged for Sunday morning, consisting of instrumental selections by a celebrated trio of musicians from New York city. An equally interesting program has been arranged for the other Sundays of the month, and it is expected that the attendance during August will quite exceed the average attendance for the rest of the year.

The special services held last year gave the school a larger average attendance than for any month of the year, thus demonstrating that a summer attendance can be secured, if the services are made sufficiently attractive.

Visitors are welcome and the school extends a cordial invitation to all who may wish to attend and enjoy these special musical services.

SPICER'S ANNUAL OUTING.

Refreshments will be served on the train and at noon a sumptuous dinner will be provided at the beach beside many other attractions.

Mayor Leighton Calkins conducted the city court session this morning, in the absence of Judge William G. DeMeza, who is away for the day.

W. DE LAR. ANDERSON WILL ADJUST FINANCIAL AFFAIRS

Former Assemblyman W. de la R. Anderson has taken up as a business the adjusting of the financial affairs of municipalities on a business-like, economic and standardized basis. For the past five years Mr. Anderson has been at the head of the body which controls the finances of North Plainfield township, which community has gotten into the unique position of being free from debt on its schools and all other accounts.

In explanation of his project, Mr. Anderson said "the spectacle of a special legislative committee going over the State, from one community to the next, to find out the financial condition and method of the various communities when, if properly handled, this information could and should be easily available to any committee or taxpayer at the office of the State Comptroller, where alleged financial reports of municipalities are placed on file the first of each year, made me realize most fully the value of standardization of accounts; my experience in municipal and corporate finance in the past ten years showed me the opportunity, and the knowledge of the tremendous need for an intelligent treatment of municipal economics, gained by personal experience, with the knowledge that actual experience brings, shows me a great field for constructive beneficial work."

Mr. Anderson will retain his present office in the City Building as his main office and says that he will establish branches throughout the State.

MIDDLESEX WILL BUY LAND TO STRAIGHTEN ROAD CURVE

New Brunswick, July 28.—The purchase of a strip of land from Whitehead Brothers at a cost of $500 in order to permit the straightening of a curve in the road at Crawford's Corner was authorized by the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders Monday afternoon. The curve, a dangerous one, is on the road from South Amboy to Keyport.

A communication was received from C. H. Hicks, of 490 Clinton avenue, West Hoboken, asking the county to pay a bill of $60.15 for damage done to his automobile by being ditched at a curve. County Solicitor George H. Burton advised the Board the county was in no way liable.

The county engineer was directed to submit plans for improving the South Amboy and Keyport road from the railroad tracks at Morgan to the Monmouth county line at Whale Creek and from South Amboy to the railroad tracks at Morgan.

The clerk of the Board of Aldermen of Perth Amboy sent the board a copy of the resolution adopted by that Board for county aid in improving New Brunswick and Amboy avenues in that city. The matter was referred to the road committee.

The South Amboy Common Council asked the county board to pay the $1,200 salary of the watchman at the famous hole in the wall at South Amboy. Inasmuch as this is now a city street and the city hired the watchman the county solicitor will advise South Amboy that the county cannot pay the bill.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The great Victrola Contest which has been conducted at Proctor's Theatre for some time past is now drawing to a close, and is now in its last full week. Guesses of the number of the musical instrument now on exhibition should be registered before Saturday night. Get your guesses in early and win the Victrola.

Today will again be observed as ice cream day, the last of the season for the theatre. Attention is again called to the silver souvenir spoons to be distributed tomorrow afternoon. [illegible] and the afternoon show of popular and [illegible] are pictures.

Today "The Secret" of Marcus, with such screen favorites as Mae Marsh and Eugene Ormonde, will be shown both afternoon and evening. The development of the plot of this story unfolds one of the most delicate and delightful love tales that the stage has produced in many years. The element of comedy is predominant, but there are many moments of pathos in the play, that effectively demonstrate the truth that all wisdom is folly, save only that which has terminated in trials and sufferings. The entire cast is exceptionally well chosen, the settings elaborate and varied, all of which lend enchantment to the play.

MIDDLESEX BORO CENSUS 1,310.

Middlesex, July 28.—Supervisor of Census T. Walter Sisty has announced that the population of the borough is 1,310. This is the first census taken here, the borough having been incorporated in June, 1913. Mayor George W. Harris and other borough officials are somewhat disappointed, as they had hoped the number of inhabitants would exceed 1,500.

BAYONNE STRIKE OVER.

Bayonne, July 28.—Practically all the men who had been idle for the past ten days in Bayonne because of strike troubles at the Standard Oil plant returned to work today.

HE GOT THE VICTROLA AND OWNER GOT HIM

Now the Music Box is Playing a Different Tune for Miller.

Because he seized "the victrola, the little victrola," thus parodying the popular song, Andrew A. Miller, of this city, a collector for Mathushek & Son Piano Company, was arrested Monday morning by Chief of Police Simon Birmingham, of Roselle Park, and arraigned before Judge Woodruff for alleged larceny and breaking and entering the home of former Fire Chief Harry Klein, in Roselle, last week.

Percy Jones, a boarder in the Klein home, purchased a victrola, and Miller tried to collect last week, but he was refused payment, as Mr. Jones held receipts from the victrola people.

Last Monday, while Mrs. Klein was out shopping, Miller came to the house and broke through a screen door and entered. When Mrs. Klein arrived home she found the victrola missing, bureau drawers ransacked and some money taken. She notified the police immediately of her suspicion, which led to Miller's arrest Monday morning, when he was found in Roselle Park collecting. Judge Woodruff held him under $2 bail to appear when wanted. He pleaded guilty to the charges.

RE-ORGANIZATION OF NEWARK STAR ANNOUNCED

Formal announcement of the re-organization of the Newark Morning Star was made yesterday. The change will take effect August 2, when the name of the paper will be changed to the Newark Eagle.

The claim that "it will be under management distinct and apart from that controlling the Evening Star" is of political interest, because both Stars are now owned by former United States Senator James Smith, Jr. In the latter's two recent efforts to become United States Senator again it was the Newark Morning Star that he selected as his official campaign organ. If the Eagle is to be truly independent and distinct from the Smith interests, as promised, the theory that the Newark man was planning to become a candidate once more may be incorrect. That he would have retained the Star for a time longer in such an event is believed by many.

No intimation is given of who will be identified with the new management.

CONTRIBUTE $123.75 FOR SUFFERERS OF POLAND

The Polish Falcons, Branch No. 281, and the Polish Nation Alliance, Branch No. 1453, had a celebration and mass meeting Sunday in St. Mary's Social Hall. The meeting was presided over by Joseph Phister, president of the Falcons. He announced B. Dukszia for president and V. Wisniewski for secretary of the meeting.

An elaborate program was carried out and consisted of the following musical and vocal numbers, American and Polish National songs, music and speechmaking. The children who sang were drilled by Mrs. Kropcrynski, of West Third street.

Stirring speeches were made by Mr. Frankowski and Mr. Palmowski, of New York; Rev. Dr. Dziadosz, of Carteret, and Dr. Dukazta. A collection for the people of Poland netted $123.75.

BOB FITZSIMMONS' HOME WILL BE SOLD BY SHERIFF

The farm property of "Bob" Fitzsimmons, ex-prize fighter, at Dunellen, is to be sold, under foreclosure proceedings, by Sheriff Houghton on August 18, the complainant being Cornelius S. See. The property is located in the Borough of Middlesex, Piscataway township.

Fitzsimmons has had a legal contest on his hands over divorce papers, but quiet was restored to his household lately when he married for the second time.

Get a Gas Water Heater Before the Prices Go Up

War demands are affecting the prices of metals, especially copper and brass, which are used in the manufacture of Gas Water Heaters.

Copper and brass cost much more today than they did a year ago.

So do Gas Water Heaters.

But the price of Gas Water Heaters has been raised by the manufacturers—not by us.

If we were to lay in a new stock now each Gas Water Heater would cost us at least $1.25 more than we paid for what we have on hand. And the prices are going still higher because of the increased demand for copper and brass.

We still hold, however, to our standard prices, the prices which were fixed before materials began to go up. And we will continue to sell Gas Water Heaters at our present low prices until our stock is exhausted.

We say in all sincerity that those who have no Gas Water Heaters should buy NOW, as a purchase at this time means a saving of money and may save time and annoyance later.

A Gas Water Heater is a good investment at any time. It is a particularly good investment now at our present prices.

A Gas Water Heater will give you all the hot water you want for such a slight cost that you will hardly notice it.

And if you want a Gas Water Heater don't put off buying one because you haven't all the money to spare now. Thousands of persons are buying water heaters by paying one dollar monthly with their gas bills.

Present prices of Gas Water Heaters:

Copper Coil Type	$14.50	$16.75	$18.75
Automatic Type	$85.00	to	$205.00

LABOR TROUBLES AND GERMAN GOLD.

It has been asserted and not denied that Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has been approached twice within the last few weeks by a secret service agent of the German Embassy and offered enough money to make him independent for life if he would successfully use his influence in bringing about strikes in factories manufacturing munitions of war. Mr. Gompers, who indignantly refused, is thus quoted: "I know that foreign interests, well supplied with funds, have sought to bring on labor troubles to prevent the shipping of American products to Europe. . . . There can be no doubt that this foreign propaganda with unlimited means behind it is seeking to check the manufacture and exportation of supplies for Europe."

This alleged attempt of Germany's agents to bring on labor troubles in this country calls to mind those amazing strikes in England in a time of national peril, particularly the recent strike of South Wales coal miners which threatened for a time to interfere seriously with the production of war munitions.

The stubborn strikes in England at such a time have seemed almost incredible, for they implied either a total lack of patriotism among labor leaders or a stupid inability to realize the national peril. The latter explanation will scarcely serve now that all England is said to have awakened to the fact of the empire's danger. But could there be such a lack of patriotism among British labor leaders unless they were hardened in all their higher instincts by the secret offer of "enough money" to make them "independent for life?"

The alleged attempt to corrupt Samuel Gompers with German gold suggests a reasonable explanation of otherwise inexplicable labor disturbances in England. Whether secret German influences did or did not produce the damaging strike in Wales, it becomes plainer every day that the Germans are prosecuting their war with a far-reaching thoroughness hitherto unparalleled.

Evidently the garaging of automobiles in the streets is causing complaint in other places beside Plainfield. Trenton business men are complaining that the use of certain thoroughfares there for parking spaces has so interfered with customers that they are notifying the tradespeople that they have made a change in buying because of the difficulty in getting near to the stores. On Saturday night in this city the approach to many Front street business houses is so blocked by a line of machines that sometimes it is necessary to go to the nearest street corner in order to alight from an automobile or wagon and then walk a long distance to the store wanted. There is no excuse for leaving any machine standing for hours at a time while the owner is in a nearby theatre, to the great inconvenience of those who wish to patronize the stores along Front street. If the present traffic regulations are not drawn so as to correct this condition the Council can easily remedy the matter by adopting the method used in Newark, where on certain streets no car is permitted to stand more than fifteen minutes.

The Newark Morning Star, after about ten years of existence, will be discontinued with the issue of next Saturday, and on Monday morning will be replaced by the Eagle, with George D. Smith, son of the former United States Senator, as the general manager. Mr. Smith has brought the Evening Star from a losing proposition to a highly profitable one in the last few years, and if he follows the same policy with the morning paper that he has adopted in the evening field, he will make a success of the new sheet. It will be much more of an uphill fight, however, for in the suburban field newspaper readers seem to have a preference for a New York paper in the morning, and the home newspaper in the evening. If the new paper is independent in politics, as is promised, and steers clear of the partisan machines in Essex county, there is no reason why the Eagle should not scream for many years to come.

Two more signs of returning prosperity last week. The Century Rubber Company's plant was reopened by a man who has made a success of the tire business in other cities, and the Netherwood Hotel was turned over to a group of mechanics to be put in shape for an early opening. Both the newcomers who have this work in charge will be welcomed to town.

Those nineteen mosquitoes that the inspectors of the commission found after several hours search must have been let loose in Plainfield and concentrated in one neighborhood, if the complaints that have been heard lately amount to anything.

The Eastland disaster and the Leelanaw incident have at least spared us from hearing anything about Harry K. Thaw in the last few days, for which all can give thanks.

About the best argument in favor of woman suffrage is the fact that James R. Nugent is so opposed to it that he has hired a press agent to carry on the anti-propoganda.

TROOPERS' STRENUOUS DAY

were concerned. In the afternoon they all found time for a cold shower, and many for a shave, and when night came and a moon as big and yellow as a Chinese lantern hung over the hills the best singers gathered for "close harmny" before Donald A. McGee's squad tent. From all points of the camp came the sounds of similar groups of singers, especially from the Marylanders, who set the echoes ringing with "Maryland, My Maryland" just before taps began to sound. No one had any difficulty sleeping that night.

Reveille sounded at 5:15 on Monday, to be followed fifteen minutes later with "stable call,"—for currying and feeding the horses. Then came mess, and then at 7 o'clock, "Boots and saddles."

The men saddled the horses, led them to the watering troughs, then bridled and mounted and Troop D rode out along the dusty road to the parade ground. Partly on account of the accidents of the day before, and partly because the troop has never had adequate facilities for riding, they were put through the rudimentary paces; they unsaddled and unbridled and Second Lieutenant Este, of the Eleventh Regular Cavalry, gave instructions in the matter of harnessing and arranging equipment, according to which each man re-saddled. Then followed a careful drilling, at the walk and trot, for three hours; and after it was done Lieutenant Este complimented the troop highly, and spoke especially of their evident willing spirit, and their determination to learn. The entire drill went off smoothly and the troop rode back with a great appetite for luncheon, to find, after currying their horses, a splendid meal of steak, potatoes, coffee and prunes.

At the news that there would be no drill in the afternoon, and no regular duty till "stable" at 4:45, the men retired to their tents, out of the blazing sun, whose heat had draped the trees and hills with a blue haze, to shave and overhaul their equipment.

POLITICAL NOTES.

August 25—Union county Democrats hold annual outing at Witzel's Point View Grove, L. I.

August 27—Last day for filing county nomination petitions with county clerk.

September 7—First registration day.

September 21—Primary day and second registration day.

October 19—State referendum election, and third registration day.

Acceptances of invitations from Republicans of State prominence to attend the G. O. P. outing August 21 continue to be received daily. The latest is from State Senator Charles A. Rathbun, of Morris county. From the looks of things, a majority of the members of the State Senate will be in attendance.

That the Democrats have real cause for worry over the State Senate proposition in Middlesex county is evident. For some years now, Middlesex has been almost undisputed Democratic territory. With the appointment of Dr. William E. Ramsay, of Perth Amboy, to the State Water Supply Commission, a new candidate for State Senator must be secured, and Prosecutor Florance, former Mayor of New Brunswick, and Assemblyman Arthur A. Quinn, president of the New Jersey Federation of Labor, are mentioned for the nomination.

Assistant Secretary of State William L. Dill may be chosen by the Passaic County Democratic Committee to complete the unexpired term of the late John Hinchcliffe, as a member of the Democratic State Committee. Mr. Dill is secretary now, having been chosen a year ago. Two of the twenty-one members of the State committee have died during the year. Besides ex-Senator Hinchliffe, Secretary of State David S. Crater, who represented Monmouth county, was numbered among the departed.

Joseph H. Neill and Elias F. Applegate, of Elizabeth, are mentioned as possible candidates for freeholder nominations on the Republican ticket. Mr. Neill has been an aspirant for the shrievalty nomination twice, and several years ago was elected excise commissioner according to the original returns, which were reversed by the official canvass. He is a painter and decorator and resides at 1053½ Magnolia avenue. Mr. Applegate was a nominee for excise commissioner three years ago. He is a builder and lives at 18 Dehart place.

For the Republican nomination for State Senator in Middlesex county, Alfred S. Marsh and former Assemblyman John F. TenBroek are said to be the leading candidates. Much interest is given the Middlesex fight, because of the belief that the Democrats will have a bitter primary scrap.

There will be an interesting fight for the Republican Mayoralty nomination in Paterson this year. Sheriff Amos Radcliffe, a former Assemblyman, and Albin Smith are proposed as possibilities. It is said that Mayor Fordyce may not seek a second term.

John B. Kates, one of the most brilliant members of the Assembly during the last four years, will likely be the Republican nominee for register in Camden county. Mr. Kates is still on crutches as the result of injuries received while fighting a fire in Collingswood last winter.

Congressman R. Wayne Parker's condition continues to improve rapidly. That the member from the Ninth district will be fully recovered after he has rested a while longer, is believed. He continues voluntarily under the direction of Dr. Britton D. Evans.

Mayor Raymond, of Newark, a leader in the anti-Dalrymple fight in the Essex G. O. P., has denied reports that he intended to continue the battle from primary day to general election day. If his friends lose on primary day, he declares he will support their successful rivals. "No independent movement after the primaries will receive my support or sanction. I am a Republican; an organization Republican," he says.

TO DEMAND EIGHT-HOUR DAY

give us the eight-hour day can save himself a lot or trouble by meeting the demands. I shall see that the demands are presented in New England and all of the Eastern States. Every manufacturer shall have his chance. When the job is through there will be a general strike on all employers who refuse. But it must be remembered that more than half of the machinists are now working in eight-hour shops. The eight-hour day recently went into effect all over Cincinnati. Men in these shops would not be affected.

"I believe our whole fight will be victorious, because we have chosen a psychological moment when the manufacturers cannot do without us. We realize that if a national strike comes it should come while the plants are busy with war orders and that is the reason we are rushing the campaign with all possible dispatch."

It is apparent that the labor leaders have selected the psychological moment for making their demands in Plainfield, inasmuch as the shops that will be affected are all working on big orders, especially the International Motor Company which has large war orders to meet. That a strike at this time would seriously effect the local concerns is a foregone conclusion and there is every reason to believe that a satisfactory adjustment will be made before the general call for a strike is sounded.

Mr. Keppler is in charge of the union's national movement for the eight-hour day and the demand of a guarantee of a permanent eight-hour agreement here will probably come under his direct supervision.

Notices of the meeting have been distributed among all local machinists and the following inscription on the back of the cards explains in full the stand the workmen will take against the employers:

We mean to make things over.
We're tired of toil for naught.
We may have enough to live on,
But seldom an hour for thought.
We want to feel the sunshine,
We want to smell the flowers;
We know that God has willed it,
And we mean to have eight hours.

During the past week two of the largest local shops have declared voluntary increases to their men and it was at first thought that this adjustment would prove satisfactory all around and allay any feeling that existed. The machinists, however, are apparently satisfied with the wage scale but demand shorter hours. At the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company, in this city, an increase of from one to six cents an hour was announced last week. At this concern the men are working 54 hours a week to keep up with the many rush orders received recently. As announced yesterday, the Pond Machine Tool Company also declared a ten per cent. increase, but is running on a fifty-five and one-half hours schedule. The Spicer Manufacturing Company at South Plainfield is working fifty-one hours, and the Halluorh ing fifty-one hours; the Bosch-Lomb Magneto Company is working fifty-four hours, and the Hall Printing Press Company, Scott's Press Works and the Potter Press Works are running eight and one-quarter hours a day. This latter class came down from nine hours a day following a demand made by the machinists some time ago.

Various wage scales prevail in Plainfield, but on the whole they are considered to be fair. The average is set at $3.25 for an eight-hour day. Hugh Riley, agent for the local machinists' union, is working in conjunction with the national leaders and he also anticipates a harmonious settlement between workmen and employers. He and Mr. Keppler will call on the heads of the local concerns next Monday, presenting the request of the machinists for an eight-hour day.

ST. MARY'S SOCIAL CLUB ARRANGE BIRTHDAY PARTY

St. Mary's Social Club held a business meeting in T. A. B. Hall last evening and a large number of young women were present. It was decided to hold a birthday social on the third of August, those girls whose birthdays occur in that month acting as a committee. The cast of "Popping the Question" will present that farce at Stony Hill church the latter part of August, the proceeds going to St. Mary's church of that place. Tonight stages will leave the hall for Stony Hill where a dance will be held under the auspices of the Catholic church of that place.

QUERY GERMANY ON ORDUNA, MORE LEELANAW DETAILS

Washington, July 28.—Ambassador Gerard at Berlin informed the State Department today that he had presented to the German Foreign Office a request for the facts concerning the alleged attack on the Cunard steamship Orduna. The State Department instructed him to do so Monday.

Complete confirmation of the press despatches regarding the destruction of the Leelanaw reached here today in a despatch from Ambassador Page which embodied a statement given him by the British Admiralty. It said that the captain and crew were safe at the time they wanted to leave the Leelanaw before it was torpedoed. The submarine towed the sailing boats toward Orkney. [illegible] steamer was sighted [illegible] adrift. The [illegible] declared the Leelanaw [illegible] flag, but [illegible] whether the commander had [illegible] opportunity to [illegible] his cargo.

REPORT MOB DEATH FOR HAYTIAN EX-PRESIDENT

New York, July 27.—A despatch from Port Au Prince, Haiti, says that a mob of infuriated Haitiens today removed Vilbrun Guillaume, President of Haiti, from the French legation, where he took refuge yesterday and shot him to death in front of the building.

Fresh outbreaks were expected in Port au Prince today following yesterday's riots, in which President Guillaume was forced to flee from the palace and Gen. Oscar, military governor, was killed after he had ordered the massacre of 160 political prisoners.

During the night the crowd was harangued by various leaders, representing several factions of the revolutionary forces who combined in yesterday's attack on the government. The revolutionists were practically in complete control of the capital today.

Washington, July 28.—American marines will have to restore order at Port au Prince, Haiti, it was believed certain today.

There were suggestions in despatches received here from the Black Republic that foreigners were endangered.

The State Department was slow in receiving advices, but it was supposed Admiral Caperton, for some time past at Cape Haytien, with the cruiser Washington, would assume charge of the situation.

The chief source of worry was that he might not be able to reach the scene of the revolutionary disturbance in time to prevent further violence involving loss of foreign lives and property.

CONSTABLE YORK'S WORK HAS TAKEN A BIG BOOM

These days are strenuous ones for Constable George Yorke, who is experiencing a rush season in District Court work. When the hard times complaint hits a town it generally means work for the official in whom is vested the duty of carrying out District Court verdicts and York is getting more than his share of this activity just at present. The District Court blotter this morning contained six odd cases, no one of which was contested. This means that the constable will have his hands full during the next few days serving papers on people who have acknowledged their indebtedness to plaintiffs by failing to contest civil actions.

A fair example of a good day's work was outlined to a Daily Press reporter when he called on York in the District Court ante-room this forenoon. Included in the array of legal documents that littered the constable's desk were three writs calling for the dispossession of families in this city. Unless the judgment is satisfactorily settled in each case York will confiscate their household belongings. He is of the opinion that none of the three will be able to satisfy the judgment and is prepared to take possession of their belongings.

THREE TO NOMINATE COMMITTEE HEAD

The general committee having in charge preparations for the coming evangelistic campaign in this city met in the Y. M. C. A. building last night, for the transaction of business connected with the movement.

In order that the coming campaign may be given all the publicity possible, the committee decided to request the pastors of all the Plainfield churches to bring the matter to the attention of their congregations.

William D. Murray is the temporary chairman of the committee, and for the purpose of presenting nominations for a permanent chairman and vice chairman, a committee consisting of G. E. Hall, William D. Murray and John H. Manning was selected. This committee will report at the meeting of the general committee, to be held upon the call of the temporary chairman.

As has been announced in the Daily Press, the Rev. Dr. George Woods Anderson, of Bellefontain, Ohio, has been engaged to take charge of the services, which will open some time in April.

GROVE STREET BRIDGE WORK IS PROGRESSING

While to the layman the work on the new bridge to span Green brook at Grove street seems to be going ahead slowly, satisfactory progress is being made in reality. It was hard work making the excavations for the foundation on the North Plainfield side of the brook, for shifting sand [illegible] However, Con[illegible] a steam [illegible] work [illegible] found: [illegible] the [illegible] but about [illegible] purpose of [illegible] one of the former foundations [illegible] again. The reinforcing material [illegible] the ground and the other material will be on the [illegible] as soon as it is needed.

All wagon and [illegible] over the brook at that point has, of course, been stopped, but the contractor has constructed a light foot bridge over the stream which is a great accommodation to persons desiring to cross at that point, as it saves them a walk to Madison avenue in one direction or to Washington avenue in the other. The temporary bridge is reached by a railed-in walk close to the First Baptist church beds, and is substantial enough for all demands that may be made upon it.

JUSTICE FORD CAN SEE NO NEED FOR CALLING BECKER

New York, July 28.—Supreme Court Justice Ford, who left the courthouse at 2:30 o'clock this morning, arrived at [illegible] his chambers. The Justice said that to the present time he saw no necessity for calling Becker to testify and that he had not reached any decision, and did not expect to before this evening, if then.

The impression that Becker will be granted another trial was more general and stronger today than at any time since the Court of Appeals decided several months ago that he had been justly convicted of murdering Herman Rosenthal.

Even if Justice Ford denies the motion for a new trial there is every prospect of a protracted lease of life for Becker. An appeal from His Honor's decision would be taken by William Bourke Cockran, counsel-in-chief for the condemned man. There is a question in legal circles as to whether an appeal could be taken but no one appears able to answer the moot point authoritatively. But it is certain that Mr. Cockran would make the attempt and as there is a doubt regarding the right of appeal the opinion prevails that some Justice of the Supreme Court would act to stay the execution until the Court of Appeals reconvenes in Albany in the autumn, when Becker's case would again go before the highest tribunal in the State. Thus Becker seems to be assured of several months more of life.

By virtue of the fact that Justice Ford has never before presided over a criminal case and frankly admits that he is not so "keen" on criminal as he is on civil proceedure, he intends to study all phases of the present case with the utmost care before reaching a decision. And because of his lack of experience in this field Justice Ford is considered eminently qualified so far as fair mindedness and freedom from prejudice are concerned to determine the issue.

Word was received from Albany yesterday that Gov. Whitman had been informed of the possibility of Becker winning another chance for his life before a jury. It is reported that the "news" was conveyed over the long distance telephone "from a man in New York whose connection with the case is close."

The Governor has announced that if Justice Ford is unable to hand down a decision before tomorrow morning, when Becker is scheduled to go to the electric chair, an additional reprieve will be granted. District Attorney Perkins has signified his willingness to join with Justice Ford in requesting the Governor for an extension of time if this Honor desires.

BOARD OF HEALTH GIVES WARNING TO THE PUBLIC

Warning to the public is given today through an announcement made by Health Officer Randolph Chandler, of the Board of Health, in reference to complaints that agents have been soliciting orders in this city for a health book the impression being that it has the endorsement of the Health Board. Mr. Chandler in speaking of the matter said:

"The public is again warned that either the Board of Health nor anyone connected with it, is in any way responsible for, nor has any endorsement been given of, the book being sold in Plainfield by representatives of the Health Society. The Board of Health does not sell or solicit orders for literature or any commodity and advises against placing orders for health books with agents. Representatives of the Board of Health are furnished with proper credentials which may be seen on request. If this fact is kept in mind by householders they may avoid being imposed upon."

LABOR DAY PLANS.

At a meeting of the Building Trades Council, Friday night, plans for the coming Labor Day celebration in this city will be discussed. The program for the day will be left in the hands of the Plainfield Allied Trades Committee, which was organized after the demonstration last Labor Day, and this committee will meet Saturday night in Trades Council Hall. It is said that there will be no parade this year, but in its place a workingmen's picnic and outing.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Giving the boardwalk at Keansburg the up and down these days would lead one familiar with Central Jersey football to believe that Manager "Doc" Doyle had established a training quarters for his proteges at that resort. The appearance of certain faces doing the marathon stunt along the water edge might also indicate that certain Columbus Club basketballers were shaping up for the fall campaign at this place.

You've certainly got to hand it to Britt Martin for resourcefulness. No, there's not one among us but who believes that Warry McLaughlin is willing to bake for two hours under Old Sol's broiling rays hurling them across just for the love of the thing. (Just as much as we believe that the Baptists are going to sup out of the championship trophy).

Injuries recorded on this City League circuit are worthy of many a big league outfit. Hardly a Saturday goes by but what one of the performers runs into a close shave from being put down on Monday's obituary list.

"There's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip." So sayeth the Hopes, Tabs, Netherwoods, Saurers and Clinton Avenues in racing for that league mug. It's one safe bet that four of the present list of title aspirants will stub their toes before the windup.

It's too bad the scholastic baseball season doesn't break in at the close of the City League schedule instead of before it. The schoolboys on the local circuit are just beginning to round into form and by fall they ought to be "regular" fly snatchers, grass pickers and willow wielders.

Following Saturday's contests Umpire Coriell called at a local shoe dealer's store to have a pair of shoes exchanged for a larger sized brace of leather pedal covers. Now if we only had a Johnny Evers in the City League we'd swear to goodness that the foot swelling ailment from which Coriell suffers was due to an angered batsman trodding his toelets.

We're about due for a Saturday afternoon rainstorm this week, according to the hard working box-score scribe. However, it's a good thing it rains once in a while and also that it doesn't rain all the time for he'd certainly starve.

Three days to Saturday and we haven't heard of a single Plainfielder who would venture to enter those State canoe champs at Asbury Park. Smatter with the paddle wielding talent in the Queen City?

It's one safe bet that if someone were to shove a couple of railroad passes into certain athletes' faces in this burg that there would be one wild scramble for the Asbury special and the canoe champs. No, the war hasn't hit sport, but it has certainly put a dent in the bankroll.

ROD AND REEL

Weakfishing in the Raritan Bay during the past few days has been reported as being very good.

At Lake George there are hundreds of fishermen, the majority of whom are out to land some bass and pickerel. Those who have tried for these kinds of fish declare that they are numerous and always ready to bite.

Barnegat Bay is producing quite a quantity of blues these days and the many fishermen who frequent the place are profiting by the unusual circumstances.

At the north point of the beach at Seaside Park channel bass are biting well and the members of the Ocean City Fishing Club and like organizations are having a splendid time landing all they want.

Crabbing parties are popular at Morgan, where the fishing is done in Cheesequake Creek. The crabs are meaty and big and are caught in great numbers, catches of twenty-five and more being common.

Weakfish at Barnegat are taking to the bait now as they did last year and it is just a matter of how many you want. Croakers and snapper bluefish are keeping them company, too.

Fluke and weakfish are being landed in great numbers daily at Morgan, catches of fifty-three and sixty having been made in the Keyport region the first of this week.

The Ocean and Stream Fishing Club, of Newark, will hold a surf-casting contest on the 250th anniversiay of the founding of the city. No doubt several local surf-casters will avail themselves of the chance to get back into form. The event, which, of course, will not take place until next year, will be run off at Weequahic Park.

There has been quite some discussion in regards to the various injurious substances that are allowed to pour into the waters of the Kill von Kull and Staten Island Sound. No kind of fish thrives in such water and oysters are killed by the thousands. Governmental action will be taken soon.

Scotch Lad Won Eight Events at Recent Glasgow Meet.

The feature of the recent Glasgow school sports held at Hampden park was the splendid performances of A. Browning, a sixteen-year-old boy, who won eight of the principal events. Browning captured the weight event with a throw of 30 feet 8 inches.

He threw the cricket ball 72 yards, cleared 4 feet 9½ inches in the high jump and 18 feet 1 inch in the broad jump, while his drop kick reached 54 yards 1 foot. Browning was first in the 100 yard dash, the 120 yard hurdles (time, 19¾ seconds), and the 440 yards he did in 56 1-5 seconds.

HORSE FANCIERS FLOCK TO LONG BRANCH PARK

Long Branch, July 28.—Horse show enthusiasts, and they are here by the score, predict that the twenty-second annual exhibition of the Monmouth County Association, which opens a four days' session in Hollywood Park today, will be the best in the last ten years. They base their prediction on the number of entries and exhibitors. Nearly all of the exhibitors are on the ground, and for the first time in several years all the stalls are filled and outside reservations for late comers have been made.

Fifty-eight classes will be judged during the four afternoons and prizes in excess of $6,000 will be distributed among the one hundred and more exhibitors.

Maurice McLoughlin, formerly national tennis champion, arrived here yesterday from California on his way to Boston, where he will defend his title to the Longwood Bowl at the close of that tournament early next week. McLoughlin devoted the forenoon to discussing the tennis situation with Robert D. Wrenn, president of the National Association, after which he went to the court of the West Side Club for practice. He left late last night for Boston.

KAISER BEATS MORETTI.

Harry Kaiser, of the Bronx, defeated Caesar Moretti, of Italy, in two straight heats of a three-quarter mile match race at the Sheepshead Bay Velodrome, last night. On both occasions he rode from the rear, going around the big Italian on the last lap. The time for the first heat was 2m. 11 3-5s. The second heat was ridden in 2m. 19 3-5s.

From January 1 to July 1 of this year, there were 34 lynchings in the United States, according to Booker T. Washington.

PLAINFIELD JUNIORS TO MEET A RAHWAY TEAM

The Plainfield Juniors will try conclusions with the Rahway Juniors at either Parker Field or Crescent Oval next Saturday. The Rahway team comes here possessing a great reputation and the locals are out to destroy it.

Butler and Marsh are going to tend to the battery work for the Juniors and the little hurler will endeavor to repeat his performance of last Saturday, when he allowed the heavy hitting Garwoods only one hit in the five innings he pitched. The line-up of the Rahway team has not been given out, but it consists of players who were unable to make the big team on which Tommy Mullin, of this city, performs.

AMATEUR BALL JINGLES

Manager Jim Monahan, of the Tabs, has decided to make a change in his infield, but who will be supplanted and by whom is not known, although it is practically certain that Eddie Hannon will not be used in the outfield as he was last Saturday. It may be that Hannon will be shifted to second and Geary to short, supplanting Brennan, who is a pitcher, and Denitzio to third. As far as fielding is concerned this move would be a good one but to take Brennan, who can hit anything, out of the game entirely, would be folly. We agree that Jim has a real task before him.

If young Newell keeps up his two-hit brand of pitching he will advance rapidly to a higher berth. A fan reported to us this morning that three City League scouts were looking the youth over. Perhaps so, but the chances of Newell joining the big local show at the present time are so slim that a tooth-pick would look fat along-side of them. Joe is about fifteen years of age and tall, but his build is not that of a husky youth. A few more years yet, Joe.

Speaking of youngsters taking a leap into faster company reminds us that Sid Butler, the junior league hurler, has performed several times for the Royal Giants and has made a good showing.

"Pop" Keating has been clouting the hide steadily for the past two weeks, every box score containing an account of the doubles he registered. In the field he has been acting well, although he has too much confidence in his ability. There is, of course, such a thing as being not confident enough, but in the case of Keating the over-abundance of the "I got it" stuff manifests itself almost daily.

The junior league loses Bill Reasoner, the boy who hits like Cobb and makes errors like Harold Hangover. William has been hired by a local business man to run errands for him, but Bill says that he would rather be running bases.

Bill Coyle attended the Saurer-Tab entanglement last Saturday and the "thousands" present knew it. Bill's voice, used for rooting purposes, has quite some value, if the word of several fans can be counted for anything. Why doesn't some team sign the "ginger" boy?

Some anxious fan told us this morning that he had heard that the Tabs were to have a Newark battery for the rest of the season. Nothing to it, friend, nothing to it. For a fact most of the Newark batteries, and especially those that would come here for nothing, are much worse than the several already signed up by Monahan. The Denny brothers, Brennan and Lawton are four pitchers whose offerings are as good as they come.

"Bus" Dunham has been added to the Clinton Avenue list and performed with them Saturday. "Bus" is a fine sport in addition to being a clear-headed, fast-fielding and heavy-hitting artist.

H. Rosenson has been playing ball around Milltown for some time and has annexed an added burst of speed. "If I could only hit like Benny," is the way the older Rosenson sums up the situation.

TO RECEIVE ENTRIES FOR GIRLS' EVENTS

Labor Day Attraction for the Fair Sex Gives Great Promise.

The girls of this city and vicinity who are contemplating entering the big athletic meet to be held on Labor Day at Parker Field can register their names at the Plainfield High School tonight when the Girls' Athletic Class meets. The fact that no meet of this kind was held here on the Fourth of July indicated that enthusiasm along these lines was wanting. However, the Recreation Committee did not believe that such a lack of athletic tendency existed here and a proposal to hold a monster meet on Labor Day was put before the young ladies when they met at the High School about two weeks ago. The idea met with the approval of all present and the meeting tonight is the outcome of the first one.

New Brunswick had a meet on the Fourth of July and plans are under way for the holding of another one on Labor Day. While it is not proposed to hold that sort of a meet here there should be quite a crowd of athletes of both sexes on hand when the shots are fired. So far as is known the committee has not taken definite steps but after the meeting tonight the idea will, no doubt, receive a helpful push.

SPORT BRIEFS

Jesse Barnes, who led the Three-I League in pitching, has been sold to the Boston Nationals. He will join the Braves at Cincinnati today.

Victor Linert, of Belgium, won the 50-mile bike race by five and a half laps in one hour, 14 minutes and 37 4-5 seconds, at Sheepshead Bay Velodrome last night.

Tom Cowler, Jim Corbett's heavyweight, will make his first appearance in a New York ring when he meets Gunboat Smith in a main bout of ten rounds at the St. Nicholas A. C. tonight.

Eddie McGoorty, the Wisconsin middleweight, knocked out Harold Hardwick, the light heavyweight, of Australia, in ten rounds, at Snowy Baker's Stadium, in Sydney, Australia, yesterday.

Denver and Des Moines will hold motor races on Saturday.

The Danes have entered the famaous yacht Nordug IV. in the Frisco regatta.

Wolgast his signed again. This time he promises to go against Joe Welling at Duluth, on August 6.

Frank Gotch is reported to be training vigorously for his re-entry on the mat on Friday, when he meets Henry Ordemann, of Minneapolis, at Humboldt, Ia.

Fully a dozen or fifteen of the best trotters in the country will meet at Detroit today in the M and M trotting classic. Peter Scott has been groomed by Murphy for this event, but he has a fast field.

Among the trophies to be awarded at the Frisco regatta which opens two weeks from Saturday are those donated by King George and President Wilson.

The story comes from Boston that Jess Willard came near being the victim of a joke, when Sandy Ferguson, the Chelsea bad boy, was framed to box him at Framingham. Jess was forced to wallop the iceman from the ring. Sandy has given up the beer-mug training to meet Jim Coffey at Boston next month.

The Eastern Racing Circuit shifts next Monday to Saratoga Springs for the balance of August. The horsemen will return to Belmont Park for two weeks in September.

LEARN HOW TO SWIM

In a Series of Ten Articles, Famous Expert Louis De B. Handley of the N. Y. A. C., Gives Advice to Beginners and Veterans.

Article No. 4.—The Trudgeon-Crawl Stroke

By LOUIS DE B. HANDLEY.

[Copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.]

As the name indicates, this most modern of swimming strokes is a combination of the trudgeon and crawl, with the identical arm movements of both and a leg drive featuring the characteristics of each.

Two forms of it are now in use—the single and the double. In the single the swimmer performs one narrow, horizontal scissor kick at the end of the toparm drive, like in the trudgeon, then rolls face down and whips the feet alternately and vertically, as in the true crawl. In the double two scissors are introduced, one at the completion of each arm drive, with a slight crawl thrash between.

The trudgeon-crawl was originated in this country, and several men have claimed its invention, but there can be no doubt that Frank Sullivan of Chicago, now instructor of swimming at Princeton university, deserves full credit for bringing it into prominence.

Possibly others may have thought before he did of combining the two strokes, yet even this seems unlikely, for at the time he publicly outlined the evolved theory in 1905 the crawl was just beginning to be known here, and few had given it attention.

At all events, it is quite certain that Sullivan was the first to undertake practical experiments and prove the efficiency of the new stroke.

Early in 1906, if memory serves, he induced four boys who could not swim at all to take it up under his supervision, and in less than two seasons they were making their mark in the competitive field. One of them, Leslie Chiville, developed into a star long distance swimmer, then retired. Another, Richard Frizell, won a number of championship titles before he migrated to Central America in 1913. The remaining two, Harry Hebner and Perry McGillivray, are today our greatest all round swimmers and hold a long string of world's records.

The brilliant success of the latter pair probably accounts in part for the widespread popularity enjoyed at present by the stroke that made them famous, yet it is not difficult to be convinced of its actual superiority if one gives it some study.

Easy to realize—for instance, in comparing it with the trudgeon—that the thrash added between scissor kicks must perforce make for greater speed, equally clear in weighing it against the crawl that the use of one or two scissors increases the propelling power, for the wider and more vigorous movements cannot but impart more momentum than the smaller drives of the continuous thrash.

It might be claimed that the amount of energy expended is out of proportion to the resulting benefit, but such is not the case. Once an object is set in motion it requires very little power to keep it moving at the pace attained, and even a mere flutter of the feet is sufficient to maintain the speed furnished by the scissor kick in swimming.

Thus one of the chief advantages of the stroke is that it enables its devotees to more effectively utilize their legs than any of its predecessors. It has long been the contention of experts that in developing the double overarm stroke we had discovered that means for ably exploiting the strength of the arms, but that neither the trudgeon nor the crawl permitted us to gain all possible propulsion from the legs. While therefore it would be extremely rash to assert that the composite scissor thrash could not be improved upon, yet the fact that it eliminates almost entirely the negative movements of resistance and also has more driving power shows unquestionably that we have at least drawn a step nearer the goal of all students of natation—the finding of the perfect stroke.

In swimming the single type of trudgeon-crawl the body should roll sensibly on the under shoulder as the top arm drives, for if one travels on an even keel the working lower leg rises out of water in opening and a portion of its drive is made through thin air and totally wasted. For the same reason it is essential to roll rather heavily from side to side in using the double type, that both scissors may be performed completely beneath the surface. The roll, however, is not necessary in sprinting, as will be explained.

Let it first be understood, though, that the width of the scissor and both the width and speed of the following thrash are determined by the distance to be covered, naturally taking into consideration, besides, the resources of each individual.

Indeed, the combination stroke becomes practically a pure crawl when used for sprinting, since the scissors are then made so narrow that they barely outspan the accompanying thrash, merging with it completely and only being distinguishable by a forcible accenting of the rhythm. Evidently there is no need here to roll beyond the point of securing a clean recovery for the arms.

When it comes to traveling courses longer than 100 yards, however, the scissor is widened gradually with the increasing distance and the roll must be emphasized accordingly. The leading authorities claim that best results are obtained by never letting the heels separate further than the shoulder lines, as a larger opening causes resistance to the water which offsets the slight advantage gained from the stronger sweep of the legs. But this point is debatable. George Hodgson of Canada, the Olympic 400 and 1,500 meter record holder, uses and advocates a spread of about thirty inches.

The thrash between scissors is also adjusted to the pace being held, but in inverse ratio. That is, the drives are fast, energetic and comparatively wide in sprinting, slower, less vigorous and narrower as the journey increases in length, until they become no more than a gentle flutter. This is the general rule, of course, subject always to the laws of personality. It is for every man, or his coach, to ascertain just how much energy he can devote to the leg drive.

Until quite recently the trudgeon-crawl was confined entirely to American swimmers, but its value is now being recognized in foreign countries. In a book just published by the Amateur Swimming Association of Great Britain, J. G. Hatfield of Middlesbrough, the world's one mile record holder, writes about it:

"I have adopted the trudgeon-crawl and believe it is eminently suited for distance swimming. First, because the movements are all natural; second, because the arms and legs undertake their fair proportion of the work; third, because while the legs perform a double stroke there is not undue fatigue owing to different muscles being brought into play; fourth, because breathing is effected without the slightest difficulty or strain, the natural roll of the body offering ample opportunity for a full inspiration at no detriment to speed."

Hodgson, the mentioned Olympic champion, also swims a stroke which comes under the heading of the trudgeon-crawl, although it is generally classed as a pure trudgeon. In fact, he allows his legs to cross after performing the regulation scissors, relaxes them for an instant, then sweeps them back with some force, thereby getting another propelling drive. This return kick takes the place of the prescribed thrash. The same principle exactly.

One is frequently asked by young swimmers how many strokes should be taken per minute, and the question is unanswerable for the obvious reasons that the number varies materially with the individual and with the distance in sight. However, the world's greatest miler, Hatfield, tells us that he completes each full cycle of movements in about two seconds, when swimming further than half a mile, and this may convey to the new recruit an idea of the wanted timing.

And now, before closing, a word about the prevalent belief that in all varieties of crawl it is advisable to breathe at every second, third or fourth stroke.

How this strange idea ever gained the strong hold it has one fails absolutely to understand. Not only is constant oxygenation of the lungs indispensable in physical effort of any kind but more especially is it necessary in swimming, for when the air is not renovated frequently the call for it becomes so imperative that the swimmer lifts his head for it with a jerk and breaks the balance of the body, thereby causing a sudden check.

Developing swimmers should make it their rule to breathe always at every stroke, and most racing men will profit by doing the same, except, possibly at fifty yard sprinting. It is impossible to attach too much importance to the point.

THE TRUDGEON STROKE.

Right arm is about to "catch." Left arm is ready to leave the water in recovery, legs have been opened to perform the scissor kick. Top leg is advanced slightly, nearly straight. Under leg is bent back halfway to kneeling position. Drive is obtained by closing them vigorously as the top arm leaves the water. Head twisted (not lifted) to inhale.

YALE TEAM PROMOTED.

George W. Wriston, supervisor at Parker Field, announced this morning that the Yale baseball team which has grasped an overwhelming lead on the junior league race would be withdrawn from that circuit and would be entered in the senior league about to be formed. The Yale club has won nine games and lost only one, its nearest opponent having won one and lost one. Joe Newell, who has hurled one hit and two hit games all season, will graduate with the team which will be strengthened in several departments. At present there are two clubs in the older league and the addition of one more will make a three game a week circuit.

PIERSON NOT TO CAPTAIN.

Earle Pierson, who was recently signed up by the First Baptist team, is not going to captain the team as was first reported. Dan Randolph and Gene Downs will attend to the governing section of the team and hope to have the outfit on solid footing after this week's contest.

NAVAL TORPEDOES

Mechanism of These Fearful Submarine Missiles.

DEATH IN THEIR WAR HEADS.

Where the Great Charge of Guncotton is Carried and How It is Exploded—Speed With Which These Tubes of Terror Are Propelled.

There is a missile about seventeen feet long, cylindrical in shape and eighteen inches in diameter, that contains within the small space of its head the power to destroy thousands of lives and sink the greatest of ships. That missile is the torpedo. Such is the weapon of the submarine.

In times of peace, its exercise head filled with water, the torpedo is harmless enough. But in the tube of a submarine, ready for action, its bronze war head containing about 200 pounds of guncotton, it becomes the most feared and most destructive weapon in naval warfare.

In Europe the Whitehead torpedo is almost universally used. Invented by an Austrian, Britain quickly adopted it for her own and the largest factory is now at Weymouth, England.

The United States has also been an extensive user of the Whitehead torpedo, obtaining the right to manufacture it at the torpedo station in Newport, R. I., We are, however, abandoning the manufacture of the Whitehead in favor of the Bliss-Leavitt, an American torpedo which is rapidly developing into the best torpedo in the world.

So that you may appreciate the merits of each and understand the various functions of these torpedoes, I will briefly describe them.

Torpedoes are divided into three principal parts, the head, the air flask and the afterbody. The war head is made of bronze and carries a charge of about 200 pounds of guncotton. There is fitted into the war head a small mechanism called the war nose, the function of which is to fire the guncotton charge when the torpedo strikes the object.

The war nose has generally three or four arms, which aid the torpedo in cutting through nets or fire the charge in case the torpedo should strike a glancing blow. In times of peace steel exercise heads are carried for the purpose of practice and, as they are filled with water, are entirely harmless.

The head is fitted by screws to the air flask, a hollow cylindrical tube about eleven feet long and used for storing compressed air, the motive power of the torpedo. Every ship and destroyer carries machines for compressing air, but submarines usually have their flasks charged alongside a parent ship or at a base.

The flasks are charged to about 2,100 pounds pressure per square inch, and this is reduced by a valve to an engine working pressure of about 500 pounds, depending, of course, upon the speed. In order to get the greatest possible range with the limited supply of compressed air, the air after being reduced to a given pressure is superheated to give greater expansion and consequently greater speed.

The afterbody of a torpedo contains the working mechanism—engines, gyroscopic steering apparatus and the attached engines which control the rudders. All these are of very delicate adjustment, and in order to have efficient torpedo men the navy department maintains a school at the torpedo station in Narragansett bay.

Torpedoes can be adjusted before firing to run any desired number of yards from 100 to 4,000, and in our latest Bliss-Leavitt torpedoes a range of 10,000 yards has been attained. The speed of the torpedo depends on the distance it is to run. The Whitehead torpedo runs 27 knots per hour for 4,000 yards and 40 knots per hour for the 1,000 yard setting. Our submarines are being supplied with a Bliss-Leavitt torpedo capable of running 7,000 yards at about 35 knots an hour.

The torpedo can also be adjusted previous to firing to run at any desired depth beneath the surface of the water. The armor belt of most battleships extends about six or eight feet below the water line, and the torpedoes are generally adjusted to run at a depth which would strike the enemy ship just below the armor belt.

Before a torpedo is placed completely in its tube all adjustments are made so that it will run as desired. The torpedo is expelled from the tube by compressed air, and as it passes out a "starting lever" is thrown back, which allows the compressed air within the air flask to pass through the valves, reducing it to the engine working pressure and then to the engines.

The torpedo now takes full control of itself and runs at the desired depth speed and distance to the target.—Rush M. Hoag in Leslie's Weekly.

BAYONNE STRIKERS RESUME THEIR JOBS

Ninety-nine Guards Are Placed Under Arrest Today by Sheriff Kinkead.

Practically all of the men who have been idle for a week in Bayonne as a result of the strike troubles at the Standard Oil plant at Constable Hook were back at work this morning. Shortly after 6 o'clock this morning the gates of the Standard, of the Tide Water, of the Vacuum Oil and of the General Chemical Company were thrown wide open and when the 7 o'clock whistles sounded nearly every man who was at work before the strike was on the job.

Later in the day Sheriff Kinkead arrested ninety-nine of the guards employed at the Tide Water plant of the Standard Oil Company and marched them to police headquarters.

With the Sheriff was Jeremiah J. Baly, the young man who loomed up for a time as the leader of the strikers, but whom the Sheriff arrested when he learned Baly did not belong to the ranks of the oil men. Sheriff Kinkead went to the jail in Jersey City and grilled Frank Tannenbaum, the anarchist, whom also he had arrested, and Baly. Tannenbaum was then allowed to go.

After Baly had watched the men return to work he was paroled.

With the strikers off his hands, the Sheriff turned his attention to certain city officials who defied him during the strike. Speaking of these, he denounced them as cowards.

"Where were they when the rioting was going on?" he said. "Where were they when men were being shot? Not one of them was on the scene?"

In this connection the Sheriff ordered the arrest of Hugh Mara on a charge of inciting riot.

Mara is one of the City Commission. He was once city recorder.

"I locked up a lot of little fellows and I'll lock the big ones as well," the Sheriff commented. "I play no favorites."

WOMEN EXPECT TO PROMOTE A RECORD-BREAKING EUCHRE

What gives every previous indication of being a record breaker for Columbus Club attendance figures will be held in the auditorium of the West Front street institution tomorrow night in the nature of a card party and reception under the auspices of the wives and women friends of the club members. Euchre and other card games will prevail during the forepart of the evening and dancing, with music furnished by "Al" Squires' orchestra, will be a later feature.

The committee of women in charge numbers close to fifty and the sale of tickets to date indicates that the number present will surpass that of any other social function ever held in this popular auditorium. Valuable prizes have been offered for the successful competitors at card playing and various novel bits of entertainment will be furnished along with the main program by the committee, which is headed by Mrs. Andrew E. Kenney, as chairman.

THOMAS E. CARROLL HERE TO DIRECT MACHINISTS

Thomasc E. Carroll, an employe of the International Association of Machinists, has been in Plainfield for the past week consulting with various labor leaders in this city. In an interview with a Daily Press reporter this morning, Mr. Carroll said: "I want it made plain that I am not here to start a strike; the men will have to do that themselves. I am hired to investigate conditions and to organize the men and what action they take in declaring a strike will have to be done at a meeting where a vote is taken.

"The proposed movement in Plainfield is being taken in connection with the national eight-hour campaign and if the employers grant the eight-hour day there will be no trouble. Mr. Keppler will be here Monday and will consult with the factory owners. What will be done at tomorrow night's meeting I cannot say at this time, but there is a popular demand for the eight-hour day and the discussion of this subject will be the object of the meeting; not to ask for an increase in pay."

CHAPTER XIII.

Berrie's Vigil.

As Wayland's mind cleared he became curious to know precisely what had taken place, but he did not feel free to ask her. "She will tell me if she wishes me to know." That she had vanquished Belden and sent him on his way was evident, although he had not been able to hear what she had said to him at the last. What lay between the enemy's furious onslaught and the aid he lent in making the camp could only be surmised. "I wonder if she used her pistol?" Wayland asked himself. "Something like death must have stared him in the face."

That she loved him with the complete passion of her powerful and simple nature he knew, for her voice had reached through the haze of his semi-unconsciousness with thrilling power. The touch of her lips to his, the close clasp of her strong arms were of even greater convincing quality. And yet he wished the revelation had come in some other way. His pride was shocked. His manhood seemed somehow lessened. It was a disconcerting reversal of the [illegible] relations between hero and [illegible] no way of reestablishing [illegible] attitude of the battle.

Entirely unaware of what was going in the mind of his companion, [illegible] were about her future [illegible] ness which [illegible] the tent. She [illegible] a song as [illegible] fire, but a [illegible] in a tone of [illegible] Nash."

"I'm glad of that," [illegible] land, without [illegible] of her displeasure.

Nash, on his [illegible] visor, raised a friendly [illegible] saw the girl and [illegible] pected to meet you further up the hill," he said. "Tony phoned that you had started. Where did you leave the supervisor?"

"Over at the station waiting for you. Where's your outfit?"

"Camped down the trail a mile or so. I thought I'd better push through tonight. What about Norcross? Isn't he with you?"

She hesitated an instant. "He's in the tent. He fell and struck his head on a rock, and I had to go into camp here."

Nash was deeply concerned. "Is that so? Well, that's hard luck. Is he badly hurt?"

"Well, he had a terrible fall. But he's easier now. I think he's asleep."

"May I look in on him?"

"I don't think you'd better take the time. It's a long, hard ride from here to the station. It will be deep night before you can make it"—

"Don't you think the supervisor would want me to camp here tonight and do what I could for you? If Norcross is badly injured you will need me."

She liked Nash, and she knew he was right, and yet she was reluctant to give up the pleasure of her lone vigil. "He's not in any danger, and we'll be able to ride on in the morning."

Nash, thinking of her as Clifford Belden's promised wife, had no suspicion of her feeling toward Norcross. Therefore he gently urged that to go on was quite out of order. "I can't think of leaving you here alone—certainly not till I see Norcross and find out how badly he is hurt."

She yielded. "I reckon you're right," she said. "I'll go see if he is awake."

He followed her to the door of the tent, apprehending something new and inexplicable in her attitude. In the music of her voice as she spoke to the sick man was the love note of the mate. "You may come in," she called back, and Nash, stooping, entered the small tent.

"Hello, old man! What you been doing with yourself? Hitting the high spots?"

Norcross smiled feebly. "No, the hill flew up and bumped me."

"How did it all happen?"

"I don't exactly know. It all came of a sudden. I had no share in it. I didn't go for to do it."

"Whether you did or not, you seem to have made a good job of it."

Nash examined the wounded man carefully, and his skill and strength in handling Norcross pleased Berrie, though she was jealous of the warm friendship which seemed to exist between the men.

She had always liked Nash, but she resented him now, especially as he insisted on taking charge of the case, but she gave way finally and went back to her pots and pans with pensive countenance.

A little later, when Nash came out to make report, she was not very gracious in her manner. "He's pretty badly hurt," he said. "There's an ugly gash in his scalp, and the shock has produced a good deal of pain and confusion in his head, but he's going to be all right in a day or two. For a man seeking rest and recuperation he certainly has had a rough run of weather."

Through a serious minded, honorable forester, determined to keep sternly in mind that he was in the presence of the daughter of his chief, and that she was engaged to marry another, Nash was, after all, a man, and the witchery of the hour, the charm of the girl's graceful figure, asserted their power over him. His eyes grew tender, and his voice eloquent in spite of himself. His words he could guard, but it was hard to keep from his speech the song of the lover. The thought that he was to camp in her company, to help her about the fire, to see her from moment to moment, with full liberty to speak to her, to meet her glance, pleased him. It was the most romantic and moving episode in his life, and though of a rather dry and analytic temperament he had a sense of poesy.

The night, black, oppressive and silent, brought a closer bond of mutual help and understanding between them.

She grew friendlier and asked him about his work and especially about his ambitions and plans for the future. They discussed the forest and its enemies, and he wondered at her freedom in speaking of the mill and saloon. He said: "Of course you know that Alec Belden is a partner in that business, and I'm told—of course I don't know this—that Clifford Belden is also interested."

She [illegible] to defense of young Belden, and [illegible] puzzled him. He [illegible] decided protest in she merely replied: "I don't care who owns it. It should be [illegible] hate that kind of thing. It's just another way of robbing those poor [illegible] jacks."

"Clifford should get out of it. Can't you persuade him to do so?"

"I don't think I can."

"His relationship to you"—

"He is not related to me."

Her tone amazed him. "You know what I mean."

"Of course I do, but you're mistaken. We're not related that way any longer."

This silenced him for a few moments, then he said: "I'm rather glad of that. He isn't anything like the man you thought he was—I couldn't say these things before—but he is as greedy as Alec, only not so open about it."

All this comment, which moved the forester so deeply to utter, seemed not to interest Berea. She sat staring at the fire with the calm brow of an Indian. Clifford Belden had passed out of her life as completely as he had vanished out of the landscape. She felt an immense relief at being rid of him and resented his being brought back even as a subject of conversation.

Wayland, listening, fancied he understood her desire and said nothing that might arouse Nash's curiosity.

Nash on his part, knowing that she had broken with Belden, began to understand the tenderness, the anxious care of her face and voice, as she bent above young Norcross. As the night deepened and the cold air stung, he asked, "Have you plenty of blankets for a bed?"

"Oh, yes," she answered, "but I don't intend to sleep."

"Oh, you must!" he declared. "Go to bed. I will keep the fire going."

At last she consented. "I will make my bed right here at the mouth of the tent close to the fire," she said, "and you can call me if you need me."

"Why not put your bed in the tent? It's going to be cold up here."

"I am all right outside," she protested.

"Put your bed inside, Miss Berrie. We can't let conventions count above timber line. I shall rest better if I know you are properly sheltered."

And so it happened that for the third time she shared the same roof with her lover. But the nurse was uppermost in her now.

Nash was the first to arise in the dusk of dawn, and Berrie, awakened by the crackle of his fire, soon joined him.

"If you'll round up our horses, Mr. Nash, I'll rustle breakfast and we'll get going," she said.

Nash, enthralled, lingered while she twisted her hair into place, then went out to bring in the ponies.

Wayland came out a little uncertainly, but looking very well. "I think I shall discourage my friends from coming to this region for their health," he said ruefully. "If I were a novelist now all this would be grist for my mill."

Beneath his joking he was profoundly chagrined. He had hoped by this time to be as sinewy, as alert as Nash, instead of which here he sat, shivering over the fire like a sick girl, his head swollen, his blood sluggish, but this discouragement only increased Berea's tenderness—a tenderness which melted all his reserve.

"I'm not worth all your care," he said to her, with poignant glance.

The sun rose clear and warm, and the fire, the coffee, put new courage into him as well as into the others, and while the morning was yet early and the forest chill and damp with rain, the surveyor brought up the horses and started packing the outfit.

In this Berrie again took part, doing her half of the work quite as dextrously as Nash himself. Indeed, the forester was noticeably confused and not quite up to his usual level of adroit ease.

At last both packs were on, and as they stood together for a moment Nash said: "This has been a great experience—one I shall remember as long as I live."

She stirred uneasily under his frank admiration. "I'm mightily obliged to you," she replied, as heartily as she could command.

"Don't thank me. I'm indebted to you. There is so little in my life of such companionship as you and Norcross give me."

He helped Norcross mount his horse, and as he put the lead rope into Berrie's hand he said, with much feeling: "Good luck to you. I shall remember this night all the rest of my life, Miss Berrie."

"I hate to be going to the rear," called Wayland, whose bare, bandaged head made him look like a wounded young officer. "But I guess it's better for me to lay off a week or two and recover my tone."

She Sat Staring at the Fire With the Calm Brow of an Indian.

And so they parted, the surveyor riding his determined way up the naked mountain side toward the clouds, while Berrie and her ward plunged at once into the dark and dripping forest below. "If you can stand the grief," she said, "we'll go clear through."

Her caution was all for him. She tried each dangerous slough first and thus was able to advise him which way was safest. His head throbbed with pain and his knees were weary, but he rode on.

At last they came into open ground on a high ridge and were gladdened by the valley outspread below them, for it was still radiant with color, though not as brilliant as before the rain.

At 1 o'clock on the bank of a clear stream the girl halted. "I reckon we'd better camp awhile. You look tired, and I am hungry."

She unsaddled one pack animal and spread some blankets on the grass. "Lie down and rest while I boil some coffee," she commanded, and he obeyed, too tired to make pretension toward assisting.

Lying so, feeling the magic of the sun, hearing the music of the water and watching the girl, he regained a serener mood, and when she came back with his food he thanked her for it with a glance before which her eyes fell. "I don't see why you are so kind to me. I really believe you like to do things for me." Her head drooped to hide her face, and he went on: "Why do you care for me? Tell me!"

"I don't know," she murmured. Then she added, with a flash of bravery, "But I do."

"What a mystery it all is! You turn from a splendid fellow like Landon to a 'skate' like me. Landon worships you—you know that—don't you?"

"I know—he"— she ended, vaguely distressed.

"Did he ask you to marry him?"

"Yes."

"Why didn't you? He's just the mate for you. He's a man of high character and education." She made no answer to this, and he went on: "Dear girl, I'm not worth your care—truly, I'm not. I resented your engagement to Belden, for he was a brute, but Landon is different. He thinks the world of you. He'll go high in the service. I've never done anything in the world—I never shall. It will be better for you if I go—tomorrow."

She took his hand and pressed it to her cheek, then, putting her arm about his neck, drew him to her bosom and kissed him passionately. "You break my heart when you talk like that," she protested, with tears. "You mustn't say such gloomy things—I won't let you give up. You shall come right home with me, and I will nurse you till you are well. It was all my fault."

"I will not have it go that way," he said. "I've brought you only care and unhappiness thus far. I'm an alien—my ways are not your ways."

"I can change," she answered. "I hate my ways, and I like yours."

As they argued she felt no shame, and he voiced no resentment. She knew his mood. She understood his doubt, his depression. She pleaded as a man might have done, ready to prove her love, eager to restore his self respect, while he remained both bitter and [illegible] contemptuous.

A cow hand [illegible] shall greet ed Berrie [illegible] smile [illegible] lips as he passed on. Another whisper, another gossip.

She did not come. She had [illegible] their company. Her life's [illegible] ing eyes [illegible] to win him [illegible] of life was her only [illegible]

"I've never had any [illegible] confessed. "I've always done what pleased me at the moment—or because it was easier to do as others were doing. I went to college that way. Truth is, I never had any surplus vitality, and my father never demanded anything of me. I haven't any motives now. A few days ago I was interested in forestry. At this time it all seems futile. What's the use of my trying to live?"

Of Interest to Women and the Home

"You are always killing time," answered the old gentleman.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Boy Who Killed Old Father Time.

"I KNOW of a boy who was always killing time," said daddy to his two children, eager for the bedtime story. "But something happened, and the little boy was always far more careful after that about dealing with that old gentleman.

"Did you never hear that Time was an old gentleman? Oh, my, yes! You see, children, he is very, very old—oh, far older than anybody can estimate—and so he is always pictured as a very venerable gentleman with a perfectly bald head and long, flowing, white whiskers that reach almost down to his knees. And he carries a scythe such as farmers mow grass with, and he carries an hour glass with sand in it and lets the sand run through into one half the glass, and then turns it over and lets the sand run into the other. And he plods on and on and on without stopping, for poor old Father Time cannot rest.

"Well, so much for poor old Father Time. Now we must get back to that boy I started to tell you about who was always killing time. He was such a nice little boy in every other respect, but he was a great procrastinator.

"You don't know what a procrastinator is? Well, when I tell Jack to do this or that, and he dillydallies and doesn't do it until some time after I have spoken to him, that is procrastinating. And that is the way the little boy I am telling you about did things, or, rather, didn't do them, for his parents.

"One night they told him to go to bed, because he should have been in his nest long before, and he just crawled lazily upstairs, and then he sat down in his little rocking chair near the window to think about it. And it was bright moonlight outside, and he looked out at the moonlight.

"And by and by who should come right out of the moonlight and through the open window and stand before him with his whiskers and his scythe and his hour glass but queer old Father Time.

"That old gentleman looked at him sadly and asked, 'Little boy, why do you kill me so much?'

"'Kill you?' repeated the little boy. 'I don't understand.'

"'You are always killing time,' answered the old gentleman, 'and I am Father Time. Don't you understand? Oh, so many people have killed me! And it makes it so hard for me to keep up with myself and so hard for people to keep up with me too. But if people kill me, why, I must get even.'

"Then the little boy saw the scythe, and he screamed. And he woke up, for, you see, he had fallen asleep in his chair and dreamed. And he made haste to get into bed, and he was careful not to kill time any more after that."

MEDICAL FACULTY QUITS.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 28.—As a result of the acceptance by the regents of the University of Minnesota of the affiliation agreement made by the Mayo Foundation, organized in Rochester, Minn., for medical research, six of the most prominent medical professors of the university have handed in their resignations. The board of regents will meet today, and it is expected that the resignations will be accepted. The withdrawal of the faculty members is an aftermath of the vigorous objection [illegible] to the university's accepting the Mayo offer of affiliation. Their opposition was based on the belief that it established a dangerous precedent to establish a formal connection between the State and a private institution. Dr. Charles L. Greene, head of the department of medicine in the Medical School, was the leader of the opposition to the Mayo plan, and he declared that all but two members of his faculty were opposed.

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Hello!" called Dick over the telephone. "That you, Doc? Come over this evening, can you? There's to be a gathering of the clan to celebrate the arrival of the fortune. * * * Yes, got returns today; thing is all settled. * * * No, I'll not divulge anything at long range; our fortune is one to be seen, not heard," he chuckled. "Full dress! Sure thing; we shall never entertain without evening togs after this. I hope our affluence will not make a gulf between us and our old friends. We will try and keep the newly-rich air out of the house, but wait till you see the fortune. It's some sight, all right. * * * Oh, any old time after the evening feed. Good-by."

"Now, Nell, you invite the Parsons and don't you say a word except that this is a spread to celebrate our coming into our inheritance. Lord! I'd like a flash light of them when they see that measly check for $1.50 framed over the mantle. Won't it be a scream? We'll have a dollar and a half's worth of fun out of it anyway, and if we don't have enough fun tonight to keep us in good spirits a year, I'll miss my guess."

"I believe you would rather have that old annuity of $1.50 than a real fortune," grumbled Nell.

"I can't say quite that," laughed Dick, "but I wasn't given my choice, and since I got the joke instead of the fortune I'm going to enjoy it to the full and share it with my friends.

"I am going downtown; anything you want for the spread tonight?"

"Yes; I have an idea: get some tin plates, cups, spoons, etc. We'll serve on 'solid silver' in honor of the occasion. We must have some English walnuts, too. I'll take out the meats, paste the shells together and call them 'fortunes.' We can leave them hollow or write some absurd fortune and enclose in the shells."

"Great stunt!" encouraged Dick. "I'll be thinking up the sentiments to put in them as I go along."

"Bring some oysters," called Nell as Dick closed the gate behind him. He flapped his hand in the air to indicate that he heard and Nell closed the door.

"Escolloped oysters will look well on our tin plates and we'll have coffee from the cups. I'll make salad with celery, apples and the removed walnut meats. Why didn't I send for more cake?" she mused as she measured the piece in the cake box. "I'll call up the baker and have him keep an eye out for Dick and send a cake by him."

Nell flew around and had supper steaming on the table when Dick returned, loaded with tinware, cake and oysters, and everything was in order and the baby sound asleep when the guests arrived.

"I'm crazy to know about the money," said Jo Parsons when Nell went upstairs with her to lay off her wraps.

"You'll be crazier when you know the truth," said Nell with a great air of mystery. "Dick has a program of announcement and I'll not steal his thunder."

"How deliciously exciting," cried Jo. "It's like a story."

"Oh, very!" Nell's tone was sarcastic. Jo stared.

Household Hints

PUTTING UP ROSE LEAVES

Roses which are to be used for confections should be gathered early in the morning before the dew has been dried by the sun.

Rose Flavoring—Rose flavoring, much used for candies and fine pastries, is easily made by packing rose petals as tightly as possible in a bottle and covering them with enough fresh alcohol to submerge the leaves. Then cork the bottle and set away for a few weeks.

A delicious syrup for puddings and ice creams may be made by adding rose extract to a simple sugar and water syrup. Color it lightly with a bit of cochineal and add enough citric acid to acidulate it lightly.

Crystallized Roses—Another delicacy that tempts epicures is crystallized rose leaves. These are made by separating perfect bloscoms into petals and spreading them on an inverted sieve to dry in the air. However, they must not be allowed to become so dry that they are crisp. Then prepare a heavy syrup of equal parts of granulated sugar and water, cooked without stirring until the syrup will spin a thread. Flavor with rose extract and color with cochineal. Drop the leaves, one by one, into the syrup, using a fine wire, and drain on a greased sieve. Dry for several hours.

FOR A HOT DAY

Summer cooking should be easy cooking. And although there are no [illegible] foods to simplify this form of [illegible] there are many new [illegible] of fixing up the [illegible] are a few [illegible] on a hot or busy [illegible] on buttered bread. Squeeze a little lemon juice on each. Put together and serve with dressed lettuce.

Dutch Sauce—Beat up the white of an egg with salt and pepper, a spoon of chopped parsley, a small onion and a teaspoon of olive oil. Beat well and add a teaspoon of tarragon vinegar. This sauce may be used with any cold meat.

Fried Eggplant—Peel and slice an eggplant. Sprinkle slices with salt, pile on a plate, cover with a weight and let stand for an hour. Rinse in cold water, wipe dry, dredge with seasoned flour, and fry in deep butter or fat.

Tapioca Ice—Soak one cup of pearl tapioca over night. In the morning boil in water until it is clear, adding one cup of sugar and a little salt. Chop a ripe pineapple and turn the tapioca and sugar over it while boiling hot. Stir and turn into a mold to cool.

Fairy Toast—Toast slices of stale sponge cake and cut into pieces two inches square. Put half a tumbler of apple or any light-colored jelly into a glass egg-beater and beat slowly and continuously until very light; then mix in carefully the well-beaten white of one egg. Spread this over the squares of toast and place a large cherry in the center of each square. Serve cold with cream.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Brush for Bread Pans—Use a little five-cent brush for greasing bread and cake pans, also for greasing the bread when first taken from the oven. This will save much time and the unpleasantness of getting the fingers greasy.

Sewing Hint—When cutting buttons [illegible] garments put all those of [illegible] safety pin. Place in [illegible] screw top.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Root Repudiates Nugent Letter.

James R. Nugent, of Newark, popularly known in Essex county as "Boss" Nugent, or his private secretary, Edward J. Hanley, should have been more careful in the selection of the prominent man whose writings were to be worked up into an alleged "letter!" Senator Elihu Root, of New York, evidently does not care to stand sponsor for all that is being done by these leaders in the anti-suffrage campaign in New Jersey. About a month ago the papers of the State were flooded with what purported to be a speech made by Senator Root at this year's Constitutional Convention in New York State, of which he is the presiding officer, in which he took a very decided stand against woman suffrage. Two weeks later appeared a letter which it was stated had been written by Senator Root to Mr. Hanley in which the Senator again stated his opposition to votes for women. To Suffragists both these articles seemed strangely familiar, and they found that they were word for word extracts from a speech made by Senator Root many years ago, back in the days when there were only three suffrage States and a few thousand voters instead of twelve equal suffrage States and four million women qualified to vote for the next President of the United States. The Empire State Campaign Committee thereupon wrote Senator Root asking if the Nugent letter was authentic, and it promptly received the following reply, under date of July 22:

"I have not written any letter or made any address expressing an opinion on the subject of woman suffrage during the present year, nor, so far as I can recall, for many years past. The recent publication in New Jersey reported to come from me was a copy of remarks made by me in the course of a debate in the Constitutional Convention of New York twenty-one years ago."

If Suffragists did a thing of this sort how the State would ring with the denunciations of the Anti speakers. It remains to be seen whether the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage will repudiate the man whose campaign against suffrage is being conducted in such a dishonest manner. We hope they will and wait expectant!

Suffrage Growth in New Jersey.

During the past six months the number of local suffrage organizations has been doubled, and there are now two hundred and fifty of them, as compared with twenty-five less than four years ago. Reports which come from every county show a wonderful increase in interest and enthusiasm in the cause as the campaign for votes for New Jersey women draws to a close. Over forty newspapers prominent in different sections of the State are actively supporting woman suffrage and twice as many are passive workers for the cause, that is they never editorialize against it and are willing to print all suffrage news. Only three or four papers in the whole State have announced that they are opposed. This is a wonderful change from two or three years ago when it was almost impossible to get suffrage propaganda articles printed at all, no papers supporting the question editorially, and even news articles were tucked away in an obscure corner of the paper.

The list of clergymen of all denominations and public men in every department of activity who have endorsed woman suffrage now runs up into the thousands.

State Meeting in New Brunswick.

There will be a large gathering of suffrage workers from all over the State in New Brunswick on Friday, the occasion being the July meeting of the executive board of the New Jersey Suffrage Association. Delegates will be present from all over North and South Jersey.

The business meeting of the board will be held at 10:30 at the fine new headquarters of the New Brunswick League on George street. At this time, reports will be made by the various field and county organizers, plans for getting out the vote on Election Day and for the Lucy Stone Suffrage Pilgrimage on August 13, will be completed, and other business transacted.

At noon the members of the board will be guests of the local league at a luncheon to be given at Brunswick Hall, and in the afternoon there will be a conference for workers which is open to everyone interested in suffrage work. The president of the association, Mrs. E. F. Feickert, of Plainfield, will preside, and the program will be as follows:

"Organizing County Workers," Miss Florence Leech, of Montana, field organizer.

"Reaching the Labor Unions," Mrs. Laura Gregg Cannon, of California, Organizer of the First Congressional district.

"The Importance of Canvassing Every Voter," by Miss Esther G. Ogden, president of the Elizabeth Equal Suffrage League.

"Intensive Work in the City," by Mrs. J. B. Fries, of California, field organizer.

"The Work on Election Day," Mrs. F. H. Colvin, first vice-president of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association.

"Question Box and General Discussion of Suffrage Problem," conducted by the president, Mrs. Feickert.

SMITH WILL NOT OPPOSE MARTINE

Former Senator Not to Enter Fall Primaries, It Is Said.

NUGENT IS FRIENDLY

Plainfielder is Confident of Securing Re-Nomination and Being Elected—Open Field Will Insure a Lively Campaign.

That United States Senator James Martine will have the support of the Democratic party in seeking a renomination and election for a second term, seems to be the opinion of his close political friends. When questioned today by a representative of the Plainfield Daily Press regarding the rumor that former Senator James Smith and James Nugent would do all in their power to defeat him, the Plainfielder vigorously declared that there was nothing to the report.

"My political and personal relations with Mr. Smith and Mr. Nugent are most cordial and while they might differ with me as to certain political matters, there exists the utmost harmony at the present time. I have every reason to believe that I will not only be successful at the fall primaries, but at the November election as well."

When Senator Martine's attention was called to stories in other newspapers tending to show that he was slighted at the testimonial dinner given to former Congressman W. E. Tuttle, in Elizabeth, the former declared that if there was any slight he failed to notice it and as for being the last speaker, he added, that there was no significance in that fact.

While there has been no official announcement of the fact from a reliable source it is learned that former Senator Smith will not oppose Martine in the primaries, in fact it is believed that he will lend his support to the Plainfielder, strange as it may seem considering past history, and it would not be surprising if Mr. Nugent should fall in line in helping to give Senator Martine a second term.

Just what part Governor Fielder will play in the Senatorial race cannot be determined at present, but that he will be a candidate seems to be a foregone conclusion. It must be admitted that the Governor is popular throughout the State and if he should become a candidate would undoubtedly have a large following. That there will be many other aspirants for the Senatorial job is not doubted and with an open field, Senator Martine will, it is believed, be put to the test to win the nomination. But notwithstanding these facts he is confident of success and does not appear to worry in the least as to the outcome of the primaries or election.

JOSEPH GRIMMER ARRESTED AS SUSPICIOUS CHARACTER

His suspicious actions in the west end of town, yesterday afternoon, resulted in the arrest of Joseph Grimmer, an eighteen-year-old youth, whom the police are holding for further examination. A report came to police headquarters concerning his actions and Captain Flynn went to the scene and found him trying to dispose of a small watch.

He could not give a satisfactory account of himself to Flynn and was locked up. Efforts are new being made to find out whether or not his statement that he found the watch is correct and it is thought that he may possibly be a man wanted in Newark for robbery.

TOOK SUIT OF CLOTHES.

Mrs. Serrell, of 931 Union street, reported to the local police late yesterday afternoon, that a suit of clothes had been taken from her home earlier in the day by a man purporting to represent a West Fourth street cleaning establishment, but whom it was later learned was an imposter. Mrs. Serrell said that the man asked for her nephew's suit, saying that he had been instructed to call for it. When the nephew returned home at night he said that he had made no such request and the hunt then began.

BUSINESS MEN'S MEETING.

PREFERRED JAIL TO DOLLAR FINE

Vitelli Changed His Mind After Two Hours Spent in Borough Lockup.

Refusing to pay the fine of one dollar and to take out the dog license required of him by Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., who sat as police magistrate in North Plainfield this morning, and in the absence of Recorder Hand, Frank Vitelli, a wholesale liquor dealer and bottler of Greenbrook road, was locked up in a cell at police headquarters for two hours. The fine was eventually paid, and Vitelli was released after his incarceration in the steel cell.

Vitelli was the one defendant served with a notice Tuesday, who failed to appear in court yesterday morning to answer to the charge of not having taken out a dog license. When questioned as to why he had failed to heed the summons and obey the mandates of the court, Vitelli replied that he was too busy yesterday to appear and had so informed the officer who served the notice on him. This, Mayor Clark said, was no excuse, and in addition to ordering him to take out the dog license at once, the Mayor imposed a fine of one dollar as a penalty.

Vitelli was willing to take out the license, but he objected strenuously to the imposition of the dollar fine and flung back at the Mayor, "If I have to pay a dollar fine I will not take out a dog license, but will get rid of the dog."

The Mayor explained that such action would not excuse him from the necessity of taking out a dog license; that as he had a dog on his premises on May 15, when dog licenses were due, the license would have to be paid, no matter what became of the dog afterwards.

Vitelli could not see the matter in that light and stubbornly refused to pay either the fine or the dog license money, so he was hustled back into a cell to begin serving the alternative of the dollar fine, two days in jail.

It was just two hours before Vitelli concluded to obey the court, whereupon he was released. The police say that Vitelli was before the court last year on the same charge.

MAKE APPEAL FOR SURGICAL DRESSINGS

Vacation War Relief Committee Now Perfecting Organization of State Sections.

The National Surgical Dressings Committee, organized by the Vacation War Relief Committee, of which Miss Anne Morgan is treasurer, has shipped to the war hospitals in Europe upwards of 2,500,000 prepared surgical dressings, but the calls from abroad are such that the national committee, of which Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard, of New York, is chairman, is now perfecting an organization of State sections, in the hope that still larger quantities of these supplies which are so greatly needed can be secured and forwarded.

Mrs. Lewis Buckley Stillwell, of Lakewood, has been appointed chairman of the New Jersey State section. A number of local sections in New Jersey have been doing excellent work, but it is hoped that many other groups of women in the cities and towns of our State may be willing to form local sections and assist in the work. A kit of samples and complete directions for making the dressings, after patterns endorsed by Dr. Joseph Pierre Hoguet, advisory surgeon, late of the American Ambulance at Paris, can be obtained by application to the State chairman.

CLARK—RAMSEY.

Whitehouse, July 29.—Announcement is made of the wedding of Miss Helen Mae Ramsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph N. Ramsey, of Lebanon, and niece of Mrs. A. D. Edgar, of Plainfield, and Leon Nelson Clark, of Somerville. The ceremony was performed at the Lutheran parsonage in George street in New Brunswick last Saturday afternoon in the presence of a few friends. The couple were attended by Miss Emma Voorhees and Postmaster Carl Shurts, of Lebanon. Mr. and Mrs. Clark left for Asbury Park, where they spent the honeymoon. On their return they will begin housekeeping at Lebanon.

He reports that he is improving rapidly, and having the first real vacation in years.

VETS OF SPANISH WAR RE-ORGANIZE

MANY SIGN CHARTER

Department Commander Harry L. Dabb, of Jersey City, in Charge of Meeting—Objects and Aims Set Forth—List of Members.

An enthusiastic re-organization meeting of Ensign Bagley Camp, United Spanish War Veterans, was held last night in the Frost building, when the charter list was opened and a number of members signed. Department Commander Harry L. Dabb, of Jersey City, was in charge of the meeting, and he was accompanied by Senior Vice Commander Hughes, of Jersey City, and Adjutant Wittlock of Newark, who assisted in the re-organization plans.

Those who signed the charter list were: Rev. Dr. J. Madison Hare, of Scotch Plains, who is a chaplain in the State Guard; Michael D. O'Keefe, Daniel J. Shea, Dennis O'Keefe, Lieut. James Boyd Potter, John G. Staats, Richard E. Davis, William Scarlett, William R. Townsend, Theodore A. Martin, John Sickler, Thomas Gleason and John Jackson.

Michael D. O'Keefe, William Scarlett and Daniel J. Shea were named as a committee to enroll new members. At the next meeting, which will be subject to the call of Commander Dabb, officers will be elected and installed and plans for the future discussed.

The membership of the United Spanish War Veterans is composed of comrades who served in the army, navy or marine corps of the United States during the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection, the Chinese Relief Exposition of 1900, or between April 21, 1898, and July 4, 1902.

The objects of the organization are to unite in fraternal bonds, through National, State and local organizations, those men who served in the military or naval establishments of the United States in the war with Spain, to honor the memory and preserve from neglect the graves of the dead and to assist former comrades and shipmates, their widows, orphans or dependent relatives. The members are placed on an equal footing with Civil War veterans, both north and south.

NEXT EXCURSION TO THE SEASHORE ON THURSDAY

The next excursion from this city to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove will take place next Thursday when the annual one-day outing of the Sunday-schools of the First Presbyterian, Congregational and Park Avenue Baptist churches will be held.

This will be one of the largest excursions of the year. The train will leave in two sections, the first section leaving Dunellen at 8:04 and Plainfield at 8:15, stopping at Clinton and Grant Avenues both ways. For the return trip the train will leave Asbury Park at 6:40.

WHEELBARROW COLLISION BREAKS AUTO CAR SPRING

Driving his father's Maxwell runabout on Somerset street, near Grandview avenue, last night, William Schorb, son of W. A. Schorb, of East Front street, collided with a wheelbarrow which had been left in the road by Sewer Contractor Frank Puglio, and broke the front spring of the automobile. Schorb was barely able to get the injured car to his father's home.

The collision occurred about 10:45 o'clock. Whether there had been lights on the wheelbarrow or not Mr. Schorb could not tell, but the rain had probably put the lights out. Schorb was driving along Somerset street at a fair rate of speed and did not see the obstruction. He struck it and knocked it about twenty feet, breaking the wheelbarrow to bits. Puglio readily agreed to make good the damage.

MRS. BECKER WILL APPEAL TO GOVERNOR

Has Appointment With New York Executive for Six O'clock Today.

Albany, July 29.—Mrs. Charles Becker and Attorney John B. Johnston have arranged with Governor Whitman for a final plea here at 6 o'clock tonight to save the life of Charles Becker, the New York police lieutenant. Information that Mrs. Becker would see the Governor convinced those familiar with the case here that every other means of saving the convicted man has been exhausted and that there will be no attempt to appeal from the decision rendered late last night by Justice Ford of the Supreme Court, who denied Becker's application for a new trial and doomed him to the electric chair at 5:45 o'clock tomorrow morning.

W. Bourke Cockran, counsel-in-chief for the condemned man, said early today that he thought there was a chance to appeal from the decision, despite the opinion of Justice Ford and District Attorney Perkins to the contrary.

The remarkable story that Becker had signified his willingness to plead guilty to murder in the second degree and accept a life sentence at any stage of the proceedings was heard here today. No authority was quoted for the report and there were no details.

Governor Whitman told a reporter after the conviction of the four Rosenthal gunmen that the gunmen had wanted to plead guilty to murder in the second degree but were so strongly advised against making the offer that they decided to take a chance on "beating the case."

When apprised of Justice Ford's decision last night Governor Whitman made this brief comment:

"The evidence was conclusive and Justice Ford could have rendered no other decision on the facts. If I had any doubt about Becker's guilt I would pardon him in a minute."

Hundreds of letters, principally from women, have come to the Executive Mansion in the last few days. The majority of them supplicated the Governor to spare Becker.

Ossining, N. Y., July 29—When Becker received the morning newspapers today containing the report from Albany that he had been ready at any time since his first conviction to plead guilty to murder in the second degree he intimated that he was greatly surprised by the statement. A strong impression continues to prevail that the condemned man will issue some form of statement before the day is over. There is also a persistent report in the prison that Becker will say something after he takes his seat in the chair.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE WHILE ON VACATION

Local Man Made Heroic Effort to Save the Life of Six-year-old Boy.

Victor H. Miron, who is connected with the local firm of Miron & Lifson and who lives in the local Y. M. C. A., returned yesterday afternoon from a three weeks' vacation spent in Hunter, N. Y. During his outing Mr. Miron had a narrow escape from death in attempting to rescue a six-year-old boy by the name of Louis Rosenthan, of New York city, from being struck by a Ford automobile.

Miron risked his life by dashing in front of another machine, approaching from the opposite direction, and escaped being struck only by inches. His heroic effort to save the lad, however, was futile. The child was struck and the front wheels of the Ford passed over him. The car stopped in this position, with the boy lying under the car, between the front and rear wheels.

The car was driven by Thommasshefsky, the Jewish actor, and before he alighted, Miron had dragged the youth from beneath the car. Besides having a number of body bruises and a serious scalp wound, which had to be closed with six stitches, the lad suffered internal injuries. He is resting in a Hunter hospital.

When Miron picked up the lad and started to carry him to the home of a nearby physician, he collapsed with the lad in his arms. Miron was taken in an auto to the Central House, where he was staying, and was greated by Dr. M. Lowinthan, of New York. He was revived within a short time.

Miron was formerly connected with the repertorial staff of the Elizabeth Evening Times.

BOY SCOUT CAMP IS NOW ASSURED

Entire Sum of $250 Needed to Establish It Has Been Subscribed.

WORK TO BEGIN SOON

Friend of the Scouts Made Purchase of Equipment Possible by Large Contribution—Camp Will Be a Model One.

A Boy Scout permanent camp for Plainfield troops is now assured Commissioner Allen E. Beals made the above announcement this morning, explaining that all the money needed to establish a permanent camp on the Coriell farm in the eastern end of the city had been donated. Only $250 was wanted, but $250 is available, because besides the large donation of the person who raised the fund to the figure desired, and who requests that his name be not mentioned, Charles W. McCutchen made a donation of ten dollars, which swelled the fund to $260.

It will be only a short time before the camp will be built and ready for occupancy. William W. Coriell has donated the use of the land, which is situated on Terrill road and is admirably adapted for the purpose. Architect Edward V. French has drawn the plans for the building, and John D. Loizeaux contributed the lumber to build it. All that was needed was the $250 for equipment, and now that this money is available the work of establishing the camp will go forward without delay.

The camp will be a model one in every way and will be self-supporting. It will be named "Camp Coriell," in honor of the man upon whose land it is to be located. The Plainfield Scout Council has decided that the camp can be used by the Boy Scouts living in the vicinity of the spot in the winter time. The acquisition of this camp will place the Plainfield Boy Scouts in the same class with Montclair, New Brunswick and other places where they have camps.

Edwin Addis, a member of Troop 10, W. R. Kriney, scoutmaster, has won an honor never before conferred upon a local scout. He has been promoted to the life and star order. This means that he has accomplished about three-quarters of the work required of him in his competition for full Boy Scout honors. Caryl Dunavan, of Troop 9, Dr. Raymond Stevens, scoutmaster, has won the same honors, but his application has not gone through the board yet.

TAX COLLECTOR'S ILLNESS HOLDS UP ADVERTISING

Tax Collector George F. Brown, of North Plainfield, is still ill and as a consequence the list of delinquent taxpayers for 1914, which was to have been advertised today will not be made public for another day or two. Meanwhile the collector's assistant is accepting payment of the back taxes, plus interest and costs, but minus the additional cost of advertising, which will have to be added as soon as the advertisement appears.

Many property-owners have appeared in the collector's office offering to pay an installment on their back taxes, hoping thus to ward off the day of advertising. But while, according to a recent act of the Legislature, installments of not less than ten dollars may now be paid on taxes the law has no application to delinquent taxes and so Collector Brown must have the entire sum due or can accept nothing.

POSTPONE CHURCH EXERCISES BECAUSE OF THE STORM

The storm last evening interfered with the exercises marking the formal beginning of work on the new house of worship which the Netherwood Reformed church will build on the church property on Leland avenue. The exercises will take place at the same time and place tonight, with the Rev. Edward S. Ralston, the pastor, in charge, and Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, as the principal speaker. Two old parishioners, S. O. Rush and O. P. Wahlig, will throw out the first shovelfuls of dirt.

WILL "HIKE" TOMORROW.

The Camp Fire Girls, of the First Presbyterian church, will hold their postponed hike tomorrow. They will meet at the Y. W. C. A. at 12 o'clock unless it rains, in which event the hike will be held on Friday, August 6. All the girls will bring their own lunches.

HEAVY GUARD KEPT AT SAURER FACTORY

Fear of pro-German Movements Leads Officials to Engage Private Detectives.

Fear that a pro-German element is preparing to do destructive work around its plant on Clinton avenue, has led the International Motor Company to engage a private corps of night and day detectives who are maintaining a constant vigil in and around the concern's big factory. For a long time it has been known that a certain amount of uneasiness was in evidence among employes and officials of the plant and on several occasions open threats have been reported.

Three night watchmen reported for duty last night, one new man being added to the corps that has been working for months past. James Duffey, of West Front street, who was sworn in by the Common Council as a special policeman Monday night, was immediately engaged for night work at the Saurer plant and entered upon his duties last night.

A strict surveillance is being maintained on all persons who enter the factory gates, the guards subjecting everyone to verbal grilling with a view to establishing their identity beyond any possibility of doubt. Even the employes who enter the gates at the western end of the yard are made to show their credentials before being given admittance. A board fence separates the factory yard from the railroad and this is also being carefully watched. Three boys scaled the fence yesterday morning with a view to taking a short cut to West Front street and were immediately siezed.

Large shipments of Saurer trucks are being made by this plant to the allies engaged in the European conflict and fear that German sympathizers are plotting to blow up the local factory is said to be the cause for the extra detail night and day. Aside from the watchmen who have been doing night and day service the employes of the machine shop report that a number of mysterious looking individuals, thought to be the representatives of a private detective agency, are on constant call in the office and among the shopmen.

DR. D. W. THICKSTUN PASSES STATE TEST

Local Young Man Successful in Recent Examinations to Open Office Here.

One Plainfielder passed the recent examinations of the State Board of Registration and Examination in Dentistry and qualified to practice that profession in this State. He is Dr. David B. Thickstun, son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Thickstun, of 403 Central avenue.

The local young man was graduated from the Plainfield High School in the class of 1912 and from the University of Pennsylvania Dental College in June last. In view of the fact that the New Jersey tests for a State license to practice dentistry are considered to be unusually strict, Dr. Thickstun's successful achievement on his first attempt at the tests is extremely gratifying to his friends here. He will probably open an office in Plainfield in the near future.

Dr. Thickstun is the third dentist of this name to practice the profession in this city, his grandfather, Dr. Daniel Thickstun, and his father, Dr. William D. Thickstun, having preceded him.

EXPECT "OVERFLOW" CROWD AT MACHINISTS' MEETING

Every indication points to an "overflow" meeting in the Trades Council Hall tonight, when the local machinists meet to discuss the problem of making a demand for an eight hour day, and in order to provide accommodations for all who attend it is probable that the Moose Lodge rooms directly across the street will be pressed into service. The promise of about 1,200 workmen to attend the session indicates that the limited quarters provided in the council chambers will not be large enough to hold the entire assemblage.

Good speakers will be present at both meetings and strong pleas will be made to the men to "stick together" during the campaign for the shorter day.

FURIOUS DEFENSE NEAR WARSAW

Russian Troops Succeed in Retaking Three Towns and 1,500 German Prisoners.

SUBMARINE IS MISSING

French Vessel at Dardanelles Not Heard From Since Monday—Warsaw Battle Now in Decisive Stage—Petrograd Claims Advantage.

Petrograd, July 29.—By a brilliant counter offensive near Grubieszow, the Russians have driven back Gen. von Mackensen's troops and captured the villages of Rakolupy, Majdan and Ostrowsky, taking 1,500 prisoners, although the German's heavy artillery in von Hindenburg's division continues its attempt to smash the Russian lines of defense at the junction of the Bug and Narew Rivers.

An official bulletin announcing this victory also says:

"Persistent enemy attacks continue north of Stepankowitse. We repulsed three furious attacks designed to break our front, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

"South of Sokal (Galicia) we repulsed the enemy who crossed the river on Wednesday morning. In these actions we took numerous prisoners. The enemy has brought up re-enforcements.

"Fighting of severest intensity continues on the upper Bug, marked by heavy artillery firing. Along the Narew the enemy is attacking also with heavy artillery.

"In the vicinity of the mouth of the Iskwa a portion of the enemy captured our trenches. Counter attacking, with bayonet charges, we repulsed him.

"On the right bank of the Narew the enemy's offensive is fruitless."

An earlier statement said:

"On the Narew front there has been a violent artillery fire on the left bank of the river up to the River Prut. Stubborn fighting took place, but did not result in any change. On the line of the front of the right bank of the Narew we repulsed six attacks near the village of Budy (southeast of Pultusk).

"North of Maidane was assumed the offensive and captured 1,500 prisoners.

"South of Sokal we have assumed the offensive against the enemy, who is crossing the river near Porietzk."

Paris, July 29.—Today's French war statement says:

"In Artois there was the usual bombardment during the night. In the sector of Souchez there were some conflicts with Grenades and Petards. In the Argonne there was fighting with bombs and torpedoes. In the region of Bagatelle and at Cour's Thausse, near St. Hubert, as well as in the forest of Malancourt we blew up numerous German posts.

"In the Vosges at Lingekopf in the position conquered by us on July 22, we found 200 German bodies, two rapid fire guns, 200 rifles and a great quantity of munitions and equipment. The Germans left on the ground at Barrankopf more than 400 dead. The exact number of prisoners taken in the conflicts July 27 and 28 is 201."

The French submarine Mariotte is believed to have been destroyed in the Dardanelles. Nothing has been heard of the boat since Monday morning. The Ministry of Marine today issued the following statement:

"The French fleet at the Dardanelles is without direct news of the French submarine Mariotte, which entered Straits on Monday, July 26, at 4 a. m., to operate in the Sea or Marmora. According to telegrams from Turkish sources it has been sunk and 31 officers and sailors of its crew taken prisoners."

The first five months of the war cost France exactly 6,403,000,000 francs. This is shown by the report of the budget committee on supplementary military and naval credits just issued.

London, July 29.—The world's greatest battle is in its decisive stage in the Warsaw triangle. All the fighting elsewhere on the eastern front, though fierce, is merely diversional. Notwithstanding German re-enforcements, the Russians still have a hope of saving the Polish capital and the defence line of the Vistula. The question is how long both sides can stand the tremendous wastage of men and munitions.

The advance has already cost the Teutons 500,000 troops, according to one report, while the loss of the Russians is said to be somewhat smaller. Before the battle is over the total losses will be considerably more than a million men, the greatest toll of casualties ever known in a single campaign.

According to the latest advices from Petrograd, the Germans have

DUNELLEN

DUNELLEN BACHELORS WILL PLAY BENEDICTS BASEBALL

At Maurer Oval, Saturday afternoon, the married men of the borough will play the single men a game of ball for the benefit of the local organization of Boy Scouts. The married men will lineup as follows: Editor George W. Day, of the Weekly Call, left field; John P. Fenner, centre field; Councilman E. D. Williams, right field; A. J. Hamley, cashier of the local bank, first base; Edwin H. Dean, second base; George Voehl, shortstop; George K. Post, third base; Egbert J. Gessner and Abram G. Nelson, catchers; Elwood E. Waller and Egbert J. Gessner, pitchers. Others who have consented to play are Herman Eder, John Bache and Edward J. Dusel.

Editor George W. Day says that one of these can replace him after he makes his first sprint to first base as he expects it to play him out, and John P. Fenner seconds Mr. Day in this.

The lineup of the single men will be made up of such well known players as Ben Dodwell, Harry Giddes, Ruliff Fisher, Michael T. Moynihan. They will unquestionably have the better team but they are expected to show the married men a little mercy up to the last two innings, when, it is said, they will make as many runs as they can. The single men expect these last innings to be pretty long ones, but the married men may surprise them.

The game will commence at 3:30. The umpires will be Frank R. Wynkoop and Albert N. Randolph.

FUTURE ATTACKS BY DOG TO BE PREVENTED

Henry Kirchner, Jr., of the firm of Kirchner & Vogt, yesterday completed his contract of making and hanging a gate across the alleyway leading to the barn of George Zink, the baker. Mr. Zink has a watch-dog which will not let any person come near the entrance to the barn, in which he has a valuable stock of flour stored. Several persons have ventured to do so and have been severely bitten.

Mr. Zink has a sign, "Beware of the Dog," prominently displayed and he thinks the sign sufficient protection for grown-ups who should know that they have no business to approach the barn. Since the last person entered the barn, however, and was attacked by his dog, Mr. Zink has been fearful that some child might wander innocently in and be similarly attacked, and the gate is hung to expressly guard against this possibility.

J. de Costales on either side of the Bache place and its completion results in an unbroken stretch of about 300 feet of wall and adds to the appearance of the neighborhood.

BAPTISTS TOOK BIG THRONG TO SEASIDE

Fifteen Hundred Local Excursionists Visited "the Town Without a Frown."

For the first time in two weeks Plainfield, this morning, sent a throng of excursionists to Asbury Park, the First Baptist, Temple Baptist and South Plainfield Baptist Sunday-schools taking fifteen hundred recreation seekers with them to "the town without a frown." Clearing weather after the storm of last night came as a welcome to the usual assemblage of excursion goers who count on the weekly outings to the seaside and the fact that two weeks have elapsed since a local Sunday-school conducted an event of this nature, lent special interest to the affair.

When the excursionist arrived at the Park shortly after 10 o'clock they were greeted with even brighter weather prospects than were promised when they left Plainfield and a stiff breeze made the day an ideal one for the boardwalk parader. For bathing, however, the wind was not all that could be expected; those who indulged in the surf sport being forced to suffer the effects of the chilly atmosphere.

Two sections took the excursionists to the shore and the trip was made without incident. Returning the party will leave the resort at 7:10 o'clock and should arrive here about 9 o'clock. The committee in charge included John B. McLaughlin, U. B. Crane, Clarence Griffen, Clarence Carson, Russell Stewart, Robert Scott, William Crow, Burtis Waldron, Pierre Moore, Ernest Conover and Al. Pierson.

MANY CANDIDATES FOR P. O. JOB AT DUNELLEN

Peters is also considered a strong candidate for the position, he having submitted a petition to Congressman Scully.

Among others mentioned for the honor are former Mayor William Wyckoff, who is said to have considerable backing; G. Sumner Smith, who is reported to have the promise of Secretary Joseph Tumulty that he would do what he could for him; Charles E. Tinsman, Michael Moynihan and George W. Day. Each one of the candidates is being assured of support and thus far the race seems to be an open one with no apparent favorites.

CRUISER HELD LINER.

New York, July 29.—The Holland-American liner Noordam from Rotterdam, reached port early today, after being held up thirty-three hours off Deal, New Jersey, by a British patrol boat, the officers of which, after carefully scrutinizing the 290 passengers on the liner, took off three Austrians for further examination aboard the warship. The Austrians apparently proved to the satisfaction of the British naval officers that they were naturalized American citizens, as after a short interval they were placed back aboard the Noordam.

SEVERE REPRIMAND GIVEN TO YOUTHFUL CULPRITS

Three small boys, two of whom have long police court records, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza, this morning, charged with throwing stones at passenger train windows. Benjamin Starr and Richard Craft, both colored, have appeared before the court on numerous similar charges and on each occasion have been lucky enough to get off with reprimands. Their parents were in court this morning, and Judge DeMeza instructd them to keep a closer watch over the youngsters in the future and said that a reoccurrence of the act would mean the reformatory in each case.

Joseph Mango, the third member of the group of youthful desperadoes, failed to notify his parents of his arrest and consequently Judge DeMeza instructed him to be on hand tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock with his father. The boys have long made it a practice to throw stones at passenger trains, thus making it unsafe for passengers who happen to be in the coaches that are hit.

INLAND WATERWAYS HEARING.

There will be a meeting at Point Pleasant Saturday, under the auspices of the Water Department at which a hearing will be granted on the inland waterways project. Senator James E. Martine, of this city, has been invited to attend, and has accepted.

Flynn, of the local force, on a warrant charging him with embezzling $132 from the New York Telephone Company by whom he was employed, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city police court, this morning, and held in $300 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. He waived examination in court this morning, thus electing to let his whole case go before the county court.

The accused worked in this city for several months and during his stay here he is alleged to have submitted a bill to the concern which exceeded the correct statement by $132. It was made out on Central Livery Company's bill-heads and was for the use of twenty-three teams of horses. The complaint against him was made by John J. Smith, division superintendent of supplies for the New York Telephone Company.

RUSHING REPAIRS ON BIG HOSTELRY

Hotel Netherwood Will Be Thrown Open for Public Inspection Saturday Night.

MANAGERS IN CHARGE

Prospects of the Netherwood Hotel, one of the most commodious structures of its kind in this section of the State, being transformed from a public eyesore into a modernly equipped and enterprising hostelry has aroused keen enthusiasm among the residents of the Netherwood section of the city and when the establishment opens its doors to the public Saturday night the support of the property-owners in that immediate section will be pledged to it. Adolph Ruehl, formerly proprietor of the Hotel Breslin in New York city, and one of the best known hotel managers in the Metropolis, has taken over the big institution and extensive repairs are now rapidly nearing completion. The ten acres of ground surrounding it are being put in readiness for the opening day, the neglected lawn and trees having already undergone treatment at the hands of Charles L. Stanley, the local florist, that once more lends a populated touch to the former barrenness.

The interior decorating, including wall papering and retouching, is in charge of Woolston & Buckle's employes, and every one of the 350 rooms and spacious halls have been treated to new finishings and repapering.

The building will be open for inspection Saturday night, the public in general being invited to go through the establishment on this occasion. One of the metropolitan touches being given to the hostelry by the new proprietor comes in the announcement that professional dancers will be in charge of the spacious ballroom and each night orchestra music will be furnished for exponents of this art. Various attractive social events have also been planned and these will be announced from time to time during the remainder of the summer and fall and winter season.

The management will be in charge of Lewis Natal, formerly of the Berkeley Hotel, in Boston. He will be assisted by William Heath, a well-known Plainfield young man, who has already taken charge of his duties at the hostelry and will do considerable to awaken a local interest in the enterprise. A competent corps of assistants will aid Messrs. Natal and Heath in directing the affairs of the establishment.

What promises to be one of the most attractive features has come in the manager's proposal to lay out a regulation tennis court. Efforts are already underway to bring the annual State tennis championships to Plainfield next year and a number of important professional exhibition contests will also be arranged. It has been the custom to hold the State event in Morristown of late years, but the local managers are of the opinion that a change would come as a welcome to the competitors.

The name of the hostelry will be changed from Truell Hall to Hotel Netherwood, but it will be maintained on practically the same plan as it was during the years of its success. The management will cater principally to "year-round" patrons and popular hotel prices will prevail.

TROOP D FORM SCOUTING PARTY

Local Guardsmen Ordered Out to Take Part in War Game.

HUNT FOR THE ENEMY

Plainfielders Now Accustomed to Camp Life Are Doing Good Work—Troopers Perkins and McGee Assigned to Stable Duty.

Mt. Gretna, Pa., July 27.—Troop D, of the First Squadron Cavalry N. G. N. J., was ordered out this afternoon to get what information it could of the truth of the report that a regiment of infantry and a squadron of cavalry from the enemy's army at Lebanon was advancing toward the camp. That this enemy was purely imaginary by no means took the fun out of the expedition; this was the first variation from close formation drilling. The troop advanced in the general direction of Lebanon, throwing ahead patrols of two men who rode up every cross-road at a gallop, climbed the hills nearby to overlook the country and galloped back with information about the topography from a military viewpoint. They got back to camp late in the day, hot, tired, dusty and enthusiastic.

The events of the morning had been in the regular routine order. Reveille at 5:15, when the troop fell in with brushes and curry-combs and cleaned and fed the horses; then mess, and at 6:45 "Boots and Saddles," the ride to the parade grounds and a three-hour mounted drill in close formation. The men carried their rifle boots attached to the saddles, and went through more difficult manoeuvres than on the days before. They have now become accustomed to camp life, and drilled excellently.

That they had pitched their tents well was put to the proof Monday night; a thunder storm brought a considerable wind and a torrent of rain that beat for several hours upon the canvas walls and roofs; but no drip came in; each squad had by orders trenched about their tent that afternoon, so that the floors were hardly dampened by the downpour.

When peals of thunder announced the coming of the storm there was fear of a stampede and the stable guards of Company D and of many of the Pennsylvania and Maryland troops were doubled; but fortunately there was not much lightning, and the horses stood quietly on the picket line.

Stable guard is one of the most trying duties of the camp life; a squad of six men take it for twenty-four hours, working in shifts of twos. They must watch the horses, keeping them quiet, untangling the halter ropes, and shifting the kickers to places where they can make the least troubles. Every now and then one gets loose, and has to be caught and brought back. That happened this afternoon, when Troopers Perkins and McGee were on stable duty; a little pie-bald pony slipped his halter and pranced off as happy as could be up the hill, and out of sight; but just as the guards had begun to saddle up to follow he came cavorting back of his own accord and stood at the picket line.

Everyone is now looking forward eagerly to Thursday and Friday when, it is understood, there is to be a big manoeuvre involving all the twenty-one troops, including the regulars, a big sham battle occupying a day and a half and a night.

SEWER BIDS AMOUNTING TO $16,236.17 ORDERED PAID

Members of the joint sewer commission, representing Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen, met in the City Council chambers last night, in their usual monthly session. Routine business occupied the attention of the members during a greater portion of the time, the subject of right-of-ways coming in for a share of the discussion. Bills amounting to $16,236.17 were filed for the month and were ordered paid.

Eugene Laing presented a statement at last night's meeting for work that he has done for the commission, the bill offered by him amounting to $1,500. This will be taken up at the next meeting, it being first necessary to ratify the items.

THE RIGHT KIND OF EDUCATION.

In a lecture which he delivered at Pittsburg University a few days ago, Dr. W. D. Lewis, who is principal of a high school in Philadelphia, sharply criticised modern education. He does not think that methods now used tend to help the younger generation to meet the conditions which the changing social and industrial life is bringing about. Dr. Lewis argued that the present requirements, except in the case of professional men, include a lot of useless Greek and Latin, which are needed to get a degree such as he himself had to have to take up his life work, but which he forgot as soon as he had the chance. For earning a living neither of these languages figure in the slightest, except in the rare cases where they are in constant demand.

The first obligation laid upon all of us is to get a living. The education we give our boys and girls is supposed to be to make the gathering of that living less difficult. But if the education doesn't do that then we have wasted their time and failed to ease the burden. The effect is to make the getting of the living really harder than it might have been if we had allowed the boys and girls to make their own choice.

The boy on the farm needs one kind of training, and the boy in the city needs another sort. The essentials are the same in both cases. It is only by looking over the marvelous speed of the changes in the last generation that one may get foundation for a good guess as to what the education of the future must be to meet the conditions that are just ahead.

Waste is to be cut down more in the future. In recent years the elimination of waste has been one of the great objects of social and industrial life. Saving material means also saving energy, for just so much energy is used up in doing things the wrong way or doing things that are unnecessary. It takes no more time nor labor, usually not so much, to do a thing, to make something the right way than the wrong. So all the energy that is consumed in making something the wrong way is sheer waste of time, material and human energy. Wasting human life is crime.

Education is that which best fits us for doing things the right way at the time needed.

It is gratifying to hear strong admiration expressed for the big trees of Plainfield and vicinity and see the tendency on the part of people generally to look after their welfare and to sorrow over their destruction. That is as it should be. A shade tree census is about to be taken in Binghamton, and this census may spread eventually to take in the entire State. The number and variety, together with the condition of trees, will be noted. It is estimated that there are 20,000 miles of streets in the cities of New York State alone which would sustain the growth of 25,000,000 shade trees, and it is asserted that these trees would be worth $100,000,000 to the property owners in increased property valuations. Aside from the value in dollars and cents in a fine tree there is something inspiring to the sight, for in the tall, well cared for tree is to be found rest for the mind as well as welcome shade for the body.

Rain and then more rain! Plenty of rain, abundance of water! There will certainly be no scarcity of it if the frequent rains continue. Springs and streams all over are running high and the ground is saturated, but it is natural to look for a dry spell before long and then, except in those communities where ample storage facilities are provided, there will be a lack of water. If only the excess of water could be husbanded against the day of need the abundant rain fall of this summer might be made to give of its benefits long after the date of the last shower is forgotten.

The Paterson Call says that one of the policemen there fell off his motorcycle and dislocated his shoulder on the same day that another member of the force heard he had fallen heir to $125,000. It's either catch-as-catch-can or catch-all-you-can in these days of surprises.

Incidentally, a careful inspection of the advertising columns nowadays forces us to the belief that one can buy a summer suit in June and live to regret his haste.

Shoots himself in R. R. station.—Headline.

Let's see, just what part of the anatomy is that, anyway?

Baptist excursion and no rain! Well, well!

SEEK COMPULSORY EDUCATION LAWS

Georgia, Mississippi and Alabama Only States Without Statute.

A race to avoid being the last State in the Union to adopt compulsory education laws is apparently underway in the Southern States, according to reports received at the United States Bureau of Education. There are now only three States without such laws, Florida having recently joined Texas and South Carolina in adopting compulsory education by legislative enactment. The three States still without laws are Georgia, Mississippi and Alabama.

The new Florida law provides that on petition of one-fourth of the electors of any special school district or county, the County Board of Education shall call an election to determine whether attendance shall be compulsory therein. A three-fifths majority vote is necessary for adoption. Children between 8 and 14 years of age are required to attend for at least 80 days each year, unless exempt because of physical or mental disability; because they live 2½ miles from a school and no transportation is provided; because their services are required for the support of a dependent family; or because their parents are unable to provide books and clothing.

By the provisions of the law the County Boards of Education are authorized to appoint attendance officers to enforce the law and to take a census of the children between 6 and 21 years of age.

Although the Florida law is thus of the optional type, it is a clear recognition of the compulsory principle and is regarded as a real step in advance.

Officials of the Bureau of Education point out that this year's compulsory educational legislation is part of a big educational advance all along the line. Nearly all the State Legislatures were in session during 1915, and much of the educational discussion that has been going on for several years crystallized into law. The Alabama Legislature has reconvened for the summer session and much school legislation will be discussed, including a compulsory education law. The fact that Alabama does not meet again for four years makes it likely that Georgia and Mississippi may get ahead of her in adopting compulsory legislation, unless action is taken this year.

In the field of compulsory education throughout the United States it is believed that the next steps will have to do with the adoption of State-wide laws where optional laws now prevail; the raising of the age limits in conformity with the best principles in child-labor legislation; and more strict enforcement of existing laws.

Rothberg Repeaters

If repeaters at Rothberg's were treated like "repeaters" at the polls, a substantial percentage of Rothberg patrons would now be in jail.

The number of Rothberg customers who return season after season for Rothberg Clothes is one of the significant features of the Rothberg business.

It is also a profound tribute to Rothberg clothes, because no man patronizes us out of sentiment, but only for the service he gets here.

And the underlying cause for this great "repeater" business is, that we put each customer's satisfaction ahead of our anxiety to make a sale.

We sell Rothberg clothes on the Rothberg theory, that if we specialize on the individual customer, the crowd will take care of itself.

We have no difficulty in holding the customers we already have—our chief problem is to get others, including perhaps you personally, to come in.

How about it?

HUDSON PROGRESSIVES SLATE FOR REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES

Jersey City, July 29.—Announcement has just been made by George L Record of his desire for one of the Republican Assembly nominations in Hudson county. This is taken to mean that Record, who was of the radical branch of the Progressive party, expects to wage war for these principals within the Republican party. The followers of Record have put forward this slate for the primaries:

For Freeholders—Former Recorder Frederick Vollmer, of West Hoboken; Charles Forst and Daniel Fitzhenry, of Jersey City.

For the Assembly—Director of Education J. Fisher Anderson, Dr George Cannon, Frederick H. Otto, Joseph P. O'Connor and George L. Record, of Jersey City; Herbert A. Currier, of Arlington, and T. William Oliver, of Weehawken.

The twelfth place on the Assembly ticket will be filled by William Goldweber, of Bayonne; Arthur Archibold, of Kearny, or Ralph Young, of Harrison.

CHARGES BOYCOTT, ASKS AN INJUNCTION AGAINST UNION

Trenton, July 29.—Harris Boorstein, of Bayonne, has obtained from Vice Chancellor Backes a rule to show cause, returnable Tuesday, why an injunction should not issue restraining the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, the district council of that body for Hudson county and William B. Hunter, its business agent, from interfering with his business. He alleges the defendants are dealing unfairly with him and that the union is using improper tactics in placing him on the unfair list.

According to the complainant, he has a large number of contracts on hand, and if the attitude of the union is continued he will lose a considerable amount of money, due to his inability to fulfill them. He contends that he is a large employer of skilled painters and that as practically all of the painters worth having are union men, his business will be a total loss unless the boycott is lifted.

Boorstein claims that the union was without just cause in insisting that men employed by him go out on strike, and that his employes were paid in accordance with the union schedule of wages. He also sets up that the men now on strike are willing to return, but that they are obligated to live up to the dictates of the union. The complainant charges that because of his efforts to defeat Hunter at an election for business agent the latter is instilling an imaginary grievance against him in the minds of members of the union.

TWO APPLICATIONS FOR WIDOWS' PENSION DENIED

Elizabeth, July 29.—Mrs. Fiomena Martino, of 180 Somerset street, North Plainfield, was denied a widows' pension for her children by Judge Connolly in the Court of Common Pleas yesterday, because her residence is in Somerset county. Mrs. Lucy Maden, a colored woman, living at 616 West Third street, Plainfield, was refused a pension for her two children because she admitted having property worth $1,500 and an insurance policy on her husband's life. Lillian V. Schorb, of 431 Watchung avenue, Plainfield, was allowed a pension of $9 monthly. Mrs. Catherine Crawley, colored, of Plainfield, was allowed $5; Mrs. Annie Boland, also of Plainfield, $18, and Mrs. Sarah Bilyeu, of Plainfield, $9.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

A program of extraordinary quality, including selected comedy and dramatic features produced by the best film makers in the country, will be exhibited this afternoon and tonight at the U. S. Astor Theatre. Tomorrow, Fritzi Scheff, long one of the popular comic opera favorites of Plainfield theatregoers, will be seen at the Astor in "Pretty Mrs. Smith," in the musical comedy version of which she appeared with much success at the Casino Theatre, New York, last season, and on tour. This affords the dainty little star a vehicle which in every way fits the charming capabilities.

While Miss Scheff, of course, dominates the action throughout this superb film, she has a supporting cast of notable screen players who are seen in several most exciting situations.

The story of "Pretty Mrs. Smith" is simple, yet most entertaining. It is rich in humor of a fine quality. There is no slap-stick comedy, no Chaplinism, but the film abounds in comedy supplied by two of the foremost screen comedians in the country.

Not the least feature of this splendid subjects is the remarkable scenic effects procured in Los Angeles. Several scenes of much grandeur help to make the photo-play one of the most beautiful ever produced.

The usual supplemental program of extraordinary quality also will be shown.

POLITICAL NOTES.

August 25—Union county Democrats hold annual outing at Witzel's Point View Grove, L. I.

August 27—Last day for filing county nomination petitions with county clerk.

September 7—First registration day.

September 21—Primary day and second registration day.

October 19—State referendum election, and third registration day.

November 2—General Election Day.

With the most conspicuous members of the late third party movement preparing to return to the G. O. P. by way of the September primaries it is considered unlikely that the survivors of the good ship Progressive will make more than a nominal fight in Union county. Many of them declare confidentially that a Progressive ticket for the Assembly is little more than a remote possibility. Edmund B. Osborne, who was a candidate for the Progressive Gubernatorial nomination two years ago and a Progressive of the never-say-die-kind, may be an aspirant for a Republican Assembly nomination in Essex. George L. Record, of Jersey City, may seek a similar nomination in Hudson, while James G. Blauvelt is already a candidate for the Republican Senate nomination in Passaic. These three men have always had a considerable following among Union Progressives and their return to the G. O. P. has had a powerful moral effect here.

Senator Peter McGinness will be renominated on the Democratic ticket in Passaic without opposition, according to the present outlook. However, with the Blauvelt forces back in the Republican camps, Democratic prospects in Passaic are not bright and that county is expected to return to its old moorings.

The Dickinson faction of the Hudson county G. O. P. will hold a meeting tonight when the making of a primary fight will be discussed. The Dickinsons will have a ticket all right. William P. Verdon will not be inactive in the primaries, either and a third primary slate may be formed by George L. Record.

Talk of union between the Republicans of Bergen and the Progressives has been repudiated by a number of the latter. Progressive State Committeeman Hiram M. Bailey, who has led the amalgamation movement, will be fired out of the State committee in favor of Harry H. Johnson, according to the Progressive County Committee.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Have you registered your guess in the great Victrola contest now being conducted at Proctor's Theatre? If not, we take this occasion to remind that the hours are now getting short before the final closing of the contest and it is wise that all guesses be registered as soon as possible.

"Young Romance," with Edith Taliaferro playing the leading role, is the feature film for this evening. This is a photo-play with a strong cast, excellent settings and a magnificent story of how cupid conquers over all pretenses. See this picture, and you behold a drama of romantic youth that cannot be surpassed upon the screen.

An exceptionally strong feature has been secured for tomorrow afternoon and night in "Dr. Rameau," in which such stars as Frederick Perry, star of "On Trial;" Jean Sothern, Stuart Holmes, Dorothy Bernard and George Nilson appear. The story is that of Pierre Rameau, the son of a poor gardener, becomes, through a natural aptitude for the medical profession, the foremost physician and surgeon in Paris. Surely, a wonderful picture without a parallel of its kind.

H. B. Walthall and Consuelo Bailey appear Saturday in that vivid, vital, thrilling and true picture of New York's underworld entitled, "The Gangsters," the smashing four-part dramatic masterpiece. This photo play is, undoubtedly, as tensely dramatic film you have ever seen, and without question the most powerful photo-play ever produced by any company. "The Gangsters" is a masterpiece, a four-part film positively electric from start to finish, and is a veritable dramatization of terrible truths. It explains the existence of those New York "gangs," which corrupt the young men and women of the metropolis, and are more ruthless in their riotous disregard for law than even the infamous Apaches of Paris. "The Gangsters," however, is no mere attack on evil. It demonstrates not only the social crimes as they exist, but also the road to reform—higher ideals and escape from the foul and crowded tenements of the great cities.

DEP'T MAKES JOBS PERMANENT.

Trenton, July 29.—The State Department of Taxes and Assessments has decided to make permanent the appointment of Irvine E Maguire, of Camden, as secretary; Frank O'Connor, of West Orange, as clerk and field secretary, and Louis Foucht, of Trenton, as chief engineer. When the new department organized under the new law the officials mentioned received temporary appointments until a further consideration of the positions. A question arose among the members of the department relative to the retention of both Mr. Maguire and Mr. O'Connor and the matter was taken up with the attorney general. The legal department advised that the legality of appointing both men was proper.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

There is an agitation on foot among certain City League teams to appoint a press agent for each outfit. If the press agents are of the same calibre as some of the scorers we forsee some tall squabbling from the men behind the bushes. The hammer is all right but the harm comes in the way it is used.

While the State copper baseball league appears to be plying merrily along there has been no move as yet around these diggin's to stir up a Plainfield title contender. Only another instance in which a Queen City faction is perfectly satisfied to allow rival aggregations to romp away with an athletic title.

Supervisor Wriston has the right idea in promoting juvenile baseball. Keeping two leagues in operation, one for the beginners and the other for the advanced ballers, is the surest way to produce first-class talent. In our opinion the Parker Field league activities have done more for Plainfield's baseball status than any other thing.

Columbus Club court bugs have taken the initiative in talking baseball this season. Those at the helm are of the opinion that an early start would mean success and the policy does not appear to be such a bad one at that. But how about football.

Giving the Holy Cross football roster the once-over brings out the fact that a majority of the red and white pigskin chasers are Columbus Club members.

Organized baseball devotees are being given the opportunity of their lives to lay bets this year on the probable title winner. The wiseacres admit that it is the closest race staged in years and there's many a fan in this village who is willing to scatter even money on the Giants' chances of copping the rag.

Earl Pierson's "come-back" as a City Leaguer should be the object of considerable interest during the remainder of the season. Pierson is a capable organizer and should do considerable toward patching up the First Baptist team's differences.

Have you noticed how many of our would-be semi-pros are lying around idle these days. The City League has certainly put a crimp in the paid week-end game around this burg and it's a case of taking the fun offered or rotting away.

Even in the metropolitan section the week-end semi-pro sport isn't what it uster wuz. All managers are complaining of slim attendances and still slimmer bank accounts.

These local managers are laying a careful campaign that will bring Jack Martin, Cliff Randolph and Warry McLaughlin together in the City League before the season is over. McLaughlin has already made his debut while Martin and Randolph will be through with the paid game before the Plainfield circuit has wound up.

AMATEUR BALL JINGLES

"Hub" Stine, the Springfield College lad, has not been doing anything remarkable along baseball lines this season. "Hub" is performing with the Baptists in the City League and is a heavy hitting but has not been living up to his reputation during the past few weeks. In the field his work has been fair, but he has been changed around so much that it is next to impossible for him to get used to one position. The addition of a couple of new players will eliminate the shifting and better work can be expected of the big fellow.

"Wren" Townley has been handling the ball well at third for the Firsts, his great wing enabling him to field balls that other men would never get near. At the bat he has not been doing wonders but he is there in the emergency. Townley has had quite a little experience in fast company, considering, of course, that the "Canadians" are fast.

The umpiring has been of the best sort, the work of Coriell, Hansen and Malang being unusually good. Very few complaints have been made against the decisions they have handed down. Their ability to enforce the law on the field is to be commended.

Denitzio will be seen in a Tab uniform next Saturday and will fill in a hole that has been enlarging itself around third base for the past three weeks.

The Mullin family is well supplied with ball players. With Tommie working wonders in Amboy, Billy jumping into the fray once in a while, Frank handling the hot ones in the playground leagues and Vincent stabbing the stiff ones for the Plainfield Juniors, the Mullin baseball bee has gathered together plenty of valuable honey.

Alec MacDonald is thinking about trying the "come-back" stunt. He tried the Junior League and found that he was too fast for them. Then he joined the married men's corps and easily kept up the pace they set. Now it's the City League for Alec, maybe.

The Senior League will be launched at Parker Field in a short time if things continue as they are running now.

The married and single men of the Tabs are thinking about getting together again. Some Charley Chaplin comedy was pulled off last Sunday, but some of the Ford Sterling kind is carded for the next time they meet. "Spot" Hines has purchased running shoes, so the report says.

The Yale baseball team is a thing of the past, if the report submitted is to be believed. The reason for the "graduation" of the team is declared to be their great ability. We think that the fact that their twirler is "fair" does not stamp the whole outfit as too classy for the rest of the boys.

Dan Randolph is due for a little notice. His endeavors around first have met with the approval of all and his work with the stick, while not amazingly heavy, has helped swell the score on many occasions. His leadership of the team alone has kept them together when the despair of defeat after defeat almost took the heart out of them.

NEW PLAYERS MAY MEAN SHAKEUP IN TAB'S TEAM

Frank "Kid" Brennan, the little shortstop and pitcher of the Tabs, is about the heaviest clouter on the team, although Jim Scott has the best average. Scott's clouting has fallen off during the past three weeks, while that of Brennan is just as it was at the start. Brennan has clouted the pill for a percentage of .310 during all of the games this season, City League and Sunday contests included.

Denitzio has now been signed and Frank will go to the outfield, McCarty giving his third base job to Denitzio and taking second, allowing Geary to go to short. McCarty has been hitting poorly, batting around 186. Jim Scott has the big average of .338.

MARRIED AND SINGLE MEN WILL HOOK UP ONCE MORE

Not content with the victory they annexed last Sunday at the expense of the single men, the married members of the local Tab Society have challenged the single section to a return match to be played this Sunday at the same spot. The single fellows have not as yet done anything definite towards accepting or rejecting the challenge, but it has been learned from good authority that they will be on hand to participate in the argument provided their only request is granted. They want at least one of the two umpires that are to be employed to be single. They claim that the two men who handed down the decisions last Sunday were "attached" and gave all the breaks to their fellow "unfortunates."

Albert La Rock is taking care of the publicity business for the married men and "Tacks" O'Keefe is doing the same for the youthful contingent. In the regular Sunday match the Elizabeth Eagles will tackle Jim Moynihan's youths and Jack Denny will attend to the twirling for the locals.

If your property is really "worthwhile," make that clear in your classified advertising—and you'll sell it.

JACK COOMBS FAVORS GOLF FOR ALL BASEBALL PLAYERS

"I cannot agree with these men who say golf is bad for a ball player," says Jack Coombs. "It helps him more than an ordinary man realizes. One of the greatest assets of the game is absolute control of oneself, in which confidence plays an important part. Thus, the mind being under control, one thinks not of the importance resting upon him. There only is one thought—succeed.

"It is true the swing in golf is far different from that used in baseball. There are few ball players, however, who do not bring that stroke of their profession into golf. If you will look back to the games I pitched for the Athletics on Mondays you will notice from the box scores that my batting was far superior to that on other days. I played golf every Sunday, rain or shine, and as I often said to the boys, 'That ball looked as big as a pumpkin.' Whether golf playing the day before had anything to do with it or not I dare not say. Being a bug on golf, my own opinion is formed.

"Associations on the golf links are far different from those formed in other walks of life.

"During the world's series of 1910, Mr. Plank, Ed's father, came from Gettysburg to see the games. He lived with us during his visit. The afternoon before the first game against the Cubs, Bender, Ed and I played golf. We came home, went to bed early and did not wake up until 8:30 the next morning. Upon arising I asked Mr. Plank how he had enjoyed his rest.

"'Never slept a wink,' he replied. 'Been up since 4:30 o'clock. Was too nervous to sleep. How could you and Ed snore so when the series begins today?'

"I had not given the importance of the baseball game a thought. I was thinking when I went to sleep how easily Ed and I could have beaten Bender at golf had we played with a little more confidence."

"BOBBIE" WON LOCAL FARM'S TROPHY AT HORSE SHOW

The Long Branch Horse Show got a good start yesterday, the attendance being up to the normal and the entry far above the average. The affair, which is the twenty-second run off by the horse fanciers of that section of Jersey, has a local touch to it. In the event rated as Class 15, the first prize was donated by the Donnybrook Farms, of this city.

The prize was contested for yesterday and was open to horses over 14.2 and not exceeding 15.2 hands high, who have never won a first prize in any recognized show. Miss Colgate's "Bobbie" carried off the honors.

MARRIED MEN TO MEET BACHELORS IN BALL GAME

Comedy on the baseball field has taken a firm grasp on followers of the sport in this vicinity. The Tabs staged a humorous affair and now the residents of Dunellen are arranging to do the same. The married and single men of the little burg are going to don their old togs and parade out to the "battlefield" Saturday, prepared to do their worst.

The exhibition is to be given for the benefit of the Dunellen Boy Scouts, many of whom are excellent players themselves. The fact that the older "lads" are going to furnish the attraction goes to show that it's comedy, not baseball, that the fans of today want.

Self-interest induces you to wate the classified ads.

PLAINFIELDERS WILL TRY NEWARK STOCK

Invasion of Jersey's Metropolis to Be Made Next Sunday.

The Plainfield A. A. will take a trip to Newark, Sunday, to enter into an argument with the Meadowbrooks of that place. The Meadowbrooks are at present contending with the Ironsides for the championship of the city of Newark and are rated as the fastest semi-professional team in the State. It was with some difficulty that Manager Jones arranged the match, the manager of the Newark team having had a little experience with a local team before. Last year a nine composed of youngsters attempted to take the measure of the Essex county clan and was badly beaten. This fact made it hard for the local lads to secure a date.

Mike McFadden, the Bound Brook hurler, and Lou Dixon will compose the local battery. Harry Jennings, the Rutgers College pitcher, may be secured as a relief man. Jack Garretson will tackle first, with Tony Denitzio on second. Benny Rosenson intends stopping them around short while either Johnny Gray or "Chet" Harriman will amble around third. The outfield will be composed of Jones, Joe Alberts and Miller. Jimmy Creelin, the Meadowbrook manager, will use Joe Durkee or Huntley on the slab and his brother, Jack Creelin, as catcher.

If the Plainfielders put up a good showing with the Meadowbrooks they will have a chance to tackle the Ironsides, but if they fail to put a good team on the field they not only will do themselves and the Newark management an injustice, but they will make it hard for any other local manager to secure a date with any Newark team in the future.

The game Sunday will take place at Park View Oval at 3:30 in the afternoon. Those who take a Main Line car should ask for a transfer to the Hawthorne avenue line and get off at Hawthorne and Elizabeth avenues. The South Side Oval grounds are located at this spot and the game is not to be played at these grounds. The site for this game is a few blocks further on.

ROD AND REEL

Blackfish are being landed daily at Sea Bright and Far Rockaway and those captured are of unusual weight. One caught at Sea Bright yesterday weighed sixteen pounds and one taken at Rockaway tipped the scales at eighteen pounds.

Salt water fishing has been poor during the past week owing to the fact that there is a full moon in its glory. With the full moon comes a high tide which washes quite a little food down to the seas and this, sinking, provides the fish with so much to eat that they do not bother to nip at worms or other bait that are hopping through the water. The fish are enabled to see the great amount of food by the light of the moon. However, as soon as the tide is restored to its normal action, the fishing in salt water will be as good as ever.

The weakfishing in Raritan Bay has been a bit backward, due to the unsettled weather. It will take a week of steady hot weather to put the fish in a biting humor. Fair catches have been made right along, but it is necessary to fish hard for the weaks, and the man who keeps his boat in one spot and fishes right through a tide is more apt to pick up a good mess than the fellow who is continually moving around for a better spot. Most of the catches that have been made recently are odd fish that are picked up right along throughout the day. Good results are being had at the Middle Grounds and at the North Channel.

Pickerel of unusual size have been caught in Cranberry Lake during the past few days. One of the fish caught measured twenty-seven inches in length and was unusually large in girth.

In Maryland striped bass fishing has fallen off considerably during the past month, due to the muddy condition of the waters. The same state of affairs exists in this section of the country. However, bass fishing has been very good, catches of thirty and forty being registered daily.

Crabs are running all along the Jersey coast. The nearest place where fairly good crabbing is to be had is off Elizabethport. Take the trolley to the 'Port and you can hire row boats there. Another good spot close by is off Acker's place at Sewaren. The Perth Amboy high-speed trolley will take you to Sewaren, and a short walk will bring you to the boathouse. The boathouse-keeper will point out the best spots. Excellent crabbing is also being had in Shark River, between Avon and Belmar.

SPORT BRIEFS

The Pittsburgh Nationals have released Outfielder Duncan to the Grand Rapids club of the Central League.

Coleman Madden won the second block of points in his three-cushion billiard match with John Doyle, of Detroit, at Dayle's Academy, New York, last night.

William M. Johnston, the clever California tennis player, was defeated by N. W. Niles in fourth round of their match at Longwod, Mass., yesterday.

R. Norris Williams, 2d, the national champion, won his singles match from W. P. Gardner, Jr., the Massachusetts champion, in straight sets.

Another long distance bike race will be held Saturday night at the Sheepshead Bay Velodrome.

Maurice E. McLoughlin, rated as one of the world's best tennis players, will try for the Achelis cup at Sea-Bright in annual invitation tennis tournament which starts Monday, August 9.

BRITT MARTIN TO TACKLE THE BOUND BROOK OUTFIT

Britt Martin's Saurer B. B. C. will clash with the Bound Brook Bees, Sunday, and the "Old Reliable" Warry is slated to pitch for the locals with Eddie Bergen doing the receiving stunt. Speely and Teeling will form the Bees' battery as McFadden the regular hurler, has agreed to perform in Newark. For the locals Hirsch will cover first; Martin, second; third; with Gleason, Wilson and Betzenberger in the outfield. The fact that Martin intends using Warry on Sunday indicates that either Gleason or Johnny Dixon will hurl against the Baptist Saturday.

The Bees are out to win and expect to have little trouble in so doing as they handed Harry Jennings a terrible trimming last Sunday.

RANDOLPH TO WORK.

Cliff Randolph will hurl for the Perth Amboy Pacers against Joe Burns' Tabs, of Elizabeth, at the latter place Sunday. The last time Cliff lined up against the Betsytown boys he shut them out. Jimmy Dooley, who was the Newark Ironsides' hurler last year, will oppose the local lad.

FITZ TO CHALLENGE CHAMPION WILLARD

Dunellenite May Oppose Jess or Johnson in Limited Round Affair.

Freckle-faced and battle-scarred Bob Fitzsimmons still retains the fight fever although he is fifty-two years of age. "I think I am the best boxer in America yet," he declared to a reporter last night.

Bob is going to South America to open a boxing school and, according to rumor his leading backer in the enterprise is William R. Hurst. According to Fitz, since the Johnson-Willard go in Havana the sporting public of all of South America are crazed over the fighting game. Single boxing lessons, it is said, brings $20 a lesson.

"I'm fifty-two years old," declared Fitz, last night, "but I still believe I can put Jess Willard or Jack Johnson out in a ten-round bout. Charles Weinert is a game lad and I expect to make him champion some day."

Fitz declared he has a blanket offer from the Havana Sporting Club to box Jack Johnson or Jess Willard in a limited round affair during Christmas week. "If I get in the ring with either of them I'll show them I'm not a hasbeen."

FRACTURES ARM WHEN THROWN FROM HORSE

Milton Schenck, the nine-year-old son of George T. Schenck, the Dunellen grocer, was thrown from his father's horse yesterday afternoon fracturing his arm near the elbow. The lad was playing in the yard, and seeing Lester Bowlby, one of his father's clerks, preparing the animal's stall, entered the barn. He was told by Bowlby not to go near the horse, but disregarded the warning.

The horse became frightened when Schenck jumped on its back and making a plunge threw the lad off. He landed on the floor of the stall when his cries attracted the attention of Bowlby who, upon examination, discovered that the boy's arm was injured. Dr. G. W. Endicott was summoned and found that the arm was fractured. He set the bone and the youth is now resting comfortably.

WAR NEWS

been checked again, though their advance following the lull of a few days ago has brought them nearer Warsaw.

The German drive toward Wilna depends for effectiveness upon the success of the movement against the Lublin-Cholm-Ivangorod railway. The Russians appear to be making good their defence of that line, and as long as it is open there is a chance of holding Warsaw.

Fresh troops are opposing the Russians south of Nesielsk, between Putlusk and Novo Georgievsk. The enemy has captured Goworowo, east of Rozan. The Germans continue a slow but steady advance toward the Bug and the Warsaw-Petrograd railroad. If they reach that railway it will probably mean the evacuation of Warsaw by means of the Lublin-Cholm line.

The Belgian steamer, M. Princess Marie Jose, was torpedoed by a German submarine and sunk today. Four persons were killed.

Rome, July 29.—A despatch from Sofia says that the diplomatic representatives of the Sublime Port have requested Bulgaria to reopen the negotiations for the cession of the Dedeagatch Railway and the Turkish territory through which it runs to Bulgaria. The report that the agreement had been concluded, the despatch says, was incorrect, but Turkey still hopes to effect the pact with Bulgaria.

Grismby, England, July 29.—The trawler Dobey has been torpedoed in the North Sea. Her crew of nine men were lost.

New York, July 29.—The Evening Sun today prints a despatch from Berlin in which it is stated that Ambassador Gerard feels that the situation growing out of the differences between the United States and Germany is extremely serious. The despatch says: "Mr. Gerard, who was in the closest touch with developments both here and at home, made strong efforts in the direction of an agreement between the two Governments. He even went to Washington, following the despatch of the last German note, several proposals for a compromise, pointing out the possibilities of an amicable understanding."

HANSEN—PETERSON.

Miss Etta Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Peterson, and Hans Neilsen Hansen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Hansen, both of Plainfield, were married Saturday evening at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel, officiated in the presence of a small company of relatives and friends. The couple will reside in Plainfield.

RESTORE BAYONNE TO REGULAR OFFICIALS

Bayonne, July 29—Order having been restored in Bayonne the sheriff's forces were withdrawn from the city today and the administration of its affairs formally turned over to the Commissioners. The ninety-nine guards placed under arrest yesterday will be arraigned today in Jersey City when an effort will be made to determine if possible if any of them fired the shots which resulted in the death and wounding of the strikers.

Under Sheriff James H. Clark, in the absence of his chief, Sheriff Eugent Kinkead, lifted the embargo of the "riot act" and turned the city over to its local authorities. Chief Reilly, who has had to take a subordinate position under the riot act administration by the sheriff, was again in full charge of his men.

All the policement from the other towns of Hudson county who had been on volunteer duty under the sheriff left for their homes early last evening, and all the aides in plain clothes went to the courthouse and turned in their clubs. During the strike not one of the sheriffs used a club or a gun. When there was need for that the Boulevard police did it.

Sheriff Kinkead, worn to a state of collapse bodily by his long task, was taken away by friends yesterday and turned over to the care of his wife. Mrs. Kinkead and the sheriff motored to Deal, where the sheriff is resting.

The sheriff's office is in receipt of may telegrams and letters cangratulating Kinkead on his energetic handling of the strike and the practical way he settled it.

CITY PLAYGROUNDS PROVIDE FOR MANY

Playground work in Plainfield at the present time is enjoying a more general popularity that it has at any time since it was instituted here on an organized basis four years ago. The good the four schoolyard centers and the main center on Randolph road has done among the juvenile set of the city cannot be estimated and the effects of the establishment of these playgrounds is only now beginning to make itself felt.

In the Irving, St. Mary's, Franklin and Bryant schoolyards hundreds of children are being catered to daily during the morning and afternoon sessions. Competent instructors are teaching the children to combine work and play, and although it is the opinion of the youngster that he visits the playground merely for recreation, he is being given an opportunity to learn many useful things which he unknowingly grasps. The attendance figures at all five play-yards this year have soared above the records of previous years and the scope of work has been increased two-fold. Many innovations have been introduced by the teachers who took up their work this year for the first time, while those instructors in charge last year have re-established their former routine with many additional features.

The work is all being accomplished on a systematic basis, some of the classifications being made by the supervisors who made a college study of dealing with this class of recreation seeker. Aside from the recreative games the boys as well as the girls are given personal instruction in sewing, manufacturing useful articles from paper and other materials; dancing, singing and modeling. Many mothers have taken advantage of the playgrounds as a place to send their children during the day and the centers cater to all colors, nationalities and from toddling infants to boys and girls of sixteen years.

That the playgrounds could be put to still another use is the opinion of many Plainfielders. It has been urged that the city open the yards at night so that the tired factoryite and servant may have a place to sit in the open, many of the poorer class at the present time being unable to enjoy even the comforts of a front porch. It is the opinion of many that benches should be provided in the playgrounds and that they should be opened from 7 to 11 o'clock to older persons.

MRS. LUELLA DUNBAR.

Mrs. Luella Dunbar, of Cherry street, South Bound Brook, who had been a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital since July 9, died at that institution early this morning. Mrs. Dunbar was fifty-two years of age. She leaves a family of adult children.

SCIENTISTS "SPLIT" INTO TWO FACTIONS

Every Effort is Made to Keep the Cause of the Trouble "Under Cover."

Reports relative to a "split" in the ranks of Christian Science believers in Plainfield have been circulated during the past week, but all efforts to secure an authoritative statement from leaders of either side have proven futile. That a difference exists is well known, but the nature of the disagreement is being kept "under cover."

When approached by a Daily Press reporter leaders of the respective factions have been non-committal, explaining that they did not wish to have the matter reach the newspapers or gain any publicity. No one has been found who will shoulder the responsibility of spokesman and in view of the fact that the matter is purely a personal one with members of the faith all efforts to learn the cause and steps already taken have been unavailing.

Last night one of the divisions met at the home of Mrs. George R. Boston to take part in the usual Wednesday night a devotional service. For sometime past the Scientists have been holding their meetings in Mrs. Boston's home on Duer street, but it was said today that permanent headquarters have now been secured.

One of the leaders of the Scientist faith admitted to a Daily Press reporter today that the membership of this religious body in Plainfield was large and that there has been a growing need for more commodious quarters for sometime past.

Warrenville.

William S. Smith, manager of Long Acre Farm, was severely injured yesterday by a kick from a horse. Dr. Anthony was called and found it necessary to remove Mr. Smith to Muhlenberg Hospital. At that institution it was found he had three ribs broken. All of Mr. Smith's many friends wish for his speedy recovery.

The festival of the Coontown Ladies' Aid, which was to have been held last night, was postponed on account of the weather until tonight.

Miss May Root, of Newark, is spending her vacation with Jessie Cooper, of Hill Side Farm.

Mrs. William Mulford Darling, of New York city, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Albert, of Coontown, has returned to her home.

Mrs. Arthur Williams entertained Mrs. Emmit and Miss Estelle Williams, of New York, yesterday.

Henry Thake, of Albany, is visiting Ted Cooper.

TRINITY FESTIVAL TONIGHT.

Weather permitting, the ice cream and cake festival of the consistory of Trinity Reformed church will be held tonight on the vacant plot at East Front and Church streets, owned by Floyd T. Woodhull, who has granted the use of the grounds for the purpose. Home-made candy will also be for sale, and a program of popular and classical music will be rendered by the Dutch Arms Band.

AGAIN DEFEAT VILLA.

Washington, July 29.—The Carranza agency here today received a despatch from Vera Cruz, saying that General Gonzales had defeated the Villa Flying Column near Pachuca, after a six-day battle. The Villiastas are in full flight.

JULY'S HEAVY RAINFALL.

The normal rainfall for July is 5.40 inches, and already the records show that 6.93 inches have fallen. Only .07 of an inch more are needed to bring the rainfall up to 7 inches, an unusual amount.

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

G. O. P. COMMITTEE FAVOR C. M. HAIGHT

Middlesex Republicans Endorse New Market Man for Freeholder Nomination.

Clarence M. Haight, of New Market, was the favored candidate for freeholder at a meeting of the Middlesex County Republican Committee held at New Brunswick last night, when there was a general discussion of party affairs in the county. Among other candidates mentioned for this office is Wilson Frederick, of Dunellen, but the New Market man now seems to be the strongest possibility for the nomination.

Justice Rene P. F. von Minden, also of New Market, has been mentioned for the State Senatorial nomination, no official announcement to the contrary having been made as yet. It was owing to the fact that this end of the county felt that it was entitled to more political patronage than it had been receiving that the county committee has been induced to consider aspirants from that section. Last night's meeting was an enthusiastic and harmonious one and encouraging reports were received from all parts of the county.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Gossips Awake.

BERRIE was frightened for Wayland, and as she thought of the long ride still before them she wrung her hands. "Oh, what shall I do? What shall I do?" she moaned.

Instantly smitten into shame, into manlier mood, he said: "Don't worry about me. Please don't. I can ride. I'm feeling better. You must not weaken. Please forgive my selfish complaints. I'm done! You'll never hear it again. Come! Let us go on. I can ride."

"If we can reach Miller's ranch"—

"I can ride to your ranch!" he declared, and rose with such new found resolution that she stared at him in wonder.

He was able to smile. "I've had my little crying spell. I've relieved my heart of its load. I didn't mean to agonize you. It was only a slump." He put his hand to his head. "I must be a comical figure."

His sudden reversal to cheer was a little alarming to her, but at length she perceived that he had in truth mastered his depression, and, bringing up the horses, she saddled them and helped him to mount. "If you get tired or feel worse tell me, and we'll go into camp," she urged as they were about to start.

"You keep going till I give the sign," he replied, and his voice was so firm and clear that her own sunny smile came back. "I don't know what to make of you," she said. "I reckon you must be a poet."

It was dark when they reached the village, but Wayland declared his ability to go on, although his wounded head was throbbing with fever and he was clinging to the pommel of his saddle; so Berrie rode on.

Mrs. McFarlane, hearing the horses on the bridge, was at the door and received her daughter with wondering question, while the stable hands, quick to detect an injured man, hurried to lift Norcross down from his saddle.

"What's the matter?" repeated Mrs. McFarlane.

"He fell and struck his head on a stone," Berea hastily explained. "Take the horses, boys! Mother and I will look out for Mr. Norcross."

The men obeyed her and fell back, but they were consumed with curiosity, and their glances irritated the girl. "Slip the packs at once," she insisted.

With instant sympathy her mother came to her aid in supporting the wounded, weary youth indoors, and as he stretched out on the couch in the sitting room he remarked with a faint, ironic smile, "This beats any bed of balsam boughs."

"Where's your father?" asked Mrs. McFarlane of her daughter.

"He's over on the Ptarmigan. I've a powerful lot to tell you, mother, but not now; we must look after Wayland. He's nearly done up, and so am I."

Mrs. McFarlane winced a little at her daughter's use of Norcross' first name, but she said nothing further at the moment, although she watched Berrie closely while she took off Wayland's shoes and stockings and rubbed his icy feet. "Get him something hot as quick as you can!" she commanded, and Mrs. McFarlane obeyed without a word.

Gradually the tremor passed out of his limbs and a delicious sense of warmth, of safety, stole over him, and he closed his eyes in the comfort of her presence and care. "Rigorous business this life of the pioneer," he said with mocking inflection. "I think I prefer a place in the lumber trust."

"Don't talk," she said. Then, with a rush of tender remorse: "Why didn't you tell me to stop? I didn't realize that you were so tired. We could have stopped at the Springs."

"I didn't know how tired I was till I got here. Gee," he said boyishly, "that doorknob at the back of my head is red-hot! You're good to me," he added humbly.

She hated to have him resume that tone of self depreciation, and, kneeling to him, she kissed his cheek and laid her head beside his. "You're splendid," she insisted. "Nobody could be braver, but you should have told me you were exhausted. You fooled me with your cheerful answers."

He accepted her loving praise, her clasping arms, as a part of the rescue from the darkness and pain of the long ride, careless of what it might bring to him in the future. He ate his toast and drank his coffee and permitted the women to lead him to his room, and then being alone he crept into his bed and fell instantly asleep.

Berrie and her mother went back to the sitting room, and Mrs. McFarlane closed the door behind them. "Now tell me all about it," she said in the tone of one not to be denied.

The story went along very smoothly till the girl came to the second night in camp beside the lake. There her voice faltered, and the reflective look in the mother's eyes deepened as she learned that her daughter had shared her tent with the young man. "It was the only thing to do, mother," Berrie bravely said. "It was cold and wet outside, and you know he isn't very strong, and his teeth were chattering he was so chilled. I know it sounds strange down here, but up there in the woods in the storm what I did seemed right and natural. You know what I mean, don't you?"

"You're splendid," she insisted. "Nobody could be braver."

"Yes, I understand. I don't blame you—only—if others should hear of it"—

"But they won't. No one knows of our being alone there except Tony and father."

"Are you sure? Doesn't Mrs. Belden know?"

"I don't think so—not yet."

Mrs. McFarlane's nervousness grew.

"I wish you hadn't gone on this trip. If the Beldens find out you were alone with Mr. Norcross they'll make much of it. It will give them a chance at your father." Her mind turned upon another point. "When did Mr. Norcross get his fall?"

"On the way back." Here Berrie hesitated again. "I don't like to tell you, mother, but he didn't fall; Cliff jumped him and tried to kill him."

The mother doubted her ears. "Cliff did? How did he happen to meet you?"

Berrie was quick to answer. "I don't know how he found out we were on the trail. I suppose the old lady phoned him. Anyhow, while we were camped for noon yesterday"—her face flamed again at thought of that tender, beautiful moment when they were resting on the grass—"while we were at our lunch he came tearing down the hill on that big bay horse of his and took a flying jump at Wayland. As Wayland went down he struck his head on a stone. I thought he was dead, and I was paralyzed for a second. Then I flew at Cliff and just about choked the life out of him. I'd have ended him right there if he hadn't let go."

Mrs. McFarlane, looking upon her daughter in amazement, saw on her face the shadow of the deadly rage which had burned in her heart as she clinched young Belden's throat.

"What then? What happened then?"

"He let go, you bet." Her smile came back.

"When did this take place?"

"Yesterday about 2. Of course Wayland couldn't ride, he was so dizzy and kind o' confused, and so I went into camp right there at timber line. Along about sunset Nash came riding up from this side and insisted on staying to help me, so I let him."

Mrs. McFarlane's tense attitude relaxed. "Nash is not the kind that tattles. I'm glad he turned up."

"And this morning I saddled and came down."

"Did Nash go on?"

"Yes. Daddy was waiting for him, so I let him go along."

"It's all sad business," groaned Mrs. McFarlane, "and I can see you're keeping something back. How did Cliff happen to know just where you were, and what started you back without your father?"

For the first time Berrie showed signs of weakness and distress. "Why, you see, Alec Belden and Mr. Moore were over there to look at some timber, and old Marm Belden and that Moore girl went along. I suppose they sent word to Cliff, and I presume that Moore girl put him on our trail. Leastwise that's the way I figure it out. That's the worst of the whole business." She admitted this with darkened brow. "Mrs. Belden's tongue is hung in the middle and loose at both ends—and that Moore girl is spiteful mean." She could not keep the contempt out of her voice.

"Oh, I wish you hadn't gone!" exclaimed the worried mother.

"It can't be helped now, and it hasn't done me any real harm. It's all in the day's work anyhow. I've always gone with daddy before, and this trip isn't going to spoil me. The boys all know me, and they will treat me fair."

"Yes, but Mr. Norcross is an outsider, a city man. They will all think evil of him on that account."

"I know. That's what troubles me. No one will know how fine and considerate he was. Mother, I've never known any one like him. He's a poet! I don't care what people say of me if only they will be just to him. They've got to treat him right," she added firmly.

"Did he speak to you—are you engaged?"

Her head drooped. "Not really engaged, mother, but he told me how much he liked me, and—it's all right, mother, I know it is. I'm not fine enough for him, but I'm going to try to change my ways so he won't be ashamed of me."

Mrs. McFarlane's face cleared. "He surely is a fine young fellow and can be trusted to do the right thing. Well, we might as well go to bed. We can't settle anything till your father gets home," she said.

Wayland rose next morning free from dizziness and almost free from pain, and when he came out of his room his expression was cheerful. "I feel as if I'd slept a week, and I'm hungry. I don't know why I should be, but I am."

Mrs. McFarlane met him with something very intimate, something almost maternal in her look, but her words were as few and as restrained as ever. He divined that she had been talking with Berrie and that a fairly clear understanding of the situation had been reached. That this understanding involved him closely he was aware, but nothing in his manner acknowledged it.

She did not ask any questions, believing that sooner or later the whole story must come out. The fact that Alona Moore and Mrs. Belden knew that Berrie had started back on Thursday with young Norcross made it easy for the villagers to discover that she had not reached the ranch till Saturday. "What could Joe have been thinking of to allow them to go?" she said. Mr. Nash's presence in the camp must be made known, but then there is Cliff's assault upon Mr. Norcross. Can that be kept secret too? And so while the young people chatted the troubled mother waited in fear, knowing that in a day or two the countryside would be aflame with accusation.

A long day's rest, a second night's sleep, set Wayland on his feet. He came to breakfast quite gay. "Barring the hickory nut on the back of my head," he explained, "I'm feeling fine, almost ready for another expedition. I may make a ranger yet."

Berrie, though equally gay, was not so sure of his ability to return to work. "I reckon you'd better go easy till daddy gets back, but if you feel like it we'll ride up to the postoffice this afternoon."

"I want to start right in to learn to throw that hitch, and I'm going to practice with an ax till I can strike twice in the same place. This trip was an eye opener. Great man I'd be in a windfall, wouldn't I?"

He was persuaded to remain very quiet for another day, and part of it was spent in conversation with Mrs. McFarlane, whom he liked very much, and an hour or more in writing a long letter wherein he announced to his father his intention of going into the forest service. "I've got to build up a constitution," he said, "and I don't know of a better place to do it in. Besides, I'm beginning to be interested in the scheme. I like the supervisor. I'm living in his house at the present time, and I'm feeling contented and happy, so don't worry about me."

He was indeed quite comfortable, save when he realized that Mrs. McFarlane was taking altogether too much for granted in their relationship. It was delightful to be so watched over, so waited upon, so instructed. "But where is it all leading me?" he continued to ask himself, and still that wall of reserve troubled and saddened Berrie.

On the fourth morning the phone rang, and the squawking voice of Mrs. Belden came over the wire—"I wanted to know if Berrie and her feller got home all right?"

"Yes, they arrived safely."

The old woman chuckled. "Last I see of Cliff he was hot on their trail—looked like he expected to take a hand in that expedition. Did he overtake 'em?"

"I don't hear very well. Where are you?"

"I'm at the Scott ranch. We're coming round 'the horn' today."

"Where is the supervisor?"

"He headed across yesterday. Say, Cliff was mad as a hornet when he started. I'd like to know what happened"—

Mrs. McFarlane hung up the receiver. The old woman's nasty chuckle was intolerable, but in silencing the phone Mrs. McFarlane was perfectly aware that she was not silencing the gossip; on the contrary, she was certain that the Beldens would leave a trail of poisonous comment from the Ptarmigan to Bear Tooth. It was all sweet material for them.

Berrie wanted to know who was speaking, and Mrs. McFarlane replied, "Mrs. Belden wanted to know if you got through all right."

"She said something else, something to heat you up," persisted the girl who perceived her mother's agitation. "What did she say—something about me—and Cliff?"

The mother did not answer, for Wayland entered the room at the moment, but Berrie knew that traducers were already busy with her affairs. "I don't care anything about old lady Belden," she said later, "but I hate to have that Moore girl telling lies about me."

Of Interest to Women and the Home

"My," she cried, "what a lovely pig!"

Daddy's Bedtime Story—How the Animals Held a Beauty Show.

"I THINK the beauty contest that the animals held was the funniest thing I ever heard of," said daddy.

"How was that, daddy?" asked Jack, while Evelyn cuddled close to him to hear the evening story.

"Well," said daddy, "the barnyard animals once held a beauty contest—that is, it was a contest in this way: It was a dispute about which of these creatures was the prettiest. And I don't suppose it would be settled yet if it were not for the decision of the farmer's child.

"'I am about the handsomest creature I see around here,' remarked the horse, with a hateful air of superiority over the other animals. 'See my coat, how sleek it is. You can almost see your face in it. And I am in the best of form, not an ounce too much or an ounce too little. See how gracefully my neck bends and how my dark and rolling eye glows. Oh, I am a handsome fellow!'

"'Huh!' remarked the cow. 'I think there are creatures more beautiful than you are. You don't have to look any farther than right here either. Now, I think I am a pretty good looking lady. See how nice and polished my horns are and how massive my neck is. And, speaking of dark and rolling eyes, your eyes are no more dark and rolling than my own.'

"Then the dog barked in derision. 'Well, what silly talk I do hear!' he remarked. 'You creatures are all very beautiful as far as you go, but do you think for a moment you can compare with me in beauty? I know there are some dogs that are not beautiful, but I am a collie, which is one of the most beautiful dogs that bark. I am intelligent too.'

"'You certainly know how to boast,' mewed the cat, which always stayed around the barn. 'You should let somebody else praise you. But, seeing that you are all boasting of your own beauty, take a look at me! Am I not lovelier than any of you? See how lithe I am and graceful!'

"'Hush!' growled the dog. 'Here comes the farmer's child. She shall decide which of us is the most beautiful.'

"So the farmer's child ran in, and the rest of them didn't say a word; just waited. And she ran up to a place where lay a poor, humble animal which hadn't said a word.

"'My,' she cried, 'what a lovely pig! I think you are the prettiest thing!'

"Well, children, you had better believe that those animals hadn't another word to say," finished daddy.

The Right Way.

Rough is the way of life? Oh, no!
It all depends just how you go.
Rough is the way for him and long,
Who tries to walk it without song.
Who never seeks, when cares oppress,
Some hidden cause for happiness;
Who does not learn before the end
How much it means to be a friend;
Who never sees along the way
Some beauty touch each common day;
Who has not goal set far ahead,
Toward which in patience he may tread;
Who does not find in every hour
Some proof of God's abiding power;
Who does not vow, that though he fail
To reach his goal, he shall not fail,
But thankful be, through peace, through strife,
He walks with joy his way of life!
(Arthur Peach in Mother's Magazine)

More Than Education.

"It is all very well for people to educate mothers regarding diet, but unfortunately the mothers can't eat the education," said Miss Mabel Parker, and last August she established a restaurant on West 125th street, New York city, where an expectant mother was served with the following lunch for five cents: Beef bouillon, baked lamb stew with carrots, peas and onions (no patotoes), whole wheat bread and butter, tea (half hot milk) and rice pudding.

In addition the women are instructed in the preparation of nourishing food, in food selection and in sewing.

Miss Parker claims that less money would be needed for the care of sick infants if the mother was given proper food and encouragement before the birth.

Mothers' Circles.

While there are babies in the home a mother will have little time for work outside, but she cannot be an efficient mother unless she keeps in touch with outside influences which meet her children as soon as they enter school. Efficient motherhood cannot be blind to the temptations of life, to the sorrows of the other half. Every mother has time for a Mother's Circle and for child study.

War.

President Taft in a recent speech said that upon women rested the responsibility of future wars. He reminded them that upon the home falls the final and lasting bitterness of war. Andromache speeding Hector on to battle through mourning that she gives "father, husband, son—her life, her all," is the kind of women the past has glorified. It is no model for the twentieth century. The women of today will persuade the modern Hector to find some better way to heal his differences with his fellow-men than by brutal assault upon his person.

Men; Not Things.

The trouble with modern life is that we are putting the accent upon things rather than upon men. Automobiles, big houses, fine clothes, expensive living and the rest. We clamor and scramble over one another to get them.

The remedy will not be found in any superficial economic cure-all, such as socialism or collective ownership. Dogs will still quarrel over the bones.

The hope of the future lies in teaching men to look upon human life as a chance to express the Spirit and not to indulge the flesh, and the value we put upon manhood and womanhood will be its mark.—Chas. A. Richmond, president of Union College, Indiana.

All Year Schools.

Benjamin J. Horchem thinks that schools should keep open all the year round. He has worked out his idea so charmingly in his summer farm school near Dubuque, Ia., that children agree with him. He thinks that we shall ultimately have all-the-year-round schools conducted on a plan altogether different from the present public school system. His idea is summed up in the following points:

"1. Schools to be in the suburbs of cities. Children to reach the schools by rapid transit.

"2. School to be in session the entire year; but only half the school [illegible] schoolroom work to be chiefly done in winter and bad weather.

"3. Less desk work. More laboratory, shop and garden work. The active aspect of education, now chiefly seen in the kindergarten and agricultural and technical schools, to be maintained throughout the grades.

"4. Initiative to be taken by the children. All the leading trades, occupations and professions to be carried on under trained workers. The pupil will go to the schoolroom for theoretic instruction or knowledge.

"5. No writen examinations. Work done speaks for itself. There is no more need of examinations in the schoolroom than in the business world."

NEW ORLEANS TO WINNIPEG.

New Orleans, La., July 29.—A conference will be held here this autumn to formally launch the proposed Jefferson Highway Association, with the object of hastening the construction of a highway between New Orleans and Winnipeg, Canada. This great roadway has been mapped out, and much of it is already in excellent shape. The new association will work to bring about the building of connecting links along the route.

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

When Jo Parsons and Nell returned to the living room after taking off her wraps, Dick had turned down the gas, armed the doctor with a flash light and started him out to seek the fortune.

"It's in plain sight," he averred, "and you'll know it when you see it."

"I've heard of men going out to seek their own fortunes, but never before have I heard of anyone but a thief going about seeking somebody else's money," laughed the doctor.

"Let's see, wasn't it Diogenes who went about with a lantern to seek his fortune?" chuckled Parsons.

"No; he went to sea in a tub," solemnly affirmed Dick.

"You're both wrong." The doctor flashed his light first on one, then the other. "Diogenes lived in a tub and the king had an ever-ready light. He flashed this on Diogenes, but was told to take it away, as old Di preferred sunlight.

"Now, as to this fortune; if I find it what am I to do?"

"Proclaim it aloud. I've been thinking of having you go about with a bell and shout this event of public interest like a town crier. We are public characters and the populace should be kept informed of our doings," answered Dick.

The doctor had flashed his light on the draft for $1.50, framed and hung over the mantle, and gravely read the announcement that Richard C. Morton was to be paid this princely sum every year. Then it happened. The guests raised such a hilarious shout that it waked the baby and Nell had to fly to hush him back to sleep.

"Congratulations, old man!" The doctor was shaking Dick vigorously by the hand. "I'd give more to have the blood of such an original old codger as this Swedish relative of yours was in my veins than to have——"

"$1.50 a year," interrupted Dick, bowing low over the doctor's hand.

"I wouldn't mind so much," said Nell, coming back to the living room and closing the door softly, "if I hadn't been make so public. I'm doomed to live in the limelight in Fairport, it seems." Her tone was lugubrious.

"Never mind, it won't take twenty-four hours to clean out the junk the agents have left here, and it will end all that rubbish; that is something," said Parsons, leaning back comfortably in his chair, with his hands deep in his pockets.

"Perhaps Mrs. Morton will miss the homage and the automobile rides," chaffed the doctor.

"Let's leave these unsympathetic people," said Nell in a tone of mock injury, "and see to the refreshments. I'll trust you with my new silver," she said, handing Jo the tinware bought for the occasion. Jo set about arranging the table while the men sniffed the appetizing oysters and the aroma of coffee until called to the table.

When all the tin plates had been removed, Nell brought on the English walnuts, labeled "Fortunes for all." After the laugh that succeeded the opening of the hollow shells had died away, Dick said:

"I wanted to pass on my sensations when I discovered that all the kernel of my fortune had been removed."

"Half an inch, half an inch, half an inch onward," recited the doctor.

"That is very appropriate. It must have been the motto of the illustrious relative of blessed memory who gave me the splendid impetus of $1.50 a year," laughed Dick.

Household Hints

EXCELLENT SALADS

New Tomato Salad—Dip tomatoes in hot water, peel, remove inside, fill with one cup mashed potatoes well seasoned with one tablespoon butter, one-half cup milk, salt, pepper, one tablespoon chopped onion. Set away to chill. When thoroughly chilled, cut into slices and lay on lettuce leaves.

New Pea Salad—Drain juice from one can peas (or use fresh cooked peas), pour in dish and rinse with cold water. Add to these four large solid bananas diced. Now prepare a dressing from one cup sweet cream, one egg well beaten, one teaspoon flour, half teaspoon dry mustard, two tablespoons butter, one tablespoon sugar, enough vinegar to taste (not too sour). Boil this until it thickens, then remove from fire; when cold mix thoroughly with peas and bananas, and sprinkle generously with fresh peanuts, or any nuts desired.

Delicious Potato Salad — Take about twenty-four small potatoes and boil in the jackets. When cold, pare and slice. Take a medium-sized cucumber, slice and let stand about an hour. Dice tender parts of two stalks of celery. Remove skin of three medium-sized tomatoes and cut pulp very fine. Chop up two Bermuda onions and a few leaves of parsley. Add all these to potatoes, then pour a boiled dressing over mixture; add two hard-boiled eggs chopped fine, then add half pint cream. This recipe will serve about eight. It should be made the day before you intend to serve, and put on ice. Boiled dressing: Half teaspoon salt, half teaspoon mustard, two eggs, four tablespoons vinegar, one tablespoon sugar, few grains pepper, half cup milk, two tablespoons melted butter. Mix dry ingredients, add eggs beaten slightly, butter, milk and vinegar very slowly. Cook over boiling water until mixture thickens; strain and cool.

Mock Crabapples for Salads—Take soft cream cheese, put through meat chopper, then roll it into balls the size of crabapples; dent the top with tip of finger and place a parsley stem in the top to represent apple stem; also dent in the bottom and put in a clove to have the blossom effect. Color cheese ball with red fruit coloring and you have a perfect crabapple. Can be used as garnishing for salad, or serve with pie.

NOVEL SACHETS

A novel sachet for a porpourri jar is made of flowered net, with an interlining of stiff muslin and mounted on covered cardboard. The top of the net is hemmed, finished with lace, and when filled with potpourri of rose leaves is tied with loops of pale pink ribbon.

Charming little round sachets are made from chiffon or net filled with dried flowers and then quilted through the center and finished with a velvet flower.

THE TABLE

Bean Omelet—Cut up one cup wax beans, boil in salted water until tender, drain, then stir in four well-beaten eggs, two tablespoons grated cheese, two tablespoons butter, salt to taste; mix well, put into well-greased pan, sprinkle with bread crumbs, dot with butter. Bake nice and brown. Serve while hot. Baked potatoes are good with this dish.

Stuffed Pork Chops—Take stale bread crumbs, moisten with water and season highly with salt and pepper. Wash pork chops, cut pocket in them and stuff with bread crumbs. Use toothpicks to hold together. Put in oven and bake about twenty-five minutes. Garnish with glazed apples.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Eagle Pass., Tex.—Of all the tales of the brigandage that is going on in Mexico, the most touching has been brought to this town by the pretty Senorita Elina Lupeja, who saw her father and mother shot down, her faithful servants killed, and her beautiful home ruined. She herself, the quarry of a licentious brute, escaped and fled three hundred miles to the border, swam the river and was near death when a goat herder rescued her and brought her to town. The brutal plot of "Pronton" Selva, leader of a band of brigands, to secure the pretty Mexican girl for his own was not discovered until the band had surrounded the villa at San Dimas, a mining village in Mexico. Before her father was killed he had shot several of the band, and brought down the bandit leader just as he was about to grasp his prey. Fleeing from the house, the Senorita fled for a week over rough roadways, and finally secured a horse. Over burning sands by day, and sleeping in the cold by night, she fled to the Rio Grande. She has now recovered her gruelling experiences and is being cared for by a friend of her father who died defending her. The girl is highly educated and was for several years in school in France.

New York—The romance of architecture is the name given by friends of Miss Lucy Page-Brown to her engagement with Harry McAfee, of San Francisco. Both are architects, and after their wedding, which will take place at Beaulieu, in the Santa Clara Valley, in California, they will be business partners in San Francisco. Miss Page-Brown comes of a prominent New York family and has already won renown in her work.

Boston—Another campaign is being launched in Massachusetts by Mrs. Charlotte Smith, author of the bachelor tax bill, which has had four defeats in the Legislature. Mrs. Smith thinks that if the 10,000 marriageable women in the old Bay State were each given a farm, plenty of men would be coming around for chances to hang up their hats. She calls on the public to disapprove of Governor Walsh and Lieut. Gov. Cushing, who are both bachelors. "Bachelors must go into private life," is her ultimatum. "There was never a successful bachelor-statesman. Buchanan became President, but the country was plunged into war. The bachelor tax is one way to help."

Elgin, Ill.—A woman's superstition may keep Dario Resta, the famous auto driver, out of the Elgin road race which will take place in August. Resta married a sister of the late Spencer Wishart, who was killed at Elgin last year. Mrs. Resta believes that this town is unlucky for her family, and she has exacted a promise from her husband that he will not risk his life.

Orange, N. J.—An interesting gathering of Suffragists will take place here on August 12, for leaders in the campaigns in many States will come to observe the 100th birthday anniversary of Lucy Stone, who refused to pay her taxes because she had no voice in the government. A memorial in the form of a bronze tablet will be placed on the house in Orange where she was born, and her daughter, Lucy Stone Blackwell, of Boston, will be one of the principal speakers.

Minneapolis—One of the few war-brides living in America is Mrs. Charlotte Schumacher, of this city. She recalled yesterday, on the 45th anniversary of her war-bride ceremony in Germany, the thrilling epoch of the Franco-Prussian War. "Almost a hundred couples waited in Berlin for the pastor on July 28, 1870, the day I was married. The ceremonies were strikingly short, and one war bride asked hysterically if that was because the unions were not supposed to last long. The iron walls which separate German social stations crumbled and high officers married girls of low birth. It really did not matter what the men were. We made heroes of them after they had left us at the front. Trying to be worthy of our men brought out the best in us."

London—It is announced that of thirty thousand applications for patents in Great Britain last year, over 400 of them were by women.

SPIRITED TALKS TO MACHINISTS

Unless Eight-hour Day is Granted Local Workmen Will Quit Work.

WILL STICK TOGETHER

Organized Effort to be Made to Secure Time for Machinists to Bask in the Sun and Get Acquainted With Their Families.

D'Annunzio's poetic powers are said to have been a mighty factor in Italy's entering the European conflict. Perhaps the obscure poet in this city, who by day toils at a machine, never heard of D'Annunzio, but here is how he has formulated the demands of his fellow workers, and how he put the eight-hour day movement graphically before them at two monster mass meetings held last night:

We mean to make things over.
We're tired of toil for naught.
We may have enough to live on,
But seldom time for thought.
We want to feel the sunshine,
We want to smell the flowers;
We know that God has willed it,
And we mean to have eight hours.

Epitomizing the machinists' demands of the local factory superintendents, this verse did considerable toward provoking the keen enthusiasm among 900 machinists that made the center of the town ring with hand-clapping and shouting between the hours of 8 and 10 o'clock last night. Five hundred factory workers, skilled machinists, gathered in the Trades' Council chambers, while four hundred of the same kind met in the Moose lodge rooms directly across the street and almost on an exact parallel, three flights above Plainfield's main thoroughfare. These 900 represented 60 per cent. of the total number of machinists in Plainfield, and the remaining 40 per cent., these being the ones who are working nights and who were unable to be present at the evening session, met in Trades' Council Hall at 9 o'clock this morning and heard a program similar to the one which featured the main session.

The sight of these mechanics, representative of Plainfield's hard-working and industrious class, was truly an impressive one, and could the local factory superintendents have been present to personally view the determined countenances of the assemblage, the apparent uselessness of fighting the eight-hour day issue would be forcibly brought home to them. A unanimous vote at the conclusion of each meeting indicated that the men would "stick to the finish at any cost," and if the bosses refuse the demands of their committee on Monday, their next course will be to declare a general strike. Inspired by a notable degree of confidence largely due to the urging they received from Thomas E. Carroll, a representative of the International Machinists' Union, and Hugh Riley, business agent of District 47, last night, the men have set their minds on an "eight-hour day or nothing."

The forcefulness of Hugh Riley's remarks, coupled with his marked popularity among the machinists of Plainfield, occasioned many rounds of enthusiastic hand-clapping, and by the time the men had become warmed up to the subject an audience of more than 200 persons lined the curbs of West Front street, craning their necks to get a glimpse of the speakers' movements. Trades' Council Hall was packed to the limit, and the hallway leading to the third floor of the building was also thronged.

Mr. Carroll, in opening the mass meeting, said: "There is a heaven-born principal of eight hours work, eight hours play and eight sleep, and if the bosses refuse to accede to our demands, then the machinists as a body will have their chance to act. We are worked harder today than ever before; we are being 'speeded' by the bosses to aid them in filling their large and profitable orders; and we are on the eve of a revolt against some of the conditions that confront us in the machine shops of Plainfield. We have been trailers in this eight-hour movement because we have failed in having an organization strong enough to back up our demands.

"This is not a Plainfield movement, but Plainfield is merely one of the places that is ready for a shorter day. Throughout the country in the printing press business there is an eight-hour day except in Plainfield, where the men work 8¼ hours. Plainfield shops have orders for tools that are going into plants to make war munitions, and the time is ripe for making our demand. Saurers are getting a price for their product which they dare not tell you men of, and they are producing a truck today one hundred times cheaper than they did several years ago, because they are 'speeding' you up. That applies to all of the automobile industry, and not alone Saurers. The factory owners have had the opportunity

ORDERS ACCOUNTING OF THE REAL ESTATE

Judge Connolly Fixes September 17 as Time When Executors Must Report.

Elizabeth, July 30.—Judge Connolly, in the county court today, signed an order directing Mrs. Neal, the widow, and her sons, Frank and Edward Neal, of Plainfield, to make an accounting of the estate of Frank Neal, and September 17 next was fixed as the time when such accounting is to be made to the court.

The accounting was ordered following the application of Mrs. Arthur Williams, daughter of Mrs. Neal, who is now of age, and who claims that no account of the estate has been made. She is represented by William A. Coddington, of Plainfield, while Isaac P. Runyon is counsel for the estate.

Mrs. Williams, in her application, sets forth that property of the estate on West Front street, Plainfield, was sold for $32,000, and that no accounting of this has been made. Mr. Neal died in Plainfield about five years ago, leaving valuable real estate in Plainfield.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE WILL ACT ON MANY APPLICATIONS

As the result of interest aroused at last night's mass meeting, over one hundred machinists who have heretofore not been affiliated with the local union, signified their intention of joining, and the applications will be acted upon at tonight's meeting of the executive committee. The speakers' remarks last night urged concentrated action, and in order to produce this, it was declared that it would be necessary to have every machinist affiliated with the union.

It is expected that a large majority of the local machinists will be bona fide members of the union before the present week draws to a close, and there is a bare possibility that the roster will be increased to a total of over one thousand.

HOLLAND INCREASES HER RESERVE FORCE

The Hague, July 30.—The first chamber of the Netherlands Parliament today passed the bill increasing the Dutch landstrum or reserve force. Travelers to Holland from Ghent state that in the last three days all sick and wounded German soldiers in the hospitals in Ghent have been removed to the interior of Germany. This move is believed to presage new activity on the front. The second step in Holland's preparation for self defense in a possible emergency came today when the First Chamber voted a war credit of ninety million guilders. A bill authorizing an increase in the Dutch navy was also passed.

REV. DR. J. A. CHAMBLISS TO PREACH HERE SUNDAY

The Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, a former pastor of the First Baptist church, has returned to Plainfield for a brief stay. He will preach in his old pulpit next Sunday morning and again in the First Baptist church in the evening, when the union church service will be held there. Dr. Chambliss' other preaching date in Plainfield is Sunday morning, August 15.

Dr. Chambliss resides in Jefferson City, Tennessee, now, and is professor of Biblical history and literature in the college there. He was pastor of the First Baptist church during the last two or three years of the Rev. Dr. Yerkes' life, and prior to the coming of the present pastor, the Rev. Philip B. Strong.

CHARLES KLINE.

Charles Kline, of 42 West 136th street, New York city, a brother of William Kline, of 633 West Third street, this city, died at his home at 4 o'clock this morning. He had been ill for some time, complications causing his death. He leaves a widow and one son, George, both residents of New York, and one brother, William, of this city. The funeral will be held in this city Sunday afternoon.

NEXT SEASHORE EXCURSION.

The next excursion to the seashore is that of the Sunday schools of the First Presbyterian, Congregational and Park Avenue Baptist churches, of Plainfield. This combination will go to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove next Thursday, the train, which will be in two sections, leaving Dunellen at 8:04 and Plainfield at 8:15, stopping at Grant avenue both ways.

REGULARS GIVE FINE EXHIBITION

Troop D Witness Brilliant Performance Which it Tries to Emulate.

CAUGHT IN THE RAIN

Plainfield Guardsmen, While Out for Patrol Practice, Run Into a Shower—Troopers Andrews and Jeffcott Called Away.

Cavalry Camp, Mt. Gretna, Pa., July 28.—Troop D, First Squadron Cavalry N. G. N. J., now in camp here, rode down early to the parade grounds this morning to be put rather to shame by watching a troop of the regulars at drill. It was a splendid sight; the regulars went through all their formations at a fast gallop, spreading in mathematical intervals into order of skirmishes and reassembling into close formations, charging forward with the thunderous drumming of four hundred hoofs, retreating with the flash of as many bright iron shoes.

After they had finished Troop D tried to emulate them, and came nearer to standard than at any previous drill. In the afternoon the troop rode out into the country for patrol practice. A sudden shower forced them to put on their slickers, which they carried on the pummels of their saddles. At one place they were ordered to form fours and to fight on foot, action to the left. This meant that only number four in each set remained mounted, each taking the reins of his number three, while numbers twos linked the bridle of their horse to those of the threes, and the number ones linked their bridles to those of the twos. The men on foot, rifles in hand, formed on the left, while the mounted men withdrew the horses to the rear; then broke into skirmish order and advanced toward an imaginary enemy.

The Plainfielders have taken to the life splendidly. They sleep like logs on the hay they spread on the ground under their tents, and eat the regular army rations with pleasure. Their number has been lessened by two as Troopers Andrew and Jeffcott have both been called away on business; and both went with great reluctance.

FANWOOD LIQUOR DEALER HAS TO PAY A $100 FINE

Charged with selling beer in Fanwood township, Ralph Venezia, a wholesale liquor dealer, licensed in Fanwood borough, was arraigned before Recorder Jahn, in Scotch Plains, last night and sentenced to pay a fine of $100. In a statement made to a Daily Press reporter over the telephone last night, the accused said that he was considering the advisability of taking an appeal, but alleged that the court had agreed to reduce the fine to $50 if he dropped the litigation as it now stands.

Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of the local law firm of Reed & Hetfield, prosecuted the case for the township, and a Newark attorney represented Venezia. A protest was made against the fine on the ground that the defendant did not accept payment for the liquor. Recorder Jahn announced last night that the sentence would probably be reviewed by Judge James C. Connolly, in Elizabeth, next week.

HOPE EXCURSION AUGUST 14.

FRED LANDSPERGER WEDS MISS SOUTHARD

Ceremony Performed at M. E. Church Parsonage by Rev. Dr. Anderson.

Miss Ethel May Southard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Mosher, of 631 East Seventh street, and Fred Landsperger, also of this city, were married last night at the home of the Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church. The wedding was a quiet affair, attended only by the immediate relatives of the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Mosher acted as attendants. Immediately after the ceremony the newlyweds departed for a ten days' honeymoon trip which will be spent at Pittsburgh and other points of interest. Upon their return they will take up their residence with the bride's parents.

Both bride and bridegroom are well known and popular among a large circle of acquaintances in this city and the announcement of their engagement made several months ago was the occasion for a shower of congratulations to be heaped upon them.

The bride for the past eight years has been employed by the American Sabbath Tract Society at the Recorder Press office on Duer street and was held in high esteem by her employers and associates in the concern. She is also a member of the First Baptist church, her acquaintances numbering many of the young folks of this denomination.

Mr. Landsperger holds a responsible position in the plant of the Thatcher Furnace Company at Garwood, by whom he has been employed for a number of years. He has made his home in this city and enjoys a popularity similar to that of his bride's.

The young folks were the recipients of a valuable and useful collection of wedding gifts, including cut-glass and silverware.

EFFORTS BEING MADE TO GET HERO MEDAL

Efforts are being made by friends of Victor H. Miron, of this city, whose heroic attempt to prevent six-yer-old Louis Rosenthal from being run over by an automobile at Hunter, N. Y., was described in the Daily Press last night, to have an Andrew Carnegie medal for bravery bestowed upon him.

Members of the Delta Kappa fraternity of Battin High School, Elizabeth, have written to Mr. Carnegie, presenting the facts in one case, and John Lovett, of this city, district manager of the John Wanamaker clothing store branch in Plainfield, has added his influence to the movement. Members of the United Hebrew Charities Association, of which Mr. Miron is a director, have taken similar action, besides many influential people of this city and the friends and relatives of the injured boy.

Miron is a former Elizabeth Daily Times reporter, and in 1909 won the Elizabeth Journal prize for the best essay on Abraham Lincoln. In the Emily E. Williamson debate at Battin High School, in 1898, he won second prize, which was presented to him by Dr. Glazebrook, now American representative at Jerusalem.

CHIEF STOCKHOLDERS.

Joseph Miron and Albert Lifson, of the local furniture firm of Miron & Lifson, are the principal stockholders in the United Spring and Mattress Company, for which incorporation papers were filed in the Union county clerk's office yesterday. The authorized capital is $10,000, divided into 100 shares of $100 each. Each one of the men mentioned above have a twenty-four share interest in the concern, which will manufacture all kinds of mattresses, spring beds, etc.

PRESENTED WITH BOOKS.

Several prominent Jewish men of this city have presented the local Y. M. H. A. with a leather-bound copy of the latest edition of the Funk & Wagnall Jewish Encyclopedia. The following local men donated the books: Leo Zeisel, Albert Zeisel, Max Bernstein, Henry and Samuel Rosenbaum, Harry Perlman, Symon Hirsch, Max Tepper, Charles Kurtzman, Samuel Kranthamer, Ben Kline and Benjamin Marhowitz.

TRINITY FESTIVAL POSTPONED.

The rain late yesterday afternoon caused the postponement of the ice cream festival and home-made cake and candy sale of the Trinity Reformed Church Consistory until Tuesday evening. The affair will then be held, weather permitting, at the same place, East Front and Church streets.

BECKER PAYS DEATH PENALTY

CARRIES WIFE'S PHOTO

Former Police Lieutenant in Last Statement Declared That He Was Not Guilty and Was Being Sacrificed for Friends.

Sing Sing Prison, July 30.—"I'm not guilty by deed, conspiracy, or in any other way of part in the death of Herman Rosenthal. I am being sacrificed for my friends."

With these words on his lips, Charls Becker, former lieutenant of police in New York city, walked into the death chamber at Sing Sing Prison and sat in the electric chair.

That was 5:42 o'clock this morning. The current was applied a moment later, and ten minutes afterward he was officially pronounced dead.

The remarkable composure which has marked every day of the policeman's three years' fight for life did not desert him even at the threshold of eternity. Protesting his innocence to the last, he maintained the same nerve that characterized his actions as head of the "strong-arm squad." True, his voice faltered a little as he chanted the responses to the prayers of the priests who stood by his side, but there was no sign of collapse.

Becker held a crucifix in his right hand, and just above his heart, pinned on the black coat, was a miniature of his wife, whom he had bidden good-bye four hours before.

It required three shocks to kill Becker, who was described by the physician who made the autopsy as being abnormally strong.

Mrs. Becker, after a desperate eleventh-hour appeal to the Governor, issued a statement in which she says:

"I shall never rest until I have exposed the methods by which my husband was convicted."

It was just as the first touch of dawn tinged the eastern sky that Deputy Warden Johnson, his face drawn and haggard after a farewell hour in Becker's cell, appeared and announced that Becker had written a

FORMER PLAINFIELDERS GUESTS AT RECEPTION

Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire and Miss Ruth Maguire, wife and daughter of the former pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Hadley, of 318 Franklin place, for several days, and last evening a reception was given in their honor. The program comprised games and vocal and instrumental music, a feature being solos by Miss Maguire, accompanied on the piano by Miss Martha Casner. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Mrs. Maguire and Miss Maguire have been sojourning at Asbury Park, and they stopped in this city for a few days prior to leaving tomorrow for Northfield, Mass., where they will spend the rest of the summer.

FUNERAL SERVICE OF MRS. HENRY HANSEN HELD

The funeral of Mrs. Henry Hansen, wife of the local liverymen, who died Monday night, was held yesterday afternoon from her late home, 234 East Second street. The Rev. E. C. Conover, pastor of the Temple Baptist church, had charge. Interment was made in the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

The floral array was very large, and an extra carriage was required to convey the pieces to the cemetery. There were eight or nine handsome pillows. One was inscribed "Wife," and another "Mother." There was a beautiful standing piece from the Independent Order of Foresters and another from the liverymen and hackmen who have stands at the local station.

The bearers were Robert McCormick, Thomas Burns, Peter Hansen, James C. Hansen, Alfred Luthman and Carl Peterson. Mr. Conover, who was a neighbor of the deceased, spoke feelingly of Mrs. Hansen, especially of her good Christian character.

HEAT NO DRAWBACK TO THIS GATHERING

Columbus Club Euchre and Reception Was Enjoyed by Many Guests.

Despite the torrid atmospherical conditions and threatening sky, 300 guests were entertained last night by the wives and women friends of Columbus Club members in the big West Front street hall at an elaborate euchre and reception. Music furnished by "Al" Squires' orchestra was provided for a program of dancing, which was indulged in by a large number of exponents of this art. Euchre and other card games featured this portion of the evening's program, and many handsome and useful awards were made to the cleverest performers.

The affair was a success, both socially and financially, and the undertaking of the women proved a close rival to those affairs promoted recently by the younger members of the organization. These events have made the club a social center of considerable importance, and last night's gathering was an unusually representative one. Mrs. Andrew E. Kenney was chairman of the committee of women in charge.

W. L. SAUNDERS' JERSEY COW STRAYS FROM PASTURE

A fine Jersey cow belonging to former Mayor W. L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, was reported to the borough police this morning as missing from the pasture in which it was placed last night. While it was thought that the animal had strayed away, there was fear that it might have been stolen.

At the Saunders' home this morning it was said that a broken fence and a pile of apples in the field adjoining the pasture pointed to the possibility of the cow's having broken out in its desire to get at the apples. An employe of Mr. Saunders scoured the surrounding country without avail this morning, but expected to get on track of the animal soon.

THREATEN TO CALL OUT 2,200 MEN ON STRIKE

Boston, July 30.—Peter Conlon, international vice president of the Machinists' Union, has announced that unless the strike of 800 machinists and moulders at the Becker-Brainard Milling Company in Hyde Park is settled by Monday or Tuesday a strike will be called at the Sturtevant Blower Works, which employs 2,200 men.

HARRY L. WILSON MAY BE TRIED FOR TREASON

Washington July 30.—The predicament of Harry L. Wilson, the clerk in the American Consulate, at Dresden, Saxony, who was arrested for issuing false passports to an Englishman whereby he escaped the country, is believed by the State Department officials to be serious. Wilson, although an American citizen, may be tried for treason, which is a capital offense.

ENJOYING A "HIKE."

The Camp Fire Girls are enjoying a hike today. About twelve maidens under the leadership of Miss Helen Joy left the Y. W. C. A. building at noon today for Wetumpka Falls, where they will spend the day, returning home about six o'clock. Among those who made the start were the Misses Helen Joy, Lillian Ball, Eva Ball, Elizabeth Marchant, Frances Grieves, Dorothy Hannigan, Gladys Albert, Hetty Kriney and Carolyn Smith.

ASSESSMENTS CONFIRMED.

Elizabeth, July 30.—Assessments for improvements made on Emerson, Monroe and Giraud avenues and West Fourth street, Plainfield, were confirmed in an order signed today by Judge James C. Connolly in the county court. The assessments, which were made by commissioners, were presented by Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., representing the city of Plainfield.

BOY BADLY BURNED.

While playing with matches a few days ago Jacob Steinman, the three-year-old son of David Steinman, of 413 Plainfield avenue, set his clothing on fire and was badly burned about the legs. Dr. Raphael Yood, of Grant avenue, was called and treated him. Dr. Yood reports the boy out of danger today.

Miss Sadie Holt, of Codington avenue, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation from her duties with the Seaman's Institute, of New York city.

ABANDONMENT OF WARSAW IS NEAR

Overwhelming Force of Germans Reach the Gates of Polish Capital.

REMOVING POSTOFFICE

French Report Fighting From Trench to Trench With Grenades and Petards—Belgian Steamer Prince Albert Blown up by Mine.

London, July 30.—Warsaw, the third city of Russia, and the goal for which the German armies in the east have been striving since October, is at last in the throes of abandonment.

Germans in overwhelming numbers are at the gates of the Polish capital and despatches both from the city itself and from Petrograd say that further resistance would be unwise.

Discounted not only through France and Great Britain, but in Russia itself, the fall of the city is expected hourly and the problem now is to move the Russian armies intact, threatened as they are from the south by the Austro-Germans and more seriously from the north where the German forces which have swept through Poland are aiming at the railway from Warsaw to Petrograd. This latter menace the British press admits is imminent and the hope in the allied countries now is not for the safety of Warsaw, but for the continued cohesion of the Russian army.

The Warsaw postoffice has already been shifted to some point to the eastward, the populace has been warned to remain calm and presumably for days Russian troops have been stripping the city of everything of military value.

German aviators are hovering over the city, and according to German advices plans have been completed for the triumphant entrance of the German emperor, accompanied by his consort.

With Warsaw captured, whether or not it proves a conquest of lasting strategic advantage, a great wave of enthusiasm will sweep over Germany and Austria-Hungary, and it is predicted here that the armies of the central powers will then seek to force a period of trench warfare in the east, meanwhile throwing a great weight of men and guns to the west with the idea of resuming the battering toward Calais and perhaps toward Paris.

The British public is not impressed with the events in the east. In fact David Lloyd George, the minister of munitions, in a speech yesterday apparently thought it necessary to drive home the gravity of the situation in the minds of those inclined to over-optimism, reminding them that reverses in Russia would mean increased pressure on the western allies, and summing up his opinion with the admonition that "the situation is serious if not perilous."

A Warsaw despatch to the Times, dated Sunday, says:

"The general news today is unsatisfactory. It is reported that the Germans have crossed the Narew and dug themselves in. The enemy was at no great distance to the south last night.

"The sky is alight with the reflection from burning villages, and today even the most optimistic are of the opinion that it is a question of days only before Warsaw is evacuated by the entire army.

"The loss of Warsaw will undoubtedly be an important blow morally, and it would be stupid to minimize its encouraging effect upon the enemy, but it would be equally unwise to exaggerate its effect on the cause of the allies as a whole.

"The fundamental question now is the preservation of the Russian army intact, and undemoralized as a fighting unit. It has become approximately impossible for Russia to remain strong and well supplied on all fronts from the Baltic to Bukowina.

"The Austrians, though lacking virility, are still sufficiently strong at all points to prevent Russia from shifting troops to the points attacked. The Germans therefore are able to concentrate an attack against any selected point with overwhelming superiority in ammunition and troops.

"After nealry three months of continuous resistance the Russian line now takes great risk in offering an opportunity to the Germans to break it and endanger the army. The best opinion here is that the evucation of Warsaw is infinitely better than risking disaster by holding the city."

Paris, July 30.—The French war statement says:

"In Artois near Souchez and at the Labyrinth there was during the entire night fighting from trench to trench, with Grenades and Petards. Between the Oise and the Aisne on the Plateau of Quennevieres activity with artillery and bomb throwers continued. Between Bourguille s and Vauquois and in the forest of Malancourt some

CLAYTON APGAR'S NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

Adolphus Hoffman, aged 14, son of Samuel Hoffman, and Clayton Apgar, aged 13, son of Willard N. Apgar, saved Clayton's brother, Sylvester, aged 10, from drowning at Reidy's, a swimming hole near the Greenbrook water tanks of the Central Railroad, yesterday. Clayton and Adolphus, who can swim, had come out of the water after a couple of hours' sport and had just commenced to dress themselves, when Sylvester, who can't swim and who was continuing to wade in the water, gave a cry and disappeared from sight. The waters near the bank where Sylvester was wading were not deep but he had stepped into a deep hole.

Clayton and Adolphus hastily divested themselves of the few clothes which they had put on and diving in the water quickly rescued young Sylvester, sputtering and gasping for breath.

Both boys have received Boy Scout training and following "first aid" to the drowning instructions they quickly got all of the water out of Sylvester and he was shortly little the worse for his experience.

He was found lying along the sidewalk on Lincoln avenue in front of the residence of Willard N. Apgar. Martin Garick, aged 65, an Austrian, who was arrested last evening by Marshal Patrick Tarpey, was fined $5. He was unable to pay this fine and was taken to New Brunswick by Marshal Isaac V. Smalley. 'Plains & Fanwood.

Borough Recorder Charles Sheelen had his first case in many a day last night when a number of Italians were arraigned before him on the complaint of John Miller, of South avenue, near Terrill road. Miller said that he did not wish them to be fined or given jail terms, but wanted protection against their coming on his property at all hours of the night and early morning and taking whatever they could lay their hands on. He stated that he had been bothered by them for a long time, and early yesterday morning caught them in the act of gorging his apple orchard. Recorder Sheelen dismissed the case after giving them a severe reprimand, taking occasion to warn them of trespassing anywhere in the borough, a thing they have been caught at numerous times.

After seeing Edward Hand driving around in his automobile for nearly a week minus a windshield, it was found out that while the married men were warming up for their fracas with the single men last Saturday, that one of the old-timers uncorked a wild pitch that went through the glass and landed in the front seat. That is put up by the benedicts as the reason for their losing the game to the younger generation by a 21 to 18 score, and they are going to see that all autos are out of the danger zone before beginning the third game a week from tomorrow.

The weekly shoot of the Fanwood Rifle Club will be held on the Westfield avenue grounds tomorrow afternoon. A full attendance is requested, as the number at the recent meetings has been very small.

GERMANY AWAITS NOTE TO ENGLAND

Believed That Kaiser Aims to Involve Great Britain and America.

Washington, D. C., July 30.—Daily the feeling is becoming general here that Germany will not make a formal reply to the last note on the Lusitania incident but will diplomatically manoeuvre to await the American note to Great Britain regarding cargo seizures. Germany is hopeful of a break between the United States and Great Britain on this issue. At any rate the Berlin government wishes to see how strong the American government will make its note to Great Britain and whether it will have as severe a tone as the last note to Berlin.

Press despatches indicate that Germany harbors the belief that a break is impending between the United States and Great Britain over the question of the seizure of cargoes. While there are insinuations in some quarters that no reply will be made to the last American note in others it is stated that a delay will be effected to study the exchange of notes between Great Britain and the United States and their effects.

If as a result of this cleverly played game of the German diplomatists the United States does become involved in a serious controversy with Great Britain it may be expected that Germany will deign to reply to the latest American note and do whatever she can to add fuel to the flames. If, however, the note to London does not come up to German hopes Germany may be expected to remain officially silent, regarding the Lusitania incident as at an end so far as diplomatic correspondence is concerned.

Which of these situations shall arise is entirely in the hands of President Wilson. Those who understand him and the facts best are convinced Mr. Wilson never will confuse an issue in which the life of American citizens is involved with a property right. His note to Britain will be strong, but it will deal in legal phrases; it will not preclude legal adjustment in the future, but it will not assert the uncompromising attitude which he has felt it is his absolute duty to maintain, be the consequences what they may, in the face of the wanton destruction of American lives by the Germans. It will be the difference between a civil and a criminal action at law.

POPE BENEDICT SAID TO BE SEEKING ARMISTICE

Berlin, July 30 (by Wireless Telegraphy to Sayville, N. Y.).—A despatch from Madrid to the Overseas News Agency says the Spanish newspaper A. B. C. reports from Rome that the Pope is preparing a great action through the episcopate of the belligerent countries with the object of securing an armistice. The Archbishop of Pisa is quoted as confirming the story and adding that Pope Benedict himself is aware of the grave difficulties which he has to overcome.

WRIT FOR MEXICANS WHO KILLED AMERICANS

Phoenix, Ariz., July 30.—By vacating his own order, denying a writ of habeas corpus in the case of four Mexicans condemned to hang today in the State Penitentiary at Florence, Judge McAllister, of the Superior Court, opened the way for an appeal to the State Supreme Court, which will serve as a stay of execution at least until September, when that tribunal reconvenes.

The Mexicans were charged with the murder of four white persons at Ray, Ariz. A reprieve was granted last May, only a short time before the date set for the hangings, on the request of W. J. Bryan, at that time Secretary of State.

An appeal previously had been taken in the case of the fifth condemned Mexican.

TALKS TO MACHINISTS

to raise some of your wages, but three years ago they cut these same wages. They gave you a crumb, and what we demand now is a whole slice of toast with butter on it."

Mr. Riley said: "To a certain extent wages are controlled, they tell us, by the law of supply and demand, but if you men make no effort to control your own wages there will be no limit to the hours you will be made to work or no low water mark for your wages. The best way to produce results is to stick together ad declare 'that we will not go back to work unless an eight-hour day is granted.' Is it logical, men, that you should be made to work longer hours than less skilled mechanics such as the hod-carrier, the mason, the carpenter, the cigar and carpet maker and the plumber? What is there in your ability to handle a pair of calipers that forces you to work longer hours than your inferiors? Haven't you the same rights as other city, county, State and national citizens?

"This is only an organization meeting, and the matter of discussing a strike will come up behind closed doors and will be open only to men who belong to our union. We are going to carry the gospel of trade unionism from one end of the State to the other and make New Jersey a fit place for workmen to live in. The opportunity that manufacturers have long been attempting to delay has at last arrived. We are living in an age when manufacturers are in business solely for the profit they may yield."

Next Monday morning J. J. Keppler, vice-president of the International Machinists' Union; Thomas E. Carroll, Hugh Riley and William Lunger, business manager of the Building Trades' Council, will visit the factory superintendents in Plainfield and formally present the workmen's demands. A meeting will be held Monday or Tuesday night, at which time subsequent action will be taken under consideration. At the conclusion of last night's session the men were provided with white hat badges bearing the numeral "8," which they are wearing today.

BECKER PAYS PENALTY

final statement, which he asked be given to the newspaper correspondents. At first Becker had planned to read the statement from the chair, but he thought this might look too spectacular, so he contented himself with making it public through the deputy warden. It was written in a firm hand.

"That is Charlie Becker's last utterance to the world," said the deputy warden sorrowfully, as he handed the document to the reporters. "It's really his last will and testament. I've been with him pretty much of the night."

Father Curry, who had been Becker's adviser in the Tombs, and Father Cashin, the prison chaplain, entered the doomed man's cell shortly before 5 o'clock. Holy communion was administered, which Becker received steadily and firmly, as he knelt on the stone floor. The last rites of the Catholic church were administered amid the hush of death in the cell block, where the men whose turn is to come later were excessively quiet, although all their senses had been keenly conscious as the long night wore away.

Becker, originally a Lutheran, became a Catholic during his many months in the death house.

Three quarters of an hour before the summons came Becker asked for a pin.

"I want to go away wearing this," he said, with a smile, as he took a bit of pasteboard from a miniature frame and attached the picture of his wife to the black suit.

Mrs. Becker reached here at 11:30 last night. Under the rules of the prison a condemned man's relatives are not permitted to see him subsequent to the afternoon before the electrocution. But in this case the rules were suspended for her following a thrilling dash from Poughkeepsie in a taxicab, after her unsuccessful eleventh hour plea to the governor.

The wife, fearful that she might not be permitted to see her husband, was in a highly nervous state during the forty-two mile ride. The young chauffeur, to whom roads outside Poughkeepsie were an unknown quantity, took the wrong road. The frantic wife pleaded with Lawyer John B. Johnston, who accompanied her, to urge the driver to go faster and faster as the rickety vehicle tore through the murky roads.

When she reached here she was permitted to go promptly to the principal keeper's office, where she stayed until 1:15. Then she walked out a bit unsteadily, and, escorted by her brother, John Lynch, and John Becker, she was put into Warden Osborne's private car and reached her home in the Bronx early this morning, refusing to see any reporters. On the way down her wonderful calm deserted her only for a few minutes, when she broke down and sobbed.

LITERARY

The Red Book Magazine for August has a refreshing, summery atmosphere about it that is wholly delightful. Besides three splendid serials, it includes thirteen seasonable short stories—especially memorable among which are: Meredith Nicholson's blithely charming Mackinac story, "Sitting Up With Susan"—of which the hero (with Flagg pictures, too!) is a 250-pounder and the heroine is a cow; George Fitch's rollicking motorboat tale, "Gasoline Plus Alcohol;" John Fleming Wilson's impressive story of a seafaring family, "Thos. Dunham & Son & Son;" Ellis Parker Butler's "The Disappearance of Ma'y Jane;" George Allan England's amusing "Love;" Walter Jones' "Doors That Never Open Again;" and the stories by Ray Sprigle, Albert Payson Terhune and the late Frank Westcott.

In this August Red Book, Sir Gilbert Parker's "Wild Youth," the story of a Canadian Paolo and Francesca, comes to its second vivid installment, and to some of its most striking scenes. Mrs. Humphry Ward's "A Great Success," too, reaches its great climax in this August installment, and Cyrus Townsend Brady's "The Island of Surprise," concludes in the same spirited fashion that has distinguished the previous chapters.

GROUND IS BROKEN FOR NEW EDIFICE

Appropriate Ceremony Marks Commencement of Work on Netherwood Church.

The first shovelfuls of dirt in the excavation of the cellar for the new building of the Netherwood Reformed church on Leland avenue were thrown out last evening, the event having been postponed from Wednesday, the time originally set, on account of rain. Last night's exercises took place under trying circumstances and were hurried through, but there was a good sized attendance, although a heavy shower had just passed and more rain threatened.

The exercises were of an informal nature, the honor of turning the first sod being given to S. O. Rusa and O. P. Wahlig, two old parishioners. The pastor, the Rev. Edward S. Ralston, had charge and offered an opening prayer, following that with a few remarks of an encouraging nature, reviewing the progress made by the congregation, which was about to culminate in the erection of the beautiful chapel.

Immediately after Mr. Ralston's remarks came the turning of the sod. This was without special ceremony and ordinary shovels were used. The Rev. John Y. Broek followed with a short address.

The new building will be staked out today by the contractors, B. F. Fallamy & Brother. The old building, which has been used for five years as a house of worship, has been moved away from its former location in the church lot so as to give place to the new structure. This will be a building of hollow tile and stucco and will cost $13,000. It will be finished by December, it is hoped, and until money enough is raised to build the main church auditorium, will be used for all church purposes. Eventually it will be used as a Sunday school room.

Rev. J. Y. Broek, who made the address, said in part:

"It is a great and noble thing to build the Church of God. On the average, ten churches are being built each day in our land. It is a fact of striking significance that no a day passes but what some new church building is being erected.

"The religious element is fundamental in man. We cannot get along without the church, and we will never outgrow the church. The church is increasing and growing stronger every day. From every hamlet in our country, church spires are arising. The church has a message. It has a gospel to proclaim and we are to live out this gospel of love in the community.

"This Netherwood church has been established in faith. It has passed through many struggles during the early days. We recall so well the erection of this former church building in two days, the first session of the Sunday-school, the dedication service of the old building, the organization of the church on that stormy night in January, 1910, and the ordination of the Rev. Royal A. Stout as the first pastor of the church, who rendered such splendid service.

"We must labor and build in faith in the future. The future is as bright as the promises of God. This is a time for optimism and joy. God has brought material and spiritual blessing to this church during the past year. God has opened the hearts of generous donors and many persons have united with the church. The past year has been the best year in your history. There is every reason to be full of courage and faith."

Plainfield, N. J., July 30, 1915.

NATURE'S BOUNTY.

A special dispensation of Providence, in this year of man-made scarcity and distress in so large a part of the world, is suggested not only by our record-breaking crops now ripening toward the harvest but by the unprecedented yield of the oil wells of the United States. For 1914 is announced the unparalleled oil yield of 290,312,535 barrels. From the consumers' point of view there is further cause for thankfulness in the fact that within less than two years the price has been reduced from ninety-five cents to eighty-one cents a barrel, and even the producer cannot complain because abundance is cheaper by the unit when he has greater bulk to dispose of.

Again we are reminded of how bountiful nature comes to the rescue, repairing the ravages for which men are responsible. Man may blast a great part of the world with desolating war, but nature is never found wanting, everywhere rewarding intelligence and industry with her inexhaustible riches. Although local disturbance and temporary scarcity at points are inevitable, with normal conditions for the most part prevailing, with enlightened industry unceasing, joined with a satisfactory development of methods of distribution, nature will never fail to meet all the needs of man, her most favored child.

Plainfielders always make good apparently. With only four months' preliminary training the men forming the local platoon of cavalry went to Mt. Gretna on Saturday, and since being there have proven that they have all the necessary stamina and grit to form a splendid addition to the National Guard of the State. In these days citizen soldier organizations are being taken much more seriously than there were a year ago, prior to the great war. That the local troopers, like Company K, will soon be in the top-notch rank in the Guard is a safe bet. "Plainfield knows how."

Eugene Kinkead, sheriff of Hudson county, is entitled to all the plaudits that he has received from the press of the entire East for the splendid and determined way in which he settled the Bayonne strike. He has proven that sometimes it is best for a man who is usually modest to assume the spectacular. More power to him. Incidentally if he should be the Democratic candidate for Governor next year he would be "some" candidate for other parties to beat.

Do the people of New Jersey care what Elihu Root thinks about suffrage, anyway? It seems to us that the suffragists have dignified the matter unnecessarily by quoting the former United States Senator. New Jersey people are well able to determine for themselves, without paying any attention to a stand-pat politician, who will not even have a vote on the matter.

One aspirant to a seat in the next Assembly, in announcing his candidacy, declares that he is in favor of equal suffrage, because he thinks all property owners should have the right to vote, and there should be no taxation without representation. As the Trenton Times says, it is a little late to hope to make votes on the equal suffrage issue. That has been disposed of for the present, so far as the Legislature can dispose of it, and on October 19 the people of the State will render judgment.

Voluntary increases of ten per cent. in the pay envelopes of over a thousand local mechanics will help business along materially. More power to the manufacturing plants that are willing to share increased earnings with their employes, as is the case with the Saurer and Pond concerns.

People have had so much to discuss about the remarkable weather this summer that we have been relieved from the usual run of silly "gush" about politics which usually is heard during the hot weather.

One thing has been proven. It does not have to rain on St. Swithin's day in order to produce rain during the succeeding forty days. St. Swithin's was about the only day for weeks that it has not rained.

It has been suggested that the playgrounds be opened at night to provide breathing spaces these hot nights for the adults of the more crowded sections of the city. Such a move would be splendid.

The West End Avenue Sage says that now that W. de La R. Anderson has gone to work, a lot of Plainfielders are anxiously awaiting reports from Walter Linbarger.

Is Plainfield to have a machinists' strike, following the lead of other cities in the country? It certainly is to be hoped that such a condition can be avoided here.

The contributing editor for tomorrow will be Rev. John Y. Brook, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and one of Plainfield's most popular clergymen.

With an exchange we must admit that July has given us the best October weather we've ever known.

POLITICAL NOTES.

August 25—Union county Democrats hold annual outing at Witzel's Point View Grove, L. I.

August 27—Last day for filing county nomination petitions with county clerk.

September 7—First registration day.

September 21—Primary day and second registration day.

October 19—State referendum election, and third registration day.

November 2—General Election Day.

The handling of the big Bayonne strike by Sheriff Eugene F. Kinkead, of Hudson county, as been viewed in Democratic circles in Elizabeth with something akin to local pride. Although a resident of another community and an official of another county, Kinkead is a great favorite here. While still a college boy, Kinkead became prominent in Elizabeth as a halfback on the great football team of which the Elizabeth A. A. once boasted. Since entering politics, and especially during the last three years, Kinkead has become a regular Democratic attraction during campaign times, and also at affairs of a political flavor outside the campaigning season. This is mainly due, of course, to the fact that he is probably, next to Attorney-General Westcott, the most brilliant orator in New Jersey public life at the present time. This gift was fast winning him recognition in Congress when he decided to become sheriff of Hudson county instead.

Commissioner Hugh H. Mara, of Bayonne, who was twice arrested by Sheriff Kinkead for refusal to heed the latter's mandates, is a former resident of the lower section of Elizabeth. He moved across the bridge not so many years ago, and has been in Hudson county politics ever since. Mara is a loyal friend of Matt Cronin and H. Otto Wittpenn.

With Passaic county almost certain to return a Republican Senator to succeed the present Democratic incumbent, the G. O. P. is counting on at least a gain of two in its majority. Cape May is the other county that should return to its normal condition. The Wilson candidacy helped Cape May to establish a precedent in 1912 by electing a Democratic Senator. With no such stimulus this year, the Democratic organization is not expected to put up any big fight. Assemblyman Lewis T. Stevens and Luther C. Ogden are mentioned for the Republican nomination.

Friends of ex-Assemblyman Frank V. Dobbins are uncertain whether or not he will be a candidate for a Democratic Assembly nomination this year. Mr. Dobbins ran several hundred votes ahead of his ticket last year, and as he is an excellent campaigner he will probably be urged to enter the race. If elected, it is conceded that his previous record at Trenton would result in his gaining high honors in the organization of the Democratic representation next winter. However, it is a question if the internal difficulties of the Union county Democracy might not react against Mr. Dobbins' candidacy at this time. He was a candidate for State Commissioner against County Chairman Lucius T. Russell.

Neither party organization is expected to take any official cognizance of the woman's suffrage election. The leaders declare that there is no political division over the question, both organizations containing militant "pros" and determined "antis." Under those circumstances, they declare that a "hands off" policy is the proper one.

While not designedly so, the appointment of former Congressman William E Tuttle, Jr., as the United States representative at the coming exposition of the Panama Republic has removed the Westfield man from constant personal touch with his district just after his boom for another nomination had been launched at a testimonial banquet. However, Mr. Tuttle's duties will not demand his constant presence in Washington and Panama, and in about nine months he will be entirely through with the work. Mr. Tuttle's friends declare that his appointment was a peculiarly personal recognition from President Wilson, as the procedure in making such appointments is different from the procedure in the making of what might be called routine appointments.

Why do so many mothers take Wood Brook milk? Perhaps they have noticed the difference in the doctor's bills, if they are wise economists. But a mother's first thought is the children, and it does not take her long to discover that Wood Brook milk is health insurance for the children.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Fritzi Scheff, famous star of comic opera, who is at present making a tour of the vaudeville circuit, will appear for the first time in Plainfield at the U. S. Astor Theatre, this afternoon, in "Pretty Mrs. Smith," the photo-play version of the latest musical production in which she appeared at the Casino Theatre, New York.

"Pretty Mrs. Smith" gives the sprightly little star abundant opportunities to portray just the type of character for which she is best fitted. The comic action is swift from beginning to end and it is a comedy of a refined quality. There are no Chaplinisms and so-called "slap-stick" "stuff," but the entire production is one in which discriminating theatregoers will find favor.

It is safe to say that there is no more popular stage star than Fritzi Scheff among Plainfield theatregoers. Miss Scheff has appeared on the local stage in person and it will indeed be pleasant for her many admirers in this city to see that she acts on the screen with all the charm and nerve that characterizes her work on the stage. Miss Scheff is seen at the pinnacle of her dramatic form in this film. Of course, it is to be regretted that the dainty comedienne will be unable to sing, but the many exciting episodes in the film make up for the absence of her voice.

Knowing a locality thoroughly, studying and realizing the wants and wishes of a community and dealing on a fair and open business basis are qualities upon which is founded the success of the United States Theatre Company, which operates in the U. S. Astor Theatre. It is by keeping close to the patrons of his many theatres, by knowing what they want and giving it to them before they ask for it, that Frank G. Hall, proprietor of the Astor, keeps his house well filled. Mr. Hall is preparing a list of feature photo-plays of the highest quality which he will exhibit at the Astor Theatre in the near future.

BEST AUTOMOBILE ROUTE TO THE JERSEY SEASHORE

Automobilists who have taken the trip to the seashore lately say that the best route to follow at present is the one by way of Metuchen and Perth Amboy. The bad stretch of road between South Amboy and Keyport has been put in fair condition, they say, only the road leading through the "hole in the wall" in South Amboy should be taken rather than the piece of road owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad, which leads around this narrow and poorly lighted passage under the railroad tracks. Apparently nothing in the way of improvements have been done to the railroad company's private roadway since it was constructed and opened to the public several years ago, and it is in very bad condition.

ATHLETES NOW BETTER THAN OLD

Records of Recent Years Show Men Have Made Big Advance.

DUFFY'S MARK STILL STANDS

Although Famous Sprinter's Time For 100 Yards Has Been Wiped Off Amateur Books, the Fact Remains It Has Never Been Broken—Other Instances.

That the advantages offered the present generation of track and field athletes account for the lowering of records made ten or more years ago is shown by a careful study of the amateur and collegiate records. In only a few cases do records made a decade ago still stand.

The fact is admitted that the stars of ten years ago did not have the lightning fast tracks to run upon nor did they have all the conveniences now given men who perform in the field events. One reason advanced for the lowering of records is the increased interest taken in the sport. Naturally this interest has led to closer and keener competition, with the result that marks have been shattered.

Although Arthur Duffy was the first recognized sprinter to run 100 yards in 9 3-5 seconds, the mark was taken away from him on grounds of professionalism. He made this mark in 1891. The mark was not equaled until Dan Kelly of Spokane tied it in 1906, and this performance still stands as the world's amateur record for the century.

In 1906 B. J. Wefers stepped the furlong in 21 1-5 seconds, but the mark has been tied many times. R. C. Craig of the University of Michigan tied it twice, and Dan Kelly of Spokane equaled it by running around one turn, while the others ran on the flat. Kelly also made his mark in 1906.

Maxey Long unhoubtedly was the best of the old time quarter milers. In 1900 he ran the 440 yards straightaway in 47 seconds and around a 352 yard lap track in 47 4-5 seconds. Several athletes have been credited with running the quarter in 47 4-5 seconds, but their performances have not been recognized by the record committee.

Charley Kilpatrick of the New York Athletic club, who hung up a mark of 1 minute 53 2-5 seconds for the half mile in 1895 at Travers island, has the distinction of being a runner to hold a record probably longer than any other amateur. The mark was not broken until J. E. Meredith stepped the distance in 1 minute 52½ seconds at the Olympic games in Stockholm in 1912.

J. P. Jones of Cornell shattered all outdoor marks for the mile run in the eastern collegiate at Cambridge in 1912 when he stepped the distance in 4 minutes 15 2-5 seconds and a year later lowered it to 4 minutes 13 2-5 seconds. T. S. Berna, also of Cornell, traversed the two mile route in 9 minutes 17 4-5 seconds. These performances shattered any published or recognized records.

In the 120 yard high hurdles the present day performers are at least a full second faster than those of a decade ago. The present record of 15 seconds is held jointly by Robert Simpson, F. C. Smithson and Fred Kelly.

HAUSER PRACTICING DAILY.

Arnold Expects to Be Back In Game In Very Short Time.

Arnold Hauser, the brilliant shortstop of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1911 and 1912, is working out at the ball park in St. Louis daily, and is expected to be back in the game in a short time. Hauser has been out for two years through a general breakdown, bordering on insanity a year ago, as the result of a series of misfortunes.

The first stroke of misfortune occurred when his father and mother met tragic deaths. Within a few weeks two of his babies were burned to death and then his wife died. All of these misfortunes took place within a few weeks, and all but wrecked the career of one of the most sensational young players that ever broke into the National league.

You need not keep "on your hands," to your present disadvantage, any real estate that is "good enough to advertise."

ENORMOUS SPOTS ARE FOUND ON THE SUN

St. Louis, July 30.—A spot six times the diameter of the earth has been observed upon the sun by astronomers at Christian Brothers College.

The spot appeared yesterday and will be visible until August 10. It first appeared last February, and now is on its seventh rotation with the sun.

UTILITY COMMISSIONERS APPROVE BOND ISSUE

Trenton, July 30.—The Board of Public Utility Commissioners today approved an issue of $65,000,000 of bonds for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The bonds are secured by a general mortgage on the railroad's property and franchises.

The mortgage will be executed to secure the railroad's bonds to be issued from time to time in so far as the mortgage will be a lien upon the leasehold interests of the United New Jersey Railroad and Canal Company and the Belvidere-Delaware Railroad Company, corporations of New Jersey. The bonds will mature June 1 1965, and will bear interest at 4½ per cent.

YOUNG WILDING FINE PLAYER.

Brother of Anthony is Expected to Be Tennis Star.

It is not likely that the name of Wilding, made famous in the annals of international lawn tennis by Anthony F. Wilding, will disappear from the lists of future Davis cup matches.

There is a younger brother who is rapidly rounding into the fullness of racket skill, and who is confidently expected to fill the gap in the Australian ranks left vacant by the untimely death of the well beloved Tony Wilding.

F. M. B. Fisher of Wellington, New Zealand, who is a member of the Australian parliament, has attended most of the cup matches on New York courts. He is a friend of Frederick B. Alexander, one of the first American Davis cup players to visit Australia.

"The younger Wilding is every bit as good as his brother, Tony," said Fisher. "He was a bit shy of the game because of the achievements of his elder brother. He just needs a bit of 'coming on' to be the duplicate of Tony. He's a hard hitting young fellow, who knows the science and the strokes.

"Now that Tony is gone this young Wilding is sure to land in Davis cup matches, for he is already a great player."

SCHANG IS MAKING GOOD.

Mack Trying Star Catcher Out as Third Baseman.

In the course of his efforts to fill the gap created by the retirement of Frank Baker to the simple life of farming and playing wildcat baseball, Connie Mack has conducted many an experiment this season, but his latest is perhaps the most surprising of them all. Wallie Schang, stripped of his mask and mitt, is now in the role of a third baseman. Though he has shown no signs of relenting toward Baker, the tall leader of the Mackmen has found it more difficult to fill the hole at third than he anticipated. It is the point through which many a ball game has slipped this season, but even now it is doubtful if he would consider any other terms for the home run king than he has already offered.

But by drafting one of the greatest catchers in the league for infield duty he has indicated that he is near the end of his resources for third sackers. Schang is the tenth or twelfth in the long list of candidates for the position. Oldring, Walsh, Murphy, Kopf and numerous newcomers have had a crack at it, but none of them showed any particular adaptability for the place. Schang has been at the station only a few days, but he seems to be doing as well as any of them. He has a good arm and is fielding neatly.

However, it is not likely that Schang is lost to the mitt and mask. It is understood that Connie Mack has no intention of keeping him at third permanently. Several of the youngsters who have recently been tried out there fielded well enough, but Connie figures that he needed Schang's hitting to carry along the more or less uncertain pitching the Athletics have been getting all season.

RED SOX LOOK LIKE BEST BET FOR AMERICAN LEAGUE PENNANT

While other American league teams have brighter individual stars, the Boston Red Sox are regarded as the best bet in the American league pennant race. That's because the team is strong all around, and is beginning to approach the Mack machine of a few years back.

A Galley o' Fun!

A SHORT STORY.

(From the Lawyers' Magazine.)

Comes now Ignatz Waldo, who complains of Miss Lucretia Smythe and declares that by reason of her grace, beauty, and general lovability he has lost his heart to her, wherefore he prays the said Miss Smythe that she take pity upon him and accede to his request, to wit, namely, that she join him in the bonds of holy wedlock.

Whereupon the hereinbefore-mentioned Miss Smythe treats the complainant in a cruel and inhuman manner, in that she laughs scornfully at him as he rests on his knees before her, and declares that she will never marry him because of a previous conviction in that she saw him kissing another girl at the railroad station on a day and date which she does not at the time recall to mind, all of which she swears is true to the best of her knowledge and belief.

In reply thereto the complainant prays for a writ of error, and states that the aforesaid Miss Smythe was in error when she made the kissing of the girl at the railroad station a cause for action, inasmuch as the young lady in question was and is a sister to the party of the first part, and under the Constitution of the United States and the rulings of the Interstate Commerce Commission (Ala. 2-34-6) such kissing cannot be made the basis of a complaint for unjust discrimination by the fiancee of said kisser. Whereupon Miss Smythe reverses her decision and orders that, after being signed, sealed, and delivered with a kiss, the marriage decree be duly and fully promulgated.

IN NEW YORK.

First Life-Insurance Agent.—How about Smythe? Is he a good risk?

Second Life-Insurance Agent.—He couldn't be better if he was under indictment for murder.

TOO MUCH.

He plucked the dandelion and blew upon it.

"She loves me—she loves me not!" he muttered inanely.

Now, the flower had suffered long and if its patience hereupon broke down under the strain, what wonder.

"O, ask me about Schedule K, or something relatively easy!" it exclaimed bitterly.

WHERE?

"And where," demanded his wife with flashing eyes, "would you be now, only for me?"

The man glanced at the clock. It was verging on midnight. He sighed, and was silent.

UNREASONING CHILDHOOD

Mother (to five-year-old daughter)—Yes dear, Heaven is the most beautiful place there is—every one is happy there—and if you are good some day you will go there.

Daughter.—Well, mamma, if it's so nice up there, why did you have the doctor come and save your life when you had such a good chance to die

A GOOD REASON.

My Mabel cannot sing a note,
She writes no verses free,
She cannot paint a little boat
Upon a waveless sea.

But friend, I bid you, do not pause
And say with knowing look:
"He loves his Mabel just because
She certainly can cook!"

It is not that she cooks, O no!
That wins her place so high—
I can and do love Mabel so
Because she doesn't try!

THE UNLUCKY NUMBER.

Mrs. Henpeque.—Were you going down for the third time, John, when the life-guard saved you?

Mr. Henpeque (regretfuly).—No, my dear; it was the thirteenth!

THE HORROR.

"We had an Uncle Tom's Cabin company at the Op'ry House night before last."

"Ah!" returned the facetious drummer. "Did the venerable drama seem to depict the horrors of slavery as vividly as it used to?"

"Well, it depicted the horrors of Uncle Tom's Cabin as vividly as ever."

WHAT THEY ALL SAY.

Employer.—I hope you save something out of your salary, James?

Office-Boy.—Yes, sir; 'most all of it, sir.

Employer (eagerly).—Do you want to buy an automobile cheap?

HELP.

Miss Casey.—And when we are married, papa, we are going to build a bungalow. We are saving for it now.

Casey.—And Oi'll help ye, Mary. Shure, Oi'll begin savin' the bung now, though 'twill take a long time to save enough to be av iny use.

P. S. C. TO MAKE MONTHLY REPORT

Full Publicity to Be Given in the Future of the Operations of the Company.

The Public Service Corporation of New Jersey has decided to hereafter make monthly financial reports for the information of the general public. It has been the custom of the company to make such statements only once a year, preceding the stockholders' annual meeting, but the directors recently voted to change this policy for the plan of giving more publicity to the affairs of the corporation.

In the first statement issued in accordance with the new policy the first six months of the year are covered. Future statements will cover monthly operations as well as show figures for the proportion of the year up to the date of the report.

Even with the unsettled conditions of the past six months the corporation shows a gain in gross earnings over the first half of 1914 amounting to $631,835.61, or a percentage of increase of 3.6 per cent. The balance available—after the payment of operating expenses, fixed charges, sinking fund requirements, etc.,—for amortization, dividends and surplus, amounted to $1,597,441.86 which means that the increase in surplus available for dividends over the corresponding period of 1914 was $149,595.81.

MUST PAY LIGHTING RATE ON CURRENT USED BY GENERATOR

Trenton, July 30.—Holding that to give the Bell Electric Motor Company of Garwood illumniating service at power rates would be discrimination against other customers, the Board of Public Utility Commissioners yesterday dismissed the complaint of the motor company against the Public Service Electric Company.

Complaint was made when the Public Service notified the Bell company that the use of current from a motor generating set for lighting purposes would have to be discontinued unless arrangements were made to pay for current used by the motor at the regular lighting rate. The Board held that service for an electric sign and for ordinary factory illumination, whether furnished directly or through a motor generator set, should be charged in accordance with the regular lighting schedule.

ITALIANS OUTNUMBER IRISH IN JERSEY CITY'S POPULATION

There are a few more of German birth than of either Irish or Italian, the total in this class being 13,955.

Those born in all other countries number 29,036, while there are 196,569 native-born Americans out of a total population of 270,903. The number of naturalized citizens is stated to be 23,920. "FATHER OF BIG GUNS."

Washington, July 30.—This is the hundredth aniversary of the birth of Thomas Rodman, a lieutenant-colonel of the army, who invented the method of hollow casting for big guns, and whose experiments laid the foundation for the development of the modern big guns. From the results of his experiments upon metal for cannon and the effect of gunpowder, the design and construction of fifteen and twenty-inch guns were based. The path he marked out has been followed by other investigators and led to the development of the great guns of modern warfare.

PLAINFIELD CHILDREN APPEAR IN VAUDEVILLE

New Providence, July 30.—Rev. Joseph J. McGrath, rector of the Catholic church, sprang a surprise at the benefit dance in St. Mary's Hall Wednesday night by staging several acts of vaudeville by professional children from Plainfield, who donated their services.

The children included Charles Pagliuca and Miss Marguerite C. Gramery. Their entertainment consisted of songs and dancing. The diversion was popularly received by the large attendance of dancers. Miss Gramery sang "My Old Home Town in Ireland. They were accompanied on the piano by Miss Jennie Higgins, also of Plainfield.

It was announced that the children would again perform gratuitously at a dance to be held in St. Mary's Hall on August 11.

TURNS DETECTIVE AND FINDS HORSE HE SAYS WAS STOLEN

Keansburg, July 30.—Richard Baldwin, of Plainfield, who is spending the summer at the Locust Cottage, on Main street, has returned from Long Branch with his horse and carriage, which, it is alleged, were stolen Tuesday. Two men, whose names were learned later to be Harold C. Rogers and Paul Hart, of New York, rented the horse and buggy, and when they did not return Mr. Baldwin went to Long Branch, where, with the aid of a policeman, he found the men at a hotel bar.

Rogers and Hart were arraigned before the chief of police and were then sent to Freehold to await the action of the grand jury. They are alleged to have sold the outfit to Jones' livery stable in Long Branch.

OCEAN GROVE TO MARK ITS 46TH ANNIVERSARY SATURDAY

Ocean Grove, July 30.—In observance of the forty-sixth anniversary of its founding, the Grove will celebrate memorial day tomorrow. The exercises will follow the long-established precedents, and will take place first in the Tabernacle, then in Founder's Park and later in the Young People's Temple.

At the initial exercises in the Tabernacle the names of those residents of the Grove who died during the year will be read. Brief services will be held in Founder's Park and in the Young People's Temple. Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of New York, will deliver the formal address. Brief addresses will also be made by James A. Bradley, founder of Asbury Park; Treasurer John E. Andrus, of the Ocean Grove Campmeeting Association, and the association president, Rev. Dr. Aaron E. Ballard.

190 MEN WILL PATROL THE STATE'S HIGHWAYS

Harrisburg, Pa., July 30.—The daily patrol of the highways of the State will be inaugurated in Pennsylvania next Monday. At first 190 men will be on the job, and later this number will be increased. The innovation marks an entirely new era in road maintenance.

It is figured out that although the constant patrol of the roadways will be expensive, it will cost not over $65 a mile during a year. Under the old order of things the State has been expending a half million dollars a year in rebuilding and repairing roads.

A unique method of keeping the roads in repair has been adopted. Along the highways, at frequent intervals, small piles of stone chips and gravel have been placed, which will be used in patching holes as they are found during the daily inspection. Barrels of oil to be used where needed are also placed at each quarter of a mile.

The road patrols will immediately fill in holes and remove obstructions when they are found. They will also care for the edges of the highways. Each patrol will have an outfit on wheels which will provide him with tools and materials for quick repairs. Superintendents in automobiles will keep in touch with the patrols and observe the work.

It is the ultimate plan to give each patrol six miles of roadway to care for. Other States are watching the inauguration of the new idea, and if it works out satisfactorily, many of them will adopt similar measures.

The importance of quick repairs is realized by the highway departments of the various States. The neglect of a few breaks often leads to destruction of some of the best roadways.

TIME CLOCKS FOR POLICE.

Bordentown, July 30.—The Bordentown Board of Commissioners has decided to install a system of time clocks in the city. They are to be placed in the several wards and it will be the duty of the city marshal and night officers to visit each station three or four times during their hours of service. The commissioners say they have received numerous complaints that the officers are not doing their work properly.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Plans for Plainfield's annual dog show will be greatly accelerated if those interested in the four-legged beasts will co-operate between now and August 1 with the officials of the local kennel club. Co-operation is the chief ingredient toward the success of such an enterprise and the efforts of the club to again stage this notable event here are worthy of conosiderable commendation. It is the desire of the organization to hold it within Plainfield's borders but unless someone comes to the fore with new information relative to available sites it is pretty likely to go to Elizabeth. Forseeing this condition leaders of the Queen City Club recently inaugurated a club in Elizabeth and efforts were made to combine the two Union county organizations under one head. This met with disapproval on the part of the American Kennel Club, however, and had to be abandoned. We don't want to lose this big event in Plainfield and we're not going to unless local fanciers fail to do their share of the labor attached to the enterprise.

Announcement that a local hotel management is going to make a bid to have the 1916 State lawn tennis championships decided in Plainfield comes as a complete and pleasant surprise to followers of the court pastime hereabouts. There are some well known racquet wielders who have expressed disapproval over the sites selected in recent years for the title matches and there is little doubt but what the shift to Queen City terra firma would be welcomed all around. No little amount of prestige would be gained by the municipality in tennis circles if the events could be brought here and at the present time we see no obstacle that would hinder such an arrangement. Such competition would also serve to boom the outdoor game in these parts and it is not unlikely that some of our own talent would put in a strong bid for the crown.

Few there were around here two months ago who would believe that an amateur ball league could thrive in Plainfield. In fact a majority of baseball's wiseacres scorned the idea and appeared contented to accept the theory that the national pastime "was dead" in the old Queen City. Practical experience involving both competition and gate receipts, however, has put the pessimists to rout and it now looks as though the organization was going to be a long and welcome visitor. If you are one of those pessimists who hasn't seen one of the exhibition up to the present time it might be well for you to take an afternoon off tomorrow and give the youngsters the "once-over." They're a likely bunch and those who know baseball claim that the ingredients of professional talent lurk in several of the rosters.

Because of certain sympathy we have for the "grand old man of the roped arena" we are endeavoring to withhold any criticism of Bob Fitzsimmons' desire to engage in an exhibition bout with Jess Willard or Jack Johnson at the Havana Sporting Club. There are some sport promoters who would like nothing better than to draw the freckled specimen of herculean human development into a scrap of this kind but the more optimistic entertain a fear of the result. Fitz has long since passed his stage of usefulness in the prize ring and if he still longs for the mitts it would be best for him to stick to training the younger generation in the art that won him a tidy fortune in days of yore. The Dunellenite has long since ceased to indulge in his long runs from that village to Plainfield and this in itself is taken as a prominent indication of the effects advancing years are having on his athletic ability.

Because of a death that has occurred during the past week in the family of one of the City League's three official umpires, it will be necessary tomorrow to inject a new decision server into the fray. Whether Hymie Abrams or George Gage will be elected to serve is a matter of conjecture at the present time, but it is fairly evident that the former is favored for the task inasmuch as he was the first to file application for enlistment on the arbitrators' staff at the beginning of the season. This is the first occasion on which it has been necessary to disrupt the faithful and efficient trio who have performed in the league games to date and the organization will have its first opportunity to feel just how fortune has favored it.

Rumors have been circulated hereabouts during the past few weeks that certain additions will be made to the A. A. U. list of basketball referees in and about Plainfield. On authoritative information from the A. A. U. committee on officials it was learned today that no new names would be included in next year's list. In view of the fact that Charles R. Bostwick has removed to Honolulu this leaves but one local official for next fall who has the credentials of the A. A. U.

PLAINFIELD JUNIORS WILL ENTERTAIN RAHWAY CLAN

Sam Semer's Plainfield Juniors will meet the Rahway Juniors at either Parker Field or Crescent Oval tomorrow afternoon. Semer will use his best line-up in an endeavor to take a fall out of the visitors, who have a reputation for winning anything they want. Butler, who helped the Garwoods to one hit last Saturday, will be on the firing line for the locals, and his curves will be handled by either Cohen or Marsh.

Mullins, Boos, Trotter, Semer, Dodd and Brandt will be among those present when the Plainfield roll is called. The line-up of the Rahway team has not been given out, but it is said to contain players who were unable to make the big team, on which Tommy Mullin, of this city, performs.

TRACK MEET AT FRISCO.

San Francisco, July 30—The Far Western amateur track championship meet began here today, with teams competing from the coast cities. Howard Drew, the speedy colored boy, is in the sprints; Emil Muller, the present national discus champion, and Fred Thomson, the all-round champion, are entered in the various events. Borfgstrom, holder of the world's interscholastic pole-vault record, will be seen in action. The winners will be seen in competition with the best amateurs of other sections of the country in the national championships to be held here next week.

GOTCH WRESTLES AGAIN.

Humboldt, Ia., July 30—Frank Gotch will make his postponed "comeback" today when he will grapple to a finish with Henry Ordeman, of Minneapolis, best two in three falls. The match will be pulled off in the County Fair grounds. Carl Stecher, Gotch's latest find, has been training the retired champion.

TRINITY CHURCH TEAM WILL MEET THE FARMERS

The Trinity baseball team and the Farmers will go at it tomorrow on Hyde Oval. Both teams are out for victory, and both are considered very fast. Last Saturday the Trinitys took the measure of the Fanwoods, while the Farmers hung one on the Plainfield Juniors.

The outfits will line-up as follows:

Trinity—J. Dawe, ss; Marsh, 2b; J. Kirch, 3b; Dilts, p; Newkirk, c; B. Dawe, lf; Van Nest, rf; French, rf; Harvey, 1b; Larison, cf.

Farmers' A. C.—Ryan, cf; Anderson, 1b; Peterson, 2b; Morley, c; Marsh, ss; Baker, rf; Campbell, lf; Triel, 3b; Sims, p.

ROD AND REEL

Blackfish, weakfish and sea bass have been caught in great numbers in the Klondyke Banks, Great Kills and Sea Bright Regions.

Great catches of salmon have been registered in Rangely Lake, in the Maine region, during the last few weeks:

Seymour's Pond, Cape Cod, was the scene of a great catch the other day. A 27-inch pickerel was landed by one of the anglers who was fishing there.

TENNIS AT WESTFIELD.

A man's doubles tennis tournament will commence on the courts of the Westfield Country Club tomorrow. The event is scheduled to begin at 2 p. m., and will be for the championship of the city. Cups will be presented to the winners and suitable prizes for the runners-up."

Some grand exhibitions are on tap for tomorrow in the City League race, and the league leadership is at stake. Of course, if both the present top-notch teams maintain their standing nothing unusual will happen. However, the Tabs get the chance to put the Netherwoods back a space, and are going to make the most of their opportunity. If they succeed and the Hopes succumb to defeat at the hands of the Clintons, the Abstainers will again adorn the top of the league ladder. The Baptists have been greatly reinforced and ought to put one over on the Saurer team, inasmuch as Warry McLaughlin is not carded to pitch. All of the games should draw well, as the fans will have a chance to see two sets of teams battle with each other for the first time.

Dick Schott will attend to the pitching problem for the Chapelites, and Benny Rosenson will likely oppose him. Tone Denny and Russ Stewart, both East Enders, will go against each other in the Tab-Netherwood affair. Stewart spent yesterday at the shore preparing for the match. However, the Abstainers have made a change in their line-up, and great things may be expected. Lanky "Dunk" Patterson or "Germany" Stahl will be on the hillock for the "luckless lads." Who will shoot them over for Britt Martin and his men is not known, but in all probability "Babe" Gleason will be given another chance to do something for his fellows. The last time this youth did duty he was visited with such a fusilade of shots that he had to admit he had met his waterloo.

RE-ARRANGE LEAGUES AT THE PLAYGROUND

Wriston Introduces a Plan to Take Care of All Youthful Ballists.

George W. Wriston, who has charge of the playground work in this city, and who is in attendance at Parker Field daily, has mapped out a plan which he thinks will be unusually successful, and which has already met the approval of the boys under his care. Up to the present time there has been a baseball organization at Parker Field, known as the Junior League, inasmuch as only the smaller fellows have been allowed to play on the teams represented. This did not give the bigger lads a chance to get in a game at all.

The organization of a senior circuit seemed impossible as there were not enough large fellows to form four teams. However, Supervisor Wriston met the situation halfway, and has decided to disband the small circuit and organize a larger one. In order to give all the boys, big and little, a chance to perform on the teams, he has registered the names of about five big fellows on each of the four or five teams. The rest of the roster of fifteen will be made up of the best of the younger youths.

Each boy will be given a chance to earn a regular berth, and the development of many future greats looked forward to. Ice cream will be given out to the members of the teams which do not bow to defeat during one whole week.

RECORDS FOR "THE DUKE."

Hawaiian Swimmer, Kahanamoku, Wins Races in Honolulu Meet.

Duke Kahanamoku, the Hawaiian swimmer, made two world's records in a swimming meet in Honolulu recently. He clipped three-fifths of a second off his own mark for fifty yards, covering the distance in 0:23 flat, and swam 100 yards in 0:53 1-5, 0:01 2-5 better than his previous world's record.

Kahanamoku and Edward Cunha swam 220 yards in 2:29 to a dead heat. Out of seven starts Kahanamoku got six firsts and one second.

CENTRAL WEST TO HAVE CRACK TEAM AT NATIONAL A. A. U. MEET

The central west will be represented by a formidable team in the National A. A. U. outdoor track and field championships, to be held at San Francisco August 6 and 7. This was fully demonstrated in the trials held by the Central A. A. U. on Stagg field in Chicago. One of the sensations of this preliminary meet was the work of Joie Ray, Illinois Athletic club, who did the mile in 4:16 2-5, beating the National A. A. U. championship time of 4:18 3-5 and coming within three and four-fifths seconds of the world's amateur record established by Norman S. Taber of Brown university a few days ago.

Some of central west representatives: Top, Joie Ray, setting mile-run mark, and Robert Simpson, 120-yard high hurdle man; bottom, A. Richards, running high jumper, and L. Talbott, who does things with the weights.

LOCAL BOYS ACTIVE AT Y. M. C. A. CAMP

Plainfielders Prominent in Athletics and Along Various Other Lines.

Sunburned and brimful of vigor injected during a vacation spent at Lake Wawayanda, four members of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., in charge of Leader Frank O. Dunning, Jr., returned home from the State Y. M. C. A. Boys' Camp last night. That Plainfield has kept apace of its high status in the State camp work is evidenced by the records brought back by Walcott Calkins, Wendell Purcell, Kenneth Stover and Albert Coddington, the campers who returned home last night. The Queen City youths occupied a prominent place in aquatics, athletics and various other routine events on the island in the Indian lake of northern New Jersey.

Plainfield representatives tallied a grand total of 222 points in athletics during the last section, bringing the local association's season total up to 1,684, and make it a prominent factor in the race for a silver trophy. Walcott Calkins, son of Plainfield's Mayor, won the German bowling title for the last section, receiving a camp medal for his achievement. He will play the winners of the competition in other sections at the close of the summer for a silver trophy.

In athletics Roy Estes tallied 93.5 points, Wendell Purcell totaled 51 points and John Hammann had 78 to his credit. Hammann also divided the prize for the best make-up in the camp's sectional "amateur night" performance, with Herbert McNair, of Brooklyn. Another large party of Plainfield boys went to the camp yesterday for a two weeks' visit.

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

JITNEY TAX WOULD INCREASE LONG BRANCH REVENUE $1,200

Long Branch, July 30.—If the jitney ordinance introduced at this week's meeting of the City Commissioners passes two weeks hence, and it is believed it will, the city will be $1,200 richer, as each jitney owner will be required to pay a $25 license fee. Besides, the drivers will have to take out a license and pass an examination.

Two years ago between forty and fifty stages were annually licensed by the commissioners. The number is now under twelve, while the jitney drivers have increased from three on May 1 to fifty. There are lines running in all directions, and it is not an uncommon thing for trips to be made to Jersey City with passengers who had missed the last train.

By HAMLIN GARLAND

CHAPTER XV.

Wayland Hears From Home.

IT was almost noon of the fourth day when the supervisor called up to say that he was at the office and would reach the ranch at 6 o'clock.

"I wish you would come home at once," his wife argued, and something in her voice convinced him that he was more needed at home than in the town.

"All right, mother. Hold the fort an hour, and I'll be there."

Mrs. McFarlane met him at the hitching bar, and it required but a glance for him to read in her face a troubled state of mind.

"This has been a disastrous trip for Berrie," she said after one of the hands had relieved the supervisor of his horse.

"In what way?"

She was a bit impatient. "Mrs. Belden is filling the valley with the story of Berrie's stay in camp with Mr. Norcross."

His face showed a graver line. "It couldn't be helped. The horses had to be followed, and that youngster could not do it, and, besides, I expected to get back that night. Nobody but an old snoop like Seth Belden would think evil of our girl, and, besides, Norcross is a man to be trusted."

"Of course he is, but the Beldens are ready to think evil of any one connected with us. And Cliff's assault on Wayland"—

He looked up quickly. "Assault! Did he make trouble?"

"Yes. He overtook them on the trail and would have killed Norcross if Berrie hadn't interfered. He was crazy with jealousy."

"Nash didn't say anything about any assault."

"He didn't know it. Berrie told him that Norcross fell from his horse."

"Good God! I never suspected a word of this. I didn't think he'd do that."

He fixed another penerating look upon her face, and his voice was vibrant with anxiety as he said, "You don't think there's anything—wrong?"

"No, nothing wrong, but she's profoundly in love with him. I never have seen her so wrapped up in any one. She thinks of nothing else. It scares me to see it, for I've studied him closely and I can't believe he feels the same toward her. His world is so different from ours. I don't know what to do or say. I fear she is in for a period of great unhappiness."

The return of the crew from the corral cut short this conference, and when McFarlane went in Berrie greeted him with such frank and joyous expression that all his fears vanished.

"Did you come over the high trail?" she asked.

"No, I came your way. I didn't want to take any chances of getting mired. It's still raining up there," he answered; then turned to Wayland: "Here's your mail, Norcross, a whole hatful of it—and one telegram in the bunch. Hope it isn't serious."

Wayland took the bundle of letters and retired to his room, glad to escape the persistent stare of the cowhands. The dispatch was from his father and was curt and specific as a command: "Shall be in Denver on the 23d. Meet me at the Palmer House. Am on my way to California. Come prepared to join me on the trip."

With the letters unopened in his lap he sat in silent thought, profoundly troubled by the instant decision which this message demanded of him. At first glance nothing was simpler than to pack up and go. He was only a tourist in the valley, with no intention of staying, but there was Beren! To go meant a violent end of their pleasant romance. To think of flight saddened him, and yet his better judgment was clearly on the side of going. "Much as I like her, much as I admire her, I cannot marry her. The simplest way is to frankly tell her so and go. It seems cowardly, but in the end she will be happier."

His letters carried him back into his own world. One was from Will Halliday, who was going with Professor Holsman on an exploring trip up the Nile. "You must join us. Holsman has promised to take you on." Another classmate wrote to know if he did not want to go into a land deal on the gulf of Mexico. A girl asked: "Are you to be in New York this winter? I am. I've decided to go into this suffrage movement." And so, one by one, the threads which bound him to eastern city life respun their filaments. After all, this Colorado outfing, even though it should last two years, would only be a vacation. His real life was in the cities of the east.

Charming as Berea was, potent as she seemed, she was, after all, a fixed part of the mountain land and not to be taken from it. At the moment marriage with her appeared absurd.

A knock at his door and the supervisor's voice gave him a keen shock. "Come in," he called, springing to his feet with a thrill of dread, of alarm.

McFarlane entered slowly and shut the door behind him. His manner was serious and his voice gravely gentle as he said, "I hope that telegram does not call you away."

"It is from my father asking me to meet him in Denver," answered Norcross, with faltering breath. "He's on his way to California. Won't you sit down?"

The older man took a seat with quiet dignity. "Seems like a mighty fine chance, don't it? I've always wanted to see the coast. When do you plan for to pull out?"

"I haven't decided to go at all. I'm still dazed by the suddenness of it. I didn't know my father was planning this trip."

"I see. Well, before you decide to go I'd like to have a little talk with you. My daughter has told me part of what happened to you on the trail. I want to know all of it. You're young, but you've been out in the world, and you know what people can say about you and my girl." His voice became level and menacing as he added, "And I don't intend to have her put in wrong on account of you."

Norcross was quick to reply. "Nobody will dare accuse her of wrongdoing. She's a noble girl. No one will dare to criticise her for what she could not prevent."

"You don't know the Beldens. My girl's character will be on trial in every house in the county tomorrow. The Belden side of it will appear in the city papers. Sympathy will be with Clifford. Berrie will be made an issue by my enemies. They'll get me through her."

"Good Lord," exclaimed Norcross in sudden realization of the gravity of the case, "what beasts they are!"

"Moore's gang will seize upon it and work it hard," McFarlane went on, with calm insistence. "They want to bring the district forester down on me. This is a fine chance to badger me. They will make a great deal of my putting you on the roll. Our little camping trip is likely to prove a serious matter to us all."

"Good Lord," exclaimed Norcross in sudden realization of the gravity of the case, "what beasts they are!"

"Surely you don't consider me at fault."

Worried as he was, the father was just. "No, you're not to blame. No one is to blame. It all dates back to the horses quitting camp. But you've got to 'stand pat now for Berrie's sake."

"But what can I do? I'm at your service. What role shall I play? Tell me what to do and I will do it."

McFarlane was staggered, but he answered: "You can at least stay on the ground and help fight. This is no time to stampede."

"You're right. I'll stay, and I'll make any statement you see fit. I'll do anything that will protect Berrie."

McFarlane again looked him squarely in the eyes. "Is there a—an agreement between you?"

"Nothing formal—that is, I mean I admire her, and I told her"— He stopped, feeling himself on the verge of the irrevocable. "She's a splendid girl," he went on. "I like her exceedingly, but I've known her only a few weeks."

McFarlane interrupted. "Girls are flighty critters," he said sadly. "I don't know why she's taken to you so terrible strong, but she has. She don't seem to care what people say so long as they do not blame you. But if you should pull out you might just as well cut her heart to pieces"— His voice broke, and it was a long time before he could finish. "You're not at fault—I know that—but if you can stay on a little while and make it an ounce or two easier for her and for her mother I wish you'd do it."

Wayland extended his hand impulsively. "Of course I'll stay. I never really thought of leaving." In the grip of McFarlane's hand was something warm and tender.

Berrie could not be entirely deceived. She read in her father's face a subtle change of line which she related to something Wayland had said. "Did he tell you what was in the telegram? Has he got to go away?" she asked anxiously.

"Yes, he said it was from his father."

"What does his father want of him?"

"He's on his way to California and wants Wayland to go with him, but Wayland says he's not going."

A pang shot through Berrie's heart. "He mustn't go—he isn't able to go," she exclaimed, and her pain, her fear, came out in her sharpened, constricted tone. "I won't let him go—till he's well."

Mrs. McFarlane gently interposed. "He'll have to go, honey, if his father needs him."

"Let his father come here." She rose and, going to his door, decisively knocked. "May I come in?" she demanded rather than asked before her mother could protest. "I must see you."

Wayland opened the door, and she entered, leaving her parents facing each other in mute helplessness.

Mrs. McFarlane turned toward her husband with a face of despair. "She's ours no longer, Joe. Our time of bereavement has come."

He took her in his arms. "There, there, mother, don't cry. It can't be helped. You cut loose from your parents and came to me in just the same way. Our daughter's a grown woman and must have her own life. All we can do is to defend her against the coyotes who are busy with her name."

"But what of him, Joe; he don't care for her as she does for him. Can't you see that?"

"He'll do the right thing, mother; he told me he would. He knows how much depends on his staying here now, and he intends to do it."

"But in the end, Joe, after this scandal is lived down, can he—will he—marry her? And if he marries her can they live together and be happy? His way of life is so different. He can't content himself here, and she can't fit in where he belongs. It all seems hopeless to me. Wouldn't it be better for her to suffer for a little while now than to make a mistake that may last a lifetime."

"Mebbe it would, mother, but the decision is not ours. She's too strong for us to control. She's of age, and if she comes to a full understanding of the situation she can decide the question a whole lot better than either of us."

"That's true," she sighed. "In some ways she's bigger and stronger than both of us. Sometimes I wish she were not so self reliant."

When Wayland caught the startled look on Berrie's face he knew that she had learned from her father the contents of his telegram and that she would require an explanation.

"Are you going away?" she asked.

"Yes. At least, I must go down to Denver to see my father. I shall be gone only overnight."

"And will you tell him about our trip?" she pursued, with unflinching directness. "And about me?"

He gave her a chair and took a seat himself before replying. "Yes, I shall tell him all about it and about you and your father and mother. He shall know how kind you've all been to me."

He said this bravely, and at the moment he meant it, but as his father's big, impassive face and cold, keen eyes came back to him his courage sank, and in spite of his firm resolution some part of his secret anxiety communicated itself to the girl, who asked many questions with intent to find out more particularly what kind of man the elder Norcross was.

Wayland's replies did not entirely reassure her. He admitted that his father was harsh and domineering in character and that he was ambitious to have his son take up and carry forward his work. "He was willing enough to have me go to college till he found I was specializing on wrong lines. Then I had to fight in order to keep my place. He's glad I'm out here, for he thinks I'm regaining my strength. But just as soon as I'm well enough he expects me to go to Chicago and take charge of the western office. Of course I don't want to do that. I'd rather work out some problem in chemistry that interests me, but I may have to give in for a time at least."

"Will your mother and sisters be with your father?"

"No, indeed! You couldn't get any one of them west of the Hudson river with a log chain. My sisters were both born in Michigan, but they want to forget it. They pretend they have forgotten it. They both have New Yorkitis. Nothing but the big hotels will do them now."

"I suppose they think we're all 'Injuns' out here?"

"Oh, no, not so bad as that. But they wouldn't comprehend anything about you except your muscle. That would catch 'em. They'd worship your splendid health, just as I do. It's pitiful the way they both try to put on weight. They're always testing some new food, some new tonic. They'll do anything except exercise regularly and go to bed at 10 o'clock."

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Funny Dispute of the Little Garments.

Along Came the Sandman.

"I THINK one of the funniest disputes I ever heard of," declared daddy, beginning his evening story for Jack and Evelyn ere they went to bedde, "was the dispute of the little boy's clothes.

"Perhaps you will say that little boy's clothes can't talk, but every mamma who has to mend them knows well enough that they tell a story.

"Well, I think that this dispute must have occurred when the little boy was safely tucked away in his pajamas in bed. He was resting and dreaming. How shall I tell what he dreamed?

"Anyway, it must have been something pleasant, for the little boy smiled as he slept. And the little clothes dreamed, too, I think, as they lay on the chair near the little boy's bed. But a shaft of moonlight shone through the window upon the little clothes, and this must have wakened them.

"And no sooner were they awake than they fell to quarreling and disputing about the use they were to the little boy and to the world.

"The little pants started it. Said the little pants: 'The rest of you are just ornamental, but that little boy has to have us. And he has to have more of us than of any of the rest of you. Every once in awhile his daddy or his mamma has to go to the store and buy a new pair of us. And his mamma has to patch us too. He's harder on us than he is on the rest of his clothes. We're most important, we are.'

"Then up spoke the little shoes and said: 'Oh, what are you talking about, you little pants? He wears us out a lot quicker than he does you. Look at how strong we are, but in two weeks he has us looking like a pair of tramps. Look at where he's stubbed us, and see where little holes have begun to come in our soles already. We shall have to pay a visit to the cobbler in a day or two. We love to visit the cobbler, we know him so well.'

"'You boast too much,' spoke up the little shirt. 'You pants don't know the little boy's mamma, and you shoes don't know the cobbler half so well as I know the wash lady. Every week I go into that lovely tub of soapsuds, along with a lot of other little shirts, and I come out so spick and span. But he gets me soiled again very soon.'

"So they fell to quarreling, and along came the sandman again and said: 'Why, I thought I put you little fellows to sleep once, along with the little boy. Now, you go to sleep again, for you need rest. You have work to do tomorrow.'

"So they went to sleep again. And they had work to do the next day, all right."

FLOUNCES VERY POPULAR.

No. 8957.

Hardly a day passes without some new style feature becoming evident. One of the fixtures of the season, however—a style that bids fair to remain for some time due to its inherent excellence is the flounced dress. For summer afternoon and evening wear Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8957 a dress of this type illustrated above, cannot be surpassed. Best of all though, flounces are not only chic, winning and eminently dainty, but they are surprisingly easily made by the home dressmaker. Dress No. 8957 is suitable for bordered materials and flouncings and consists of a foundation waist to be made with high neck and standing collar, round or low neck and full-length or shorter puff sleeves with or without sleeve caps, a bolero jacket cut straight at the lower edge and laid in soft plaits on the shoulder in front; a five-gored skirt with three straight flounces which are perforated to cut away in panel effect in front. Pattern cuts in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 18 requires 4¼ yards 36-inch material and 9 yards 18-inch flouncing.

DIVINES AT MOODY CONFERENCE

East Northfield, Mass., July 30.—At the General Conference for Christian Workers, which opened here today at the Moody Schools, some of the most able speakers of America and Europe will be heard. Rev. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, of Westminster Chapel, London; Rev. Len G. Broughton, formerly of Atlanta, now of London; Rev. Stuart Holden and Rev. Charles Inglis, also from England, will deliver addresses. The conference will extend until August 15.

That funny fellow Scoop is on the classified page.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Official notice has been given that Monday night is the time set for the receiving of the last guesses in the popular victrola contest. The musical instrument will be awarded to the lucky guesser Tuesday evening. Contestants should note that they should be on hand at that time with their cards in order that the award might be made.

"Dr. Rameau," a modern society drama, with Frederick Perry playing the stellar role, and ably supported by Jean Sothern, Stuart Holmes, Dorothy Bernard and George Alison, is the feature film for this evening. The fact that this is a Fox film bespeaks a heart patronage.

Those who love pictures with plenty of excitement should be on hand tomorrow, either afternoon or evening, when "The Gangsters," a photo-production without an equal, is to be shown. Here the New York East Side gangs, the tenements, the rottenness of politics and the lure of the lights of the great city are shown true to life, with the awfulness of sweatshop conditions shown as in actual life.

Remember that 100 votes for the McKeon Shetland pony contest are given with each and every ticket.

DEFENDERS FOR PHILIPPINES.

Washington, July 30—Five additional companies of coast artillery have been ordered to the Philippine fortifications, recently completed to strengthen Manila and the entrance to Manila Bay. The Fourth and Thirty-sixth Companies leave Fort Mott, N. J., today, and the Seventeenth Company leave Fort Washington, Md., today. The 111th Company left Fort Dade, Fla., yesterday, and the Thirty-third Company will leave Fort Columbia, Washington State, on Monday. The Ninth regiment of Cavalry, now at Douglas, Ariz., will leave there on Monday for the Philippines, to relieve the Seventh regiment of cavalry. The Twenty-fourth infantry, now in the Philippines, will be relieved in September by the Twenty-seventh regiment, now at Texas City, Tex.

MAY RAISE BIG ARMY.

Ottawa, Ont., July 30—It is said in government circles that undoubtedly another 50,000 men will be called for in August for service with the allies. This army will go to fill the gaps caused by service at the front. Already arrangements have been made, it is stated, to equip and train this new army, so that it will be in fair shape for embarking in October. The earlier calculations that it would require 40 per cent. reinforcements to keep the army in the field at full strength have broken down, and it is now figured that to maintain two army divisions of 50,000 men in the field at full strength for a year would require 75,000 men in reinforcements.

MARCH ON OHIO CAPITAL.

Columbus, O., July 30—A big suffrage demonstration will be held here this afternoon, when leaders in the movement from all sections of Ohio will march on the capital and file with the Secretary of State a petition for a referendum on giving the ballot to women.

ELKS' DAY AT THE FAIR.

San Francisco, July 30.—Some 25,000 delegates to the Elks' conclave at Los Angeles visited the Exposition today. In their honor the day was named for them, and a parade, banquet and reception has been arranged.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"I thought I'd better come down and see if your fortune had turned your heads," said Dick's mother, as she picked up the baby. "My, how the little rascal grows; I haven't seen him for two months or more."

"Mother, you spent most of your annuity coming to see us," laughed Dick. "We appreciate it."

"As I rode up in the bus, I went beyond that substantial increase. Well, as I told your father, 'they lived before they heard of this stupid fortune, and I suppose it will be possible to continue doing so.'"

"What I dread is having everybody know about our disappointment. If it only had not gotten into the papers," sighed Nell.

"If you are never worse disgraced by your relatives than to have them die and leave you a dollar and a half a year you'll manage to live." Mrs. Morton bobbed her head emphatically.

"What's all this?" She indicated a heap of various articles at one side of the room.

"That's the flotsam and jetsam that our fortune washed up on us; it looks as if it were lucky the fortune receded and left us high and dry," answered Dick.

"What did you let people leave all this stuff here for?" asked the old lady, picking up an oil mop.

"We took the course of least resistance. It was easier to let the agents leave the junk here than to spend the rest of our natural lives explaining that we did not want it," laughed Dick.

"But you are not rid of them; you have the task ahead of you yet." She looked at him over her glasses.

"That will be easy; I'll show them that." He pointed to the framed draft. "I'll tell them I'll give them my entire annuity to take the stuff away."

"Fortune favored you this time, you temporizer. There's no sense in having your house cluttered up with their contraptions. Pa did let one of them set up a feed chopper in the barn, but when it came to my having stuff around that I did not want, I——"

"Did they descend on you, these birds of prey?" interrupted Dick.

"Mercy, yes. There were mop wringers and dish washers and washing machine agents and such like, but they never got any further than the porch."

"I'll warrant they didn't," laughed the son, as he looked at the grim face.

"What did you do?" asked Nell.

"I sent them off packing their wares. I'd no time to bandy words. I said if I wanted anything I knew the road to town. They always said the things were not for sale in stores, and I said I was glad of it, for light-headed people would be tempted to a wicked waste of money."

"I must telephone Mrs. Stivers to come and get her quilts," said Nell.

"Quilts!" exclaimed Mrs. Morton.

"Yes, she descended upon me with them and left them in spite of my repeated assurances that I did not want them."

"I'd like to see her do that with me." Mrs. Morton charged about the room as if to the sound of martial music.

Nell laughed. "The meeting would have been interesting to watch. Her attitude was that her society is doing good work and therefore I should buy the quilts to help them."

Mrs. Morton nodded with compressed lips.

"What would you have done?" asked Nell, following her movements with an amused expression.

She stopped as if facing an imaginary Mrs. Stivers.

"I would have said, 'Madam, you may take these quilts or leave them. I hope they have fast colors, for I shall put them right on the porch so you will be able to get them at your convenience without disturbing me.'"

"Why was I not born with initiative?" laughed Nell.

Household Hints..

MAKE USE OF RHUBARB WHILE STILL IN MARKET

While rhubarb is still with us, another group of recipes for serving it may not be unwelcome. Here, for example, is a rhubarb shortcake which is not generally known:

Rhubarb Shortcake—Chop fine one cupful of mixed dates and raisins, stoned. Add them to two cups of rich thick rhubarb sauce and cook five minutes. Split a shortcake made by any preferred rule and spread each layer with the fruit. Put together and cover with whipped cream. The rhubarb sauce is made as follows: Stew two pounds each of rhubarb and sugar (or less sugar if the rhubarb is preferred tart) with the juice and grated rind of a lemon and a cupful of raisins, without any water. Cook until soft, stirring often. Cool quickly and serve.

Almond and Rhubarb Jelly—To about one quart of hot sweetened stewed rhubarb, add one heaping tablespoonful of gelatin dissolved in a little cold water. Stir well, put in a handful of chopped almonds and pour into individual molds. When cold serve with cream or boiled custard.

Rhubarb Fritters—Cut the rhubarb in two-inch lengths and cook in a rich sugar syrup until tender, taking care that the rhubarb is not broken. Let it lie in the syrup until cold, then drain carefully. Place two or three pieces together and dust thickly with powdered sugar. Make a batter with one cupful of milk, two beaten eggs and one and one-half cups of flour, into which one teaspoonful of baking powder and one teaspoonful of sugar have been sifted. Add the milk to the eggs, with a pinch of salt; then, add the flour mixture. Mix thoroughly, dip each little bundle of rhubarb into the batter and fry in deep hot fat. Drain on unglazed paper, roll in granulated sugar, and serve at once with the syrup drained from the rhubarb.

Rhubarb Conserve—In England rhubarb is used as the basis for many conserves. Combined with oranges, it makes a delicious conserve. Two quarts of rhubarb, cut in small pieces, the chopped rind of three oranges; the juice and pulp of six oranges. Weigh all, take pound for pound of sugar, mix, and cook until thick. Seal in glasses with paraffin paper.

THE TABLE

Rice Soup—For each person take a small handful of rice. Boil it in beef broth, salt to taste. Now take half tablespoon flour, mix with a little water so as to make a smooth paste, whip one or two eggs into this. When rice is cooked, stir this into rice, cook a little while and serve with crackers.

Tomato Rarebit—Make a cream of two tablespoons melted butter and two tablespoons flour, then add one cup milk. When smooth, add one cup strained tomatoes to which has been added a pinch of soda; then add 1½ cups cheese cut into small pieces. When cheese is melted, add one beaten egg, salt and pepper to taste.

Blueberry Gingerbread—Add one-half cup boiling water to one cup molasses. Mix and sift 2¼ cups pastry flour, one teaspoon soda, 1½ teaspoons ginger, one-half teaspoon salt. Combine mixtures, add four tablespoons melted butter and beat vigorously; then add one cup blueberries rolled in two tablespoons flour. Turn into buttered and floured shallow pan and bake in moderate oven thirty minutes. Chicken fat fried out and clarified furnishes an excellent shortening and may be used in place of butter.

Japanese Koto—Cut five pounds rhubarb into small pieces. Sprinkle with equal weight of sugar. Stand over night. Pour boiling water over 1½ pounds of figs cut into bits. Add rhubarb and grated rind and juice of two lemons. Cook until thick. Excellent to serve with cold meats or use for cake filling.

REFRESHING DRINK

Rhubarb sherbet (a refreshing drink for a hot day): Wash half dozen stalks rhubarb, cut them up and cook ten minutes in three pints of water. Put into a large jug or pitcher a cup of sugar and the thinly peeled yellow rind of two lemons. Strain liquid from rhubarb over the lemon and sugar. Stand on ice or in cool place until chilled. Serve with grated nutmeg in each glass, and sugar as desired.

48 HOUR WEEK AT SAURER PLANT

International Motor Company Gives Men Shorter Hours Voluntarily.

BONUS ON WAR ORDERS

20% To Be Given Men as Long as War Work Keeps Up—10% Extra for Night Work and Time and a Half for Overtime.

The International Motor Company, operating the Saurer Motor Trucks works, is the first local shop employing a large number of machinists to announce that it will grant a forty-eight hour week to its men. Superintendent Ayers, of the Saurer plant in a statement this morning given to the Daily Press, said that not only were the men to be given the forty-eight hour week, but that those who work nights will have an additional ten per cent. added to their regular wages, and that every employe in the plant, beginning September first, will receive a twenty per cent. war bonus on the total amount earned during the preceding month.

In the statement issued this morning Mr. Ayers said:

"In addition to the re-adjustment of the wage schedules (covering toolmakers, machinists, machine operators, assemblers, and other kindred labor) heretofore made in the plants of the Saurer Motor Company and Mack Bros.' Motor Car Company, the companies have announced a policy of working their shops in eight-hour shifts, and in order to compensate their workmen for the loss of one hour's time daily, and also to pay them something additional besides, they have announced a policy of paying a war bonus aggregating 20 per cent. of the total amounts earned by their employes in the classes affected.

"The companies recognize that the manufacture of munitions of war has caused an unprecedented condition in the metal trades, and being encouraged by the success with which their trucks are being sold in the domestic market, and at the promise of an increased business after the war, they wish to keep their good men and to build up a strong and permanent organization for the future.

"They have, therefore, made most liberal inducements looking toward the betterment of the business, and the improving and enlarging of the force."

The day shift will work from 7 in the morning until 4:30 in the afternoon, with three-quarters of an hour at noon, quitting at 11:15 on Saturdays, while the night shift will go to work at 6:15 and stop at 5:30 in the morning, with a half hour off at midnight, and stopping work at 11:15 on Saturday nights. In addition each employe now working on hourly or piece work will be paid as follows:

"First. He will receive his regular earnings at hourly rates (scheduled to prevail on August 1) on regular pay days, as heretofore.

"Second. If he is working on piece work he will also receive his piece work earnings.

"Third. Ten per cent. extra will be paid to night workers, as heretofore.

"Fourth. Time and one-half will be paid for overtime, as heretofore.

"Fifth. On the first day of September and monthly thereafter, an additional sum will be paid as a war bonus, amounting to twenty per cent. of his total earnings for the previous month regardless of whether these earnings are regular hourly earnings, piece work earnings, night work earnings, or overtime earnings."

PRESTON CLAY ARRESTED AFTER PROLONGED WATCH

After a period of surveilance on the part of the local police that was started in June, 1914, Preston Clay, a mechanical dentist with offices in the Depew building, at North and Park avenues, was taken into custody by Patrolman Cornelius McCarthy this morning, a serious charge being preferred against him in the city court. Robert Newton Crane appeared as counsel for the accused and entered a plea of not guilty, at the same time waiving examination. Bail was fixed at $300 and efforts will be made this afternoon to get a bondsman for him pending his arraignment before the Union County Grand Jury.

Clay was arrested by Captain John J. Flynn on a similar charge eight years ago and owing to his youth at that time and his promise to reform the court treated him leniently. He was highly spoken of by several local dentists this morning by whom he has been employed and they are at a loss to account for his actions.

WOMAN PREACHER AT GRACE METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. C. S. Gillespie, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, of North Plainfield, left Thursday for Short Beach, Conn., where he expects to spend his vacation of four or five weeks. Services at the church tomorrow will be held as usual and will be in charge of Miss Emily March, who will preach at 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. Miss March will deliver a brief Gospel message in the evening following a short service of song at which the "Billy" Sunday song books will be used.

MISSING WHEEL QUICKLY RECOVERED OVER BROOK

Mrs. Charles E. Young, of 510 East Seventh street, reported the theft of a wheel in North Plainfield yesterday afternoon to Chief Marshal Weiss, of the borough, and a short time after that the bicycle was recovered. A boy who said his last name was Clark and that he lived on Pearl street brought the wheel to police headquarters, declaring that he had found it in a bunch of weeds at the upper end of Watchung avenue.

Mrs. Young's son rode the wheel to a spot near the brook at Westervelt avenue yesterday afternoon and left it in the grass while in swimming. When he came out of the water the wheel was gone. The police think that a boy took it for a ride and later abandoned it.

AUTOIST HIT CYCLIST.

P. Frank Stone, of 752 West Front street, reported to the police last night that his automobile struck a colored bicyclist named Isaac Ford on South avenue, yesterday afternoon, injuring him slightly. Ford was taken to his home by Mr. Stone and repaid for the damage done to his wheel.

QUIETUS SOON PUT ON NIGHT SEWER WORK

Borough Residents Protest is Heeded An Hour After Work Starts.

Plans were made by the Harrison & Hall Company, who are doing the sewer work in North Plainfield in that section west of Somerset street, to work two shifts of men for a time in order to push the contract ahead faster. The first night shift was put to work last evening, but in about an hour the men were called off of the job and it is understood that further attempts to work nights in the Park section have been abandoned.

In the northwestern section of the borough it is necessary to sink the sewer pipes to a considerable depth—twenty-four feet in some places—and most of the work of excavating is done by machinery. Stormy weather and the presence of water in the trenches have held back the work on the west side.

Rockview avenue was selected for the first of the night work and yesterday electric lights were strung and all necessary preparations for work after dark made. But after the men had been digging about an hour such a loud protest came from the residents in that section that the gang was ordered to quit.

It was the noise which led to the complaints. The trench in that part of the borough has to be sunk to a depth of twenty feet and to keep the banks from caving in cribbing has to be built along the sides of the trenches. It was the constant tapping of the hammers and the noise of the steel buckets over the endless chains used in lifting the dirt to the top of the ground which compelled the residents to register the protest.

Twenty-four inch pipe is being laid in the Park section of the borough. This is the largest sized pipe being used anywhere in the borough on the sewer job.

YOUTH ROBBED GAS METERS; PROMISES TO BE GOOD

Chief Marshal Weiss, of North Plainfield, took Clarence Lacours, of 229 Somerset street, to Somerville, yesterday, to answer before Judge Beekman, of the Juvenile Court, to a charge of robbing a gas meter belonging to the Public Service in a house near his Somerset street home several weeks ago. Lacours pleaded guilty and was paroled in the custody of his father, Emile Lacours, upon his promise to mend his ways.

At the preliminary hearing before Justice Thomas H. Snape at the time of the boy's arrest, the father declared the son incorrigible and expressed a desire to have him put in an institution. But when arraigned before Judge Beekman yesterday Clarence seemed so genuinely sorry for his misdeed and promised so faithfully to refrain from any further acts of that nature that both judge and father were moved to believe him, and the judge paroled him. Judge Beekman warned the boy that if he does not keep his word it will not be necessary for the police to arrest him on a warrant in order to have him before the court, but that a complaint from his father will result in bringing him back to the Juvenile Court again.

RUNYON PETITION IS BEING SIGNED

With Other Two Present Republican Assemblyman He Seeks Re-election.

STAND ON FINE RECORD

Runyon Likely to Be Made Speaker If Re-elected and House is Republican—Pierson and Morgan Able Representatives.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city, with his associates, Arthur N Pierson, of Westfield, and Charles L. Morgan, of Elizabeth, started their campaign for re-election yesterday, when petitions were placed in circulation, which will authorize the placing of the names of the three men on the Republican primary ballot. There is no expectation that the three will have any opposition for renomination, because of the splendid records made at the last session of the Legislature, and the present petition is preliminary to the campaign in the fall.

The record made by the trio at Trenton last winter will furnish them with plenty of campaign material. That this record forms a most substantial basis upon which to ask for renomination and re-election, the supporters of the delegation believe, and the dearth of Democratic aspirants is probably due to a general realization of this fact.

The Assembly election in Union assumes State-wide importance this year, because it is conceded everywhere that Mr. Runyon's re-election will make him at once a formidable candidate for speaker. In view of his position in the 1915 Legislature as majority leader, he is viewed as the logical choice for the highest gift the Republican Assemblymen can bestow next winter.

The recognition paid Mr. Pierson when he was appointed chairman of the Commission for the Survey of Municipal Financing, brought home to the electorate of the county just what was the Westfield man's standing and reputation in the Legislature. This commission's report to the next Legislature will be one of the most important subjects to come up, and those acquainted with Mr. Pierson's work feel that he should be returned to complete the work he has begun.

Mr. Morgan proved a valuable member of the entire Legislature from an Elizabeth standpoint. The amount of Elizabeth legislation that went into the Legislature last winter was unusually large, and what was more unusual, met with genuine success. Mr. Morgan handled all this legislation for the city government, and as a member of the Municipal Corporations Committee, was in splendid strategical position to render his community aid. Upon issues of State interest Mr. Morgan displayed the same alertness as distinguished his colleagues from Union.

NEXT EXCURSION THURSDAY.

The next excursion to the seashore will be that of the Sunday-schools of the First Presbyterian, Congregational and Park Avenue Baptist churches to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove, on Thursday. This will probably be a large excursion, and will leave in two sections, the first section leaving Dunellen at 8:04 and Plainfield at 8:15, stopping at Clinton and Grant Avenues both ways. On the return trip the train will leave Asbury Park at 6:40.

TROUBLESOME YOUTH GETS JAIL SENTENCE

"The city has put up with you long enough and will be well rid of you and your kind," said Judge DeMeza in sentencing Michael Comiskey to the county jail for a period of sixty days in the city court, this morning. Comiskey, who is one of the worst characters the city police court has had to deal with in recent years, was one of the witnesses for the defense at the trial of Patrolman William Mernagh, Monday night, and is alleged to have threatened to do away with James Scott and Arthur Tompkins, two of the men who gave testimony detrimental to Mernagh's case. According to the complainants, the defendant, accompanied by George Sommers, went to Tompkins' home in Fairchild's alley Thursday afternoon and there made the threat on the grounds that Tompkins had testified falsely at the trial.

Scott claimed that Comiskey and Sommers assaulted him on West Front street. The defendant did not deny the allegations and the police are now looking for Sommers. Comiskey was arrested yesterday by Captain John J. Flynn. He has many times been arrested for similar offenses and the police have been keeping a careful watch on him of late owing to the fact that they suspected him as the leader of a gang of panhandlers.

In sending him to jail the court said: "Not only will I sentence you to two months in the county jail, but I will also instruct the police to see that you are kept out of Plainfield when you again get your liberty and if you are caught here again you will go to Elizabeth for six months. Too much leniency has been extended to you in the past and you have showed your calibre by persistent violation of the confidence I have placed in you. While you are in jail the police will do their best to round up the remainder of the gang of panhandlers of which you were the ring-leader."

RECORDER JAHN DID NOT OFFER TO REDUCE FINE

Recorder Philip Jahn, of Scotch Plains, in talking with a Press reporter, this morning, denied a statement made yesterday by Ralph Venezio. The latter claimed that the recorder had agreed to reduce a fine of $100 if Venezio dropped a case in which he was found guilty of illegal sale of liquor.

Recorder Jahn had no conversation whatsoever with either Venezio or his counsel after he had imposed the fine. Venezio has a license in Fanwood borough, and sold liquor in the township. Township Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., in talking about the matter this morning, said that Venezio's counsel suggested that if the fine be reduced to $50 Venezio would pay it, and was informed by Mr. Hetfield that such a motion should be made to the court, which was not done.

REV. F. L. GREENE RETURNS.

Rev. Frederick L. Green, pastor of Hope Chapel, returned yesterday from his vacation, and he will occupy his pulpit both morning and evening tomorrow. On Wednesday night he will be in charge of the service preparatory to communion week from tomorrow night.

Chalmers.

LEYLAND LINER ADDED TO SUBMARINE VICTIMS

Iberian, Bound for Boston With Freight, But Crew Are Reported Saved.

London, July 31.—The Leyland liner Iberian, 5,223 tons, has been sunk by a German submarine. A Llodys despatch received at noon stated that the survivors were being brought to land by a trawler. The Iberian hailed from Liverpool and flew the British flag.

The Iberian was shelled by the German submarine before she surrendered. Five of her crew were killed and the remaining sixty-two took to the boats and were rescued. The submarine then sent a torpedo into the hull of the ship and sank her.

Three of the members of the crew killed were Americans.

New York, July 31.—The liner Iberian, reported this morning as sunk by a German submarine, is owned by Frederick Leyman & Company, a British subsidiary of the International Mercantile Marine Company. At the office of the International Mercantile Marine it was stated that the liner had sailed July 29 from Liverpool for Boston, and carried a comparatively small cargo. Being a thorough-going freighter she had no passengers.

Deal, England, July 31.—The Norwegian steamship Karmo was beached tonight, following a collision with an unidentified British steamship in the Downs.

LAWYERS ENGAGED IN TILT DURING CITY COURT TRIAL

Featured by a tilt between counsel, the hearing of Walter H. Generick, a local milk man, charged by the Welsh Farms Dairy with confiscating their bottles and refilling them, was held before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, the court deciding that the evidence was not sufficiently conclusive to hold the defendant and subsequently dismissing the case. Martin Stutsman appeared for the complainant and Robert Newton Crane was Generick's lawyer.

Each attorney dealt with technicalities and on several occasions addressed pointed remarks to each other. In disposing of the charge the court took into consideration the defendant's previous unblemished record as a citizen and said that in cases of this kind the evidence would have to be convincing for conviction.

WILL CHANGE POLITICS.

Because he announced his intention of going on the "stump" for the Prohibition party this fall, Charles McCarthy, of Elizabeth, won a suspended sentence when arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning for lingering too long at the gilded rail. "My only regret is that I haven't changed my politics before this," said McCarthy. "And if you'll give me ten minutes I will beat it straight back to Elizabeth." This proposition sounded like a good one to the police magistrate and he sent McCarthy merrily on his way.

UNION SERVICE PREACHER.

The union church service tomorrow night will be held in the First Baptist church and Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, former pastor of the First Baptist church, will preach. There will be music by the church choir. This will be the fifth union service for the summer, a start being made on the second time around the four churches joining in the plan. Dr. Chambliss will also occupy the First Baptist pulpit in the morning.

GERMANS TAKE RAILWAY CENTER

RUSSIAN LINE PIERCED

Berlin, July 31 (via Amsterdam).—Lublin, the large fortified railway centre of Poland, 95 miles southeast of Warsaw, has been captured by Austro-German troops, it was announced today. The War Office stated that the city was occupied Friday.

Petrograd, July 31.—While Austro-German assaults have been repulsed at several places along the battle line, admission is made in an official statement issued last night at the headquarters of the General Staff that the Russian front has been pierced at important points.

One is at Redomka on the Vistula, where pontoons were used in crossing. A passage of the Vieprz also was forced at Travniki. German outposts, advancing from the southwest, are nearing the fortress of Kovno, in the Province of Kovno. The text of the communication follows:

"On the Niemen and the Dvina, Thursday, there were outpost engagements. On the left bank of the Moussa in the trans-Niemen region the enemy renewed his attacks Thursday night northwest of Suwalki. In the Kovno region enemy outposts, advancing from the southwest, approached the outposts of the fortress.

"On the Narew fighting consisted chiefly of an artillery duel. At Kamienka on the Narew and on the railway the Germans were repelled, while on the right bank of the Narew north of Serock several enemy attacks were repulsed.

"At Redomka the enemy crossed on pontoons to the right bank of the Vistula and attempted the bridge the river. The Russians are attacking three enemy detachments which crossed. Heavy artillery destroyed the enemy's bridge at Kozienice.

"On the Vistula and the Bug, Thursday, large enemy forces attacked and also on both banks of the Vieprz. At Chmiel and Piaski the enemy was repulsed with heavy losses; but along the left bank of the Vieprz, after a stubborn fight, he succeeded in advancing in this district—one division which captured Travnki and subsequently got beyond Travnika crossing to the right bank of the Vieprz.

"On the Bug in the Sokal region the enemy was repulsed from two lines of trenches. We captured 1,000 prisoners and four Maxims.

"At Ramionka an Austrian attack was repulsed.

"In the Black Sea Russian torpedo boats shelled batteries near Shile, thirty-four miles northeast of Constantinople, and also sunk a large collier, as well as forty-seven sailing ships.

Marseilles, July 31.—In an interview with General Brulard, who has just returned from the Dardanelles, he is quoted as saying that the fall of Constantinople, which is assured, will mark the commencement of the end of the war and of ultimate victory for the entente powers.

Athens, July 31.—The Turks are mounting six great guns in positions dominating the approaches to Constantinople in preparation for its defense from a land force. Five thousand Greek Armenians are employed on the construction of a railroad for the transportation of coal and munitions.

Rome, July 31.—A mutiny of the Arab soldiers in the Turkish army on the Gallipoli Peninsula is reported in a despatch to the Tribuna, from Catania, which quotes travelers from Turkey. The despatch states that the Arabs turned upon their German officers and killed a number. The mutiny was quelled after some trouble and a number of Turkish officers were hanged.

Paris, July 31.—M. Guchoff, the Bulgarian minister to France, today issued a formal denial of the story that Bulgaria has promised Turkey 85,000 Mauser rifles, which it captured in the Balkan war. Aside from the fact that such an act would constitute a breach of neutrality, M. Guchoff says that Bulgaria did not capture anything like that number of rifles during that war.

Joseph Murray, Joseph Sullivan and Hyman Abrams left today for Keansburg, where they will spend two weeks at the bungalow which is conducted there by the Second Night Club, of this city.

DELEGATES RETURN FROM CONVENTION

Master Painters Close Session in Asbury Park by Electing Officers.

Asbury Park, July 31.—With the election of officers for the ensuing year the eleventh convention of the New Jersey Masters and Painters' Association concluded yesterday at the Brunswick Hotel Casino. Reports of the test fence and other committees were read, and President Charles Greenhalgh, of Paterson, made several recommendations in his report. Among these was an advisory committee to the State organizer, L. B. Saunders, of Orange. This move was passed by the delegates.

The newly elected officials are: President, William Christiansen, of East Orange; vice president, George Udall, of Morristown; secretary, Henry Witt, of Newark; treasurer, H. L. Bartholomew, of New Brunswick. State organizer, L. B. Saunders, of Orange; assistant State organizer George Eagan, of New Brunswick. There were no contests. The men were elected by acclamation.

Delegates to the international convention meeting in Cincinnati the first week next February selected were: Charles Greenhalgh, the retiring president, of Paterson; Charles Blakeslee, of Cranford, and Matthew Wilhelm, of Englewood. Alternates named were Henry Witt and Harry Adams, of Newark, and Robert Turton, of New Brunswick. A. A. Sippel, of Newark, will represent the executive board at the international gathering. Newark, with twenty members, had five votes in the election. Orange had the same number, while Paterson had four. William A. Wall, the last president of the international body, sent a letter regretting his inability to attend this convention.

For three years a test fence located at New Brunswick has been painted and the results reported at the State convention. E. P. Jones announced that panels painted with white lead were in perfect condition, while an application of mixed paints resulted in chalking and cracking. James Brown, editor of the Painters' Magazine, of New York, motioned that experiments in washing house with castile or other non-alkali soap and water before painting be tried. An instance in Elizabeth was cited, but no action was taken.

URGE PUBLICITY FOR SCHOOL NEEDS

Where Boards Are Honest They Do Not Fear to Turn on Searchlight.

Frank publicity in securing the co-operation of the community in the work of the schools is urged by W. S. Deffenbaugh, of the U. S. Bureau of Education, in a report on "School Progress in the Smaller Cities," just issued.

"School boards that are managing the schools ably and honestly do not fear to turn on the searchlight," declares Mr. Deffenbaugh. "The sentiment is growing among school boards that the public school know how its money is expended. In the most progressive schools, the board and the superintendent are presenting facts to the people either in printed reports, in newspaper articles, or by both.

"Some schoolmen, however, object to furnishing the newspapers with school information on the ground that they are thereby advertising themselves. A superintendent who was complaining about lack of interest among the parents in the schools of his city was asked whether he reported the progress of the schools through the local papers. He replied that he did not believe in advertising himself. He failed to grasp the idea that school news is not for the purpose of boosting a superintendent, besides being legitimate news, it calls attention to the needs of the work of the school so that the school may become more efficient.

"In several cities, as Fredonia, Kans., there is an educational issue of the local paper. On the whole, the public is becoming better informed regarding the schools than it was a few years ago. The tendency is toward greater publicity by means of printed reports and newspaper articles.

"That the schools can work to advantage through women's civic improvement clubs and through parent teacher associations has been thoroughly demonstrated in many of the smaller cities. Such clubs are often instrumental in the introduction of kindergartens, manual training, and domestic science. The superintendent of one school utilized the women's clubs of the city by asking that each club give some consideration to the question, What can be done to improve the efficiency of your schools? Each club discussed the question and sent a representative to present to the teachers the ideas of the club. In the opinion of the superintendent of schools in that city, the plan aroused interest among the women of the city in better schools."

These and other plans for arousing interest in school work are discussed in chapter IV, Vol. 1 of the 1914 report of the Commissioner of Education. This is obtained as a separate publication.

THE WEALTHIEST GIRL IN AMERICA MARRIES TODAY

Harbor Point, Mich., July 31.—Miss Catherine Barker, known as the wealthiest girl in America, heiress to thirty millions from the estate of her father, will be married here today to Howard Spaulding, Jr., of Chicago. The wedding will surpass anything ever seen in this summer colony of millionaires.

The bride is only nineteen. Her income is about two millions a year from the car company established by her father, the late John H. Barker, at Michigan City, Ind. Although besieged by titled foreigners and men of prominence, she decided to wed a typical American young man who earns his living. Howard Spaulding, whom she has known for five years, was the lucky man. He took a job in her shops when he came back from Yale with his degree, and rose from the bottom ranks until he now holds a position as one of the officers of the company.

But the course of her romance was anything but smooth. For a whole year she was obliged to keep her engagement a secret, on account of the opposition of her guardian, James B. Forgan, the famous Chicago banker. Her guardian objected to her receiving attentions from anyone until she was much older and until she had learned more about the management of her immense wealth.

But the young heiress had something to say about this herself, and furthermore had the lucky youth picked out all the time. More than that, she had made him promise to wait for her, a promise he gave in fun five years ago.

The wedding will take place this afternoon in the summer mansion which Miss Barker maintains here. Mrs. Donald J. McFerren, of Hoopeston, Ill. will be matron of honor, and Miss Elizabeth Goodrich, maid of honor. The bridesmaids are Misses Jane Vincent and Rosamond Goodrich, of Chicago, and Isabel Stroh and Christine Miller, of Detroit. The groom will be attended by his brother, Leicester Spaulding, of Chicago.

ELABORATE FLORAL DECORATIONS PLANNED

Government Officials Join Citizens' Committee to Make Encampment a Success.

Washington, D. C., July 31.—Government officials are joining the citizens' committee in endeavoring to make the G. A. R. encampment, to be held here the latter part of September, a great success. Along this line special floral designs are being laid out on the lawns of the Capitol building, and other government buildings. These designs include insignia of the G. A. R., the Woman's Relief Corps and allied organizations to be here during the convention.

Under the direction of superintendent of the Capitol building, Elliot Woods, two flower beds have been laid out on the sloping grounds of the west front, designed to add to the attractiveness of the grounds during the encampment. On the north, on Senate wing, the Grand Army badge seventy-five feet long and twenty feet wide, has been the subject of the gardener's work, while on the south end, or the House wing, the badge of the Women's Relief Corps, of similar dimensions, have been reproduced. It is estimated that about thirty thousand plants were required to make these designs.

The eagle at the top of the G. A. R. badge is coleus, of golden color while althernanthera, dark red was used in making the crossed cannon. For the main part of the design, the National colors, the alternating red and white stripes are of iresene and centurea, and the blue field is a mass of ageratum. The five pointed star pendant, is outlined with yellow coleus, while the bronze effect of the metal was produced by the use of acalypha, a bronze leaf foliage plant. The other designs made have been similarly treated with various kinds of plants to bring out the color scheme.

Surrounding the Sherman statue just south of the Treasury building on Pennsylvania avenue, and accessible to the visitors, four army corps badges have been reproduced with the use of various foliage plants. These designs, about twenty feet in diameter, were laid out under the direction of Charles. Henlock, superintendent of gardens. On the north side of the statue is the badge of the Fifteenth Corps, on the west side the badge of the Fourteenth Corps, the badge of the Twentieth Corps being on the south side and the Seventeenth Corps being represented on the east side. About seventy-five thousand plants have been used in making these badges.

Superintendent George W. Hess of the Botanical Gardens, has had overhauled and equipped with modern apparatus the magnificent Bartholdi fountain that stands in the centre of the gardens. This fountain was exhibited at the Centennial Exposition by the French government, and removed to its present location. The fountain when completed will be an added attraction to the gardens. The fountain will be illuminated at night.

FEW SCHOOLS NOW DEPEND ON "EXAMS"

They Are Not Recognized as a True Test of Pupil's Ability.

"Few schools now rely entirely upon examinations as a test for promotion," declares W. S. Deffenbaugh, chief of the Division of School Administration of the U. S. Bureau of Education, in his annual review of school conditions in the smaller cities.

"In some schools examinations are made to count one-half, while in others they count only one-fourth. It is now recognized that examinations are not true tests of the pupil's ability to do the next grade work, and that a pupil should not be promoted on what he knows, but on what he can do. Of 756 superintendents in the smaller cities reporting, 669 say that they are now depending on examinations much less than formerly."

How pupils shall be classified so that they may advance through the grades without loss of time is a question that is continually presenting itself to thoughtful superintendents, according to Mr. Deffenbaugh, and some cities are undertaking special experiments in this field:

In Carthage, N. Y., all those children who cannot read are started on their educational journey in much the same way. Gradually they are regrouped into three divisions: The first, composed of the most mature and most capable, completes a certain amount of work in one year; the next group is given one and one-half years in which to accomplish the same amount, and the third two years. Before the close of the first year each of the three groups is likely to be divided again into the higher and lower. Therefore each pupil who enters in the fall with no knowledge of the books has before him the possibility of being in any one of six groups before the close of the first year. There is a special teacher in the lower grades who devotes her entire time to misfits—those pupils who for some reason or other cannot do all of their work to the best advantage in any of the regular groups. This teacher coaches backward pupils and helps the brilliant ones to the next higher division.

In East Chicago, Ind., a child is promoted at any time the teacher and superintendent feel he would be benefitted. The plan is to pass pupils if they are doing their best, even if the grades are low.

The superintendent of schools in Williamsburg, Va., reports: "We use each the shifting group plan of grading pupils and a form of reports to parents that keep parents thoroughly informed as to the pupil's standing during the year. As each weakness of a pupil is discovered by the teacher, it becomes a matter of special consideration and study by teacher, parents, principal and the pupil. Tentative shifts can be made at any time. The aim is to relieve the teacher of all red tape and to reduce routine to the minimum, but to insist upon a constant and sympathetic study of the child—every child—but particularly every child who is in danger of falling behind his class. No percentage or grades are accepted from a teacher as excuses for promotion or demotion. If a pupil is weak, efforts are made to ascertain the exact nature of his weakness early in the term and remedy it."

It is not to be confused with the few remaining pieces from bankrupt stocks, several years old, offered in newspaper competition by sales which are imitating the Original August Furniture Sale.

Solidly Built Furniture

Stickley Bros. furniture is solidly put together by the English tongue and tenon method, which strengthens the joints. Rails, back slats and posts are mortised and pinned. All drawers are perfectly finished on sides and bottom as well as on inside. The dining table slides are all hard maple and extra heavy. Each table is fitted with the Stickley patented self-equalizing device, enabling one person to easily open and close the top for changing the leaves. With the exception of these maple slides all this Stickley furniture is made of the best white oak.

The leather used is genuine leather made of Spanish goat skins tanned and finished in the Stickley factory.

This Stickley furniture is both for the living room and the dining-room—chairs, rockers, tables, divans, foot-stools, book-racks, and, in addition, nearly a hundred dining-room sets and many more individual pieces.

Of the pieces sketched on this page we began the Sale with quantities, but they are selling so fast that we cannot guarantee every piece will be here; but another pattern equally as good will be here.

THE PASSING OF JOHN BARLEYCORN.

There have been many recent movements that have helped materially the cause of temperance and the abolition of the saloon.

Prohibition has won the day in Russia. By order of the Czar, the use of vodka has been prohibited. Shops and saloons have been closed by the imperial seal. Russia will save one billion dollars annually which was formerly spent upon liquor. As a result, the peasantry are looking healthier, crime and disease are less common, and a moral boom has come to the nation. In spite of the war, the financial depression is not felt.

We desire to accomplish the same in our land. The Hobson bill in the House of Representatives at Washington December 22 last, gained a great moral victory and has paved the way for the slogan "A Saloonless nation by 1920 and a Saloonless world by 1930." No victory, expressive of public sentiment, has been of greater importance since the days of slavery.

Men are everywhere beginning to see the worthlessness and the positive menace of the saloon and liquor business. Over every alcohol shop should be written these words: "Crime and disease sold here. Our goods guaranteed to maim and destroy life unto the third generation." The United States Supreme Court has handed down a decision that the "saloon is the worst enemy of society."

The liquor men are intensely worried. They see the handwriting on the wall. They have been weighed in the balance and have been found wanting. Their own business has brought doom to them. It is a matter of much surprise that the American people have countenanced their wicked institutions with such patience for so many years.

Several indictments may be brought against the saloon and the liquor business.

They are always allied with the corrupt and indecent politicians. They are never on the side of any moral or righteous cause. It has never contributed any good to the national life. On the contrary it is the cesspool of crime, vice and degeneracy.

Saloons pay a heavy license. But for every dollar they put in the city or State treasury, they compel the expenditure of thousands of dollars annually for jails, penitentiaries, insane asylums, orphanages, almshouses, homes for feeble minded, schools for dependent children. These institutions are the products of their business. Add to this list, the long line of beggars, tramps, thieves, robbers, murderers. And then do you wonder that the American people are going to put their liquor traffic out of business and place it in the lowest hell where it belongs.

Nearly all the railroads of this land have a rule, reading as follows: "The use of intoxicants by employes while on duty is prohibited. Their habitual use or the frequenting of places where they are sold is sufficient cause for dismissal."

Large factories are protesting against the harmful influences of the saloon. It is no longer a friend of the working man. It is for the best interest of a city to have decent respectable, sober citizens. A man who is not right on this liquor question nowadays, causes suspicion of his own life.

Science has said that alcohol is a poison, that it has no food value, that it is a narcotic, and not a stimulant, and that it causes disease. "One drop makes white blood corpuscles drunk, i. e., paralyses them." Alcohol is ten thousand times more destructive than war. It is wounding 100,000,000 white men today. Alcohol degenerates, destroys half of a nation's wealth, produces crime, pauperism and insanity.

Why is it that the law forbids the sale of liquors to minors. Why does not a father take his little son or daughter to the saloon and give them some of the poison which he is taking?

How much longer are we compelled to stand the abuse of the liquor business. The real issue is manhood. The American people have been held down by this curse by stronger chains than were the Egyptians, Persians, Hindoos or Assyrians. Eternal war must be declared on the liquor traffic. As citizens of the land we love, we are to rise up as a unit and strike with all our power a death blow to this wicked institution.

How long must this wicked waste of men and money go on. The liquor traffic is responsible for 50% of the insane; 60% of the paupers, and 70% of the criminals. The destruction of the liquor traffic would reduce the high cost of living. The Panama canal cost $375,000,000, but the drink bill of your nation for 1914 was $2,457,000,000. Victory over this evil may be temporarily delayed, but will be ultimately gained.

"A bar to Heaven, a door to hell
Whoever named it, named it well.
A bar to manliness and wealth
A door to want and broken health.
A bar to honor, pride and fame
A door to sin, and grief and shame.
A bar to hope, a bar to prayer
A door to darkness and despair.
A bar to honored, useful life
A door to brawling, senseless strife.
A bar to all that's true and brave
A door to every drunkard's grave.
A bar to joy that home imparts
A door to tears and aching hearts.
A bar to Heaven, a door to hell
Whoever named it, named it well."

OPEN PARK TO AUTOS.

Washington, July 31—Yellowstone Park will tomorrow be thrown open to automobiles. Henceforth visitors to this wonderful reservation of the Government will be able to see its beauties in comfort. Plenty of opportunity will be given to explore the great park, whereas in the past but a glimpse of its wonders could be seen from the antique stage-coaches. The opening up of the park to the motorists marks another link in the "See America First" attractions, and also affords the tourists a route through to the Pacific coast.

Don't forget that classified advertisements must be in by noon on Saturdays.

BAPTIST CHURCH PLANS ATTRACTIVE SUMMER SERVICE

The Sunday evening services of the Park Avenue Baptist church during the month of August will continue to be held on the lawn, and will be conducted by the Young People's Association of the church. An interesting speaker has been engaged for each of these services and the meetings promise to be especially attractive and helpful. Music will be made a feature of the program by choir, congregation and soloists.

At the meeting tomorrow evening, which will be in charge of Burton Casner, J. D. Loizeaux will give a talk on his work among the prisoners. Mr. Loizeaux is a forceful speaker and the service will be of great interest to all who attend. The meetings begin at 7:45 and continue not over one hour. If stormy the service will be held inside the church.

Make your Real Estate "ad" one which investors and home-hunters will investigate in their own interests.

RUSH REINFORCEMENTS TO HAYTIAN TROOPS

Hospital Ship Also Sent to Care for Wounded Americans.

Washington, July 31—An appeal for immediate reinforcements to cope with the situation in Port au Prince, Haiti, was received by the State Department today, from Robert Beale Davis, Jr., secretary and Charge de Affairs of the American legation there. The appeal was sent after the two American seamen had been killed by snipers, but before orders were issued for the despatch of the battleship Connecticut with an additional force of bluejackets and marines. In his despatch Mr. Davis said that the situation in Port au Prince now was quiet, but that an ugly undertone was apparent.

Four Haitiens were killed and two were wounded in the attack by natives on the American landing force at Port au Prince Thursday night, in which two seamen were killed from ambush. This information was contained in a despatch to the Navy Department today. The hospital ship Solace now at Newport, R. I., was ordered to proceed at once to Port au Prince. The Connecticut cleared from Philadelphia this morning with 700 marines. The cruiser Nashville reported its arrival today at Cape Haitien.

BLACKBIRDS MUSIC IS NOT APPRECIATED

Even Hurdy-Gurdy and Tin Pans Fail to Drive Away Unwelcome Visitors.

And now it is a pest of blackbirds in North Plainfield. Great big blackbirds, "thousands of them," some of the residents of Watchung and Jackson avenues say, have been making the evergreen trees on Mrs. Robert H. Fountain's property, 73 Jackson avenue, their headquarters for a week or more and their incessant chattering mornings has proven a source of great annoyance to the neighborhood.

The home of Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of the borough, adjoins the Fountain property and the Mayor is one of the chief sufferers from the blackbird pest. During the day the birds are not in evidence, but as darkness settles down they begin to congregate from all directions until the evergreen trees, especially the row which separates the Mayor's property from that of Mrs. Fountain, is "black with them" according to these same informants.

Just why the flocks of blackbirds have picked that particular section as their roosting place is not known. Mrs. Fountain thinks that it may be the abundance of fruit in the neighborhood, while others say the evergreen trees attract them.

Be that as it may, the residents of the blackbird centre know that the birds are there and are racking their brains to evolve some scheme which will result in driving them away. Some people have suggested a shotgun, but that would not be lawful, declares Mayor Clark. Last evening a hurdy-gurdy was pressed into service and the owner was paid to grind out music for half an hour at about the birds' roosting time, the strains of real music being augmented by a medley of sounds brought forth from sundry tin pans and iron pots thumped vigorously by as many boys of the neighborhood as could be pressed into service. It was hoped that the unusual noise would drive the birds away for good, but lo and behold! No sooner had the last faint tinkle of the street piano last itself in the distance and the last whack given a tin pan die away than there was a swish of wings above, a chorus of harsh cries, and the blackbirds flew about, finally settling down for the night in their accustomed places.

Now the blackbird does not have a very agreeable note at any time, but when "thousands of them" open their beaks and voice their harsh, rasping cry just at daylight there is no more sleep for people nearby. The residents around the blackbirds' headquarters say that the birds do not even wait for morning to begin their chattering, but that any unusual light during the night, or a disturbance of any kind in the street will bring the sleeping birds to life and they will start a regular confab which will last until every sleeper in the vicinity is wide awake.

Blackbirds have made that section of North Plainfield headquarters before, but never in such large numbers. This is their first visit this summer.

FUNERAL OF CHARLES KLINE.

Charles Kline, who died yesterday morning at his home in New York city, will be buried from the home of his brother, William Kline, of West Third street, Monday afternoon. Mr. Kline was well known locally, having spent most of his life here prior to taking up his residence in New York city. He was ill just ten days, complications setting in and causing his death.

HACKMEN TO OPPOSE EXTENSION OF LINE

Cabbies and Taxi Drivers Prepared to Wage Campaign Against Measure.

Thirty-five local hackmen are planning a strenuous campaign of opposition to the petition of certain West End residents requesting the Council to extend the hack limit from Grant avenue to Monroe avenue. The petition was presented at an adjourned session July 20 and will come up for further discussion Monday night at the August meeting of the Common Council.

By actual measurements yesterday afternoon several hackmen secured data which will be used in their fight against the measure and it is probable that their spokesmen will appear Monday night. The hackmen claim that an injustice will be done to them and that they will suffer a hardship by having the "quarter" line extended to Monroe avenue. By actual measurement yesterday afternoon it was found that a return trip to Grant avenue and West Eighth street entailed a round trip covering three and one-eighth miles, and both the hackmen and taxi drivers claim that this is as far as they can go for the quarter allowance and at the same time "break even." The point mentioned above is the extreme in a westerly direction and it is claimed that even under present conditions the men are forced to take persons further than they should be expected to for a quarter.

COUPLE GIVEN RECEPTION BY FELLOW CLUB MEMBERS

A reception was tendered to Miss Nora Meaney and James Lynch at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Forristel, on Union street, last night, by members of the Yea Bo Club. The announcement of the couple's engagement was recently made public and a similar reception was accorded them by the same organization two weeks ago.

An enjoyable evening of dancing joyed and refreshments were provided by a committee of club members.

LABORERS CLAIM THEIR MONEY HAS BEEN HELD UP

Sentiment advanced at last night's meeting of the Building Trades Council indicated that the local organization was prepared to put the contractors engaged in building the Crescent Court apartment, on East Seventh street, on the unfair list unless certain orders of the council were complied with before Tuesday. William Dennick is the contractor in charge of the work and it is alleged that he withheld "waiting money" from two laborers several weeks ago. He was infructed at that time to advance the sum of $18 to them, but the men allege that he failed to comply with the order.

He agreed at the previous meeting to pay the money, according to the Building Trades Council officials and they are now at a loss to understand the charges of the men. The executive committee will hold a special meeting Monday night for the purpose of discussing the subject.

PATROLMAN CAPTURES GIRLS' ASSAILANTS

Dunlap, After Night of Vigil, Makes Important Haul—Victims Recovering.

An attack on two girls near Compton avenue, on West Front street last night, caused a stir in that section of the city and entailed an all-night search on the part of Chief of Police Kiely and his men before the two culprits were arrested by Patrolman Joseph Dunlap this morning. Elizabeth and Harriet Thompson, aged 16 and 14 respectively, were going to their home on Ann street, at 10:30 last night, after attending a theatrical performance, when two men jumped out from behind the bushes near Compton avenue and attacked them. Harriet's screams aroused the neighborhood and evidently scared the men away for they are said to have run in the direction of Dunellen. When the first persons arrived on the scene of the assault they found Elizabeth Thompson unconscious on the sidewalk and her sister was crying hysterically for aid.

Removed to a nearby house the younger girl told her story and the police were notified immediately. Patrolmen John Kelley and Tobias Nolan, together with Captain John J. Flynn, Chief Kiely, Lieut. Maurice Higgins and Mayor Leighton Calkins and Councilman Juan Babcock, who had been attending a police board meeting, arrived on the scene shortly afterwards and the unconscious girl was removed to her parents' home in the patrol wagon.

Shortly after her arrival there she was seized with convulsions and City Physician Norman W. Currie and Dr. C. B. Luffburrow were summoned. Her condition throughout the early hours of the morning grew steadily worse and this afternoon it was said that some fear was entertained for her recovery.

Patrolman Joseph Dunlap this morning arrested Joseph Fatilla, of Cremorbok road, and Cesare Ricci, of West Third street, and after being brought to headquarters they are said to have admitted their guilt and were held by Judge DeMeza to await trial Monday morning. Flynn and Higgins searched the entire territory lying between here and Lincoln last night for the men. They entered many homes in the Dunellen section but could get no line on the culprits. Dunlap's catch occasioned words of commendation from Chief Kiely this morning, the department head referring to it as an extremely important arrest and one that showed the keenness of this patrolman.

Chief Kiely spent the greater portion of the night at the Thompson home giving the family what assistance he could and directing his men from that point. The entire population living in the immediate vicinity of the girls' home was greatly stirred up over last night's incident and had the young men been caught last night they would probably have received rough treatment at the hands of the incensed people.

The younger girl's mental condition was also seriously affected but she was resting quietly this morning and no serious results are anticipated in her case.

ANOTHER MANAGER AFTER ALL STAR NEWARK TEAM

The fact that Gifford Jones, the manager of the local Plainfield A. A. was lucky enough to strike Jimmy Creelin, the manager of the Newark Meadowbrooks, when he was without a game for this Sunday afternoon has spurred William Kline, the manager of the Royal Giants, on to approaching the same Jimmy relative to arranging a game between the Newarkites and the locals. Kline is also anxious to communicate with Casey, the manager of the Ironsides.

The Royals would be a better attraction than a good many of those already staged on the Newark grounds as they are as fast an all colored team in the State. The Philadelphia Colored Giants are scheduled to meet the Ironsides this Sunday and are a team composed of players, many of whom have appeared here. The team which is to represent the Royals on the road is being managed by Kline and Paul Coleman and ought to meet with success.

ENJOYED A HIKE.

The Camp Fire Girls of the First Presbyterian church enjoyed a hike to the "Notch" yesterday. Among those who made the trip were the Misses Helen Joy, Lillian Ball, Eva Ball, Elizabeth Marchant, Frances Grieves, Dorothy Hannigan, Gladys Albert, Hetty Kriney and Carolyn Smith.

John H. Coyle and family left today for their summer home at Belmar, where they will remain until after Labor Day.

Mrs. Levis M. Booth and family, of Cedarbrook road, returned yesterday from a month's sojourn at Buck Hill Falls, Pa.

EXPECT BIG CONTEST WITH NEWARKERS

Plainfielders Primed for Fight With the Meadowbrook Outfit.

Jimmy Creelin, the manager of the Meadowbrooks, of Newark, has booked the Plainfield A. A. to appear at Park View Oval, Newark, tomorrow afternoon. The local team secured the game only after several weeks' dickering. The Meadowbrooks are recognized as the fastest team in the Essex county city, having won one and lost one game of the City League series, their opponents being the crack Ironsides. In the first game the Meadows trounced the Ironsides 18 to 5, batting George Hughes and Joe "Kid" Kurfess out of the box. The second game went to the Ironsides, 6 to 5, fully six thousand people witnessing the engagement which took place at South Side Oval last Sunday morning.

"Giff" Jones, the local manager, has gathered together a fine aggregation of ballists and expects to hand Creelin and his boys a great surprise. Mike McFadden, Harry Jennings or Harry Applegate, the Amboy hurler, will do the pitching act for the locals and Lou Dixon will be behind the bat. Jack Garretson, rated as the fastest first sacker in this section of New Jersey, will hang around first, with Tony Denitzio, the Italian "pep" machine, on second. Benny Rosenson intends "rolling" around short and "Chet" Harriman will be on deck at third. The outfield wil be made up of Joe Alberts, Johnny Dixon and W. Miller. Jack Carney, John Gleason and Jack Hendry will be taken along as utility men.

Creelin intends using either Joe Durkee or Huntley in the box and his brother, Jack Creelin, behind the bat. Huntley is the one most likely to work against the locals, and Benny Rosenson, who has batted against Huntley before, says that he has everything in the world.

If the Plainfielders register a win or even put up a good fight they will be given a chance to try conclusions with the Ironsides, but if they stage a poor exhibition they and all other local teams are doomed as far as dates with Newark teams are concerned.

WARRY WILL TWIRL.

The Bound Brook Bees will entertain the local Saurer team tomorrow and expect to register a win. Britt Martin has signed up Warry McLaughlin to do the hurling stunt and has secured Eddie Bergen to do the receiving act. Aaron Hirsch will amble around first, with Britt Martin on second, "Tush" Jaeger on short, and Jimmy Montross on third. The outfield work will be taken care of by Betzenberger, Jack Wilson and Henry Alberts. The Bound Brook lineup has not been given out but it will be the same as usual with the exception that Mick McFadden will not be on the firing lines. Speely, the New Brunswick twirler, and Teeling, the Dunellen catcher, will compose the battery.

SENSATIONAL GOLF.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 31—Ned Allis, Milwaukee, set a new course record for the Blue Mound Country Club yesterday, while playing the semi-finals of the State golf tournament. He made the eighteen holes in sixty-four, six lower than the previous amateur record and two strokes under the best professional mark. Yesterday's play was sensational, the course record being broken twice. In the morning Richard Cavanagh, of Waukesha, shot sixty-seven, three below the former amateur record. Cavanaugh and Allis meet in the finals today.

MULLIN AND ROMER.

The city series for the championship of Perth Amboy will be continued at Amusement Park tomorrow, when the St. Anthonys and the Franklins start the third round of the tournament. Tommy Mullin, the North avenue speed demon, will hang around second for the Franklins and Art Romer, the "cop," who resides in Tottenville, will be on the slab for them. Harry Applegate, one of the Franklin's best hurlers, quit the team yesterday for reasons which he says are purely personal and known only to himself.

VETERAN PROMOTER DEAD.

New Haven, Conn., July 31—George M. Cameron, prominent in baseball in this State for years, and owner of the New Haven franchise in the old Connecticut League and in its successor, the Eastern Baseball Association, died at his home in West Haven late yesterday after a lingering illness.

RANDOLPH TO PITCH.

Cliff Randolph, the Plainfield twirler of the Perth Amboy Pacers, will hurl them over for that team when it collides with Joe Burns' Elizabeth Tabs at Tabs' Field tomorrow. Jimmy Dooley, the ex-Ironsides hurler, will oppose the local lad on the mound.

TABS HAVE THEIR WORK CUT OUT FOR THEM HERE

The local Tabs are going to buck up against a day's work tomorrow when they tackle the Eagles, of Elizabeth, on Avon Oval. The Elizabeth team represents the Eagle society of that place and is said to be the fastest fraternal team playing ball in the county. Jack Denny or "Kid" Brennan will pitch for the Abstainers and Jim Scott, Jim McCarthy, Joe Geary and Tony Denitzio or "Tush" Jaeger will compose the infield. The outfield work will be taken care of by "Art" Kyle, "Russ" Day and "Tone" Denny. The line-up of the Betsytown team has been given out and is as follows: Leo Callahan, short; Thorne, first base; Higgins, right field; Weber, second base; Keller, pitcher; Dauh, center field; Walsh, catcher; Schiller, third base; Lieb, left field, and Doyle, left field.

Although arrangements have not been definitely completed it is thought that the married and single members of the Tabs will attack one another much in the same fashion as they did last Sunday.

Decatur Ill., July 31—The Decatur baseball management yesterday surrendered its franchise in the Three "I" League to President Tearney. ROD AND REEL

There will be a meeting of the National Fishing Club in the Turn Hall, Newark, next Tuesday night.

The bass fishing in the Delaware River has been only fair during the past week. Recent storms have riled up the river.

Good catches of weakfish are being made in Raritan Bay. Local anglers will no doubt flock there in great numbers this week-end.

One of the largest bass caught this season at Lake Hopatcong was landed during the past week. It was of the Oswego variety and weighed eight pounds, two ounces.

Channel bass are biting well at Corson's Inlet, forty pounders being landed daily.

Those who should know, claim that salt water fishing will be good this afternoon and tomorrow. There seems to be plenty of fish about, but the east winds have forced them to stick close to deep water as weakfish do not like rough water. The old buoy at Sewaren will be a good place to fish and the steamboat channel at Perth Amboy on both sides of the Great Beds lighthouse will be handy for Perth Amboy, South Amboy and Tottenville boats. Morgan fishermen will split up, some going to the channel, others to the anchorage buoy, others to the monument grounds and to East Point. Keyport boats will fish East Point and in the harbor. One of the best fishing grounds will be found a quarter of a mile west of the Keansburg pier.

LIKE CONNIE MACK, THIS MANAGER BELIEVES IN TALK

A special meeting of the Tabs baseball team was held in T. A. B. Hall last night. The team has been fielding and hitting a little poorly in the last few games and a general shift was decided upon.

New signals were adopted at the meeting and these will receive their first try-out in the game with the Netherwood team today. It was decided to use Denitzio at third base, shifting McCarty to second, Geary to short and Brennan to the outfield. Russ Day is the man most likely to feel the axe as he has been hitting very little over .100.

SCHOOLEY IN TRIM.

William Schooley, captain of the Tuscarora Club of Newark, who formerly lived here, will be among the competitors in the canoe championships at Asbury Park this afternoon. Schooley, who holds the State hurry-scurry title, will defend it. Schooley is in tip-top shape and is confident that he will clean up in the prize events.

GROUPS OF BOYS SCORED.

Charged with bothering an Italian woman living in the Netherwood colony of foreigners, John Perrine, John Shabock, Patrick Long, Joseph Santabarbara, John Hoffmeister and Vincent Stebor were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning and subjected to severe reprimands. This is thought to be the same group that has been the subject of complaint on the part of Netherwood residents for loitering on the Johnson avenue bridges lately, and the court also took occasion to instruct the youths to keep away from this place. With the understanding that in the future they would not congregate on the bridge and would let the woman alone they were given suspended sentences.

NEWS OF INTEREST IN THE PLAINFIELD BUILDING WORLD

ESTIMATED COST NOT PRESENTED

Otherwise Plans for Saurer Addition Are Acceptable to Inspector.

PERMIT TO BE ISSUED

Seven Plans for Improvements Aggregating $1,200 Are Filed During Week. Three of Which Are in Second Ward.

Seven permits, representing a total estimated cost of less than $1,200, were granted by Building Inspector T. O. Doane last week, but the inspector has on his desk an application and set of plans for an extension to the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company on West Front street, which is acceptable in every particular except as regards the estimated cost. A statement as to that was not set forth on the application, but it will be supplied soon. When this is done Inspector Doane will grant the permit.

Three of these seven permits are for work in the Second ward; two for building operations in the First, and one each in the Third and Fourth wards. They are for two garages, two stables, two alteration jobs and the installation of a tank for the storage of volatile liquids.

Mention was made in these columns last Saturday of the extension to its plant which the Saurer concern is about to build. As the concern has many orders to fill, work on the building will be started the fore part of the week, and will be rushed to completion.

The extension will measure 120x120 feet in size and will be two stories high. It will give about 28,000 additional square feet of working space to the plant's main machine shop. Architect John G. Brown, of Philadelphia, drew the plans and will supervise the construction work. It is said that about $30,000 will be expended on the job.

The base course of the building and foundations will be of concrete and the upper walls will be constructed of brick. The first floor will be laid up in paving block, while the second is to be of steel beams, reinforced with concrete.

An addition to the power house as well as several other small buildings on the property of the concern are being planned for the near future. If orders keep coming in as fast as they have in the last few months work on the other buildings will possibly be started by September.

First Ward.

The permits granted included one to Mrs. K. Ryder, of 615 East Front street, which calls for an alteration to her residence at that address to cost $500. The work will consist of a rear frame extension 15x16 feet in dimensions, two stories high. Architects Wilder & White drew the plans and H. D. Huff and George N. Nolte are the mason and carpenter respectively.

Another permit for work in this ward was to Charles Bowman, of 115 Church street, who applied for permission to install a tank for the storage of volatile liquids. The estimated cost was set down at $25. Mr. Bowman wants to store gasoline on his premises.

Second Ward.

Harry B. Wier, of 724 Leland avenue, was granted a permit for the erection of a frame garage on his property at 724 and 726 Leland avenue. The building will be 16x18 feet in dimensions, one story high, and will cost $100. Mr. Wier will do the work himself.

To Marcus Goldfarb, a permit to erect a stable at the rear of his residence at 422 East Sixth street, was granted. The building will be of frame construction, 12x18 feet in dimensions, one story high, and will cost $150. H. Moncher is the mason and Nathan Estervich the carpenter.

Edward J. Harding, Jr., of 16 Laramie road, near Park avenue, was granted a permit for the erection of a frame garage on the rear end of his property. The building will be 12x18 feet in dimensions, one story high, of frame construction, and will cost $25. Mr. Harding will do the work himself.

Third Ward.

A permit was granted Henry Redd, of 632 West Fourth street, for the erection of a frame barn, one story high, 16x22 feet in dimensions, at the rear of his residence. The building will cost $300. Peter Dickerson is the general contractor.

Fourth Ward.

A permit for the alteration and the building of an extension to a stable located in the rear of 127 West Front street, was granted George Voehl, of Washington avenue, Dunellen. The extension will be 8x15 feet in dimensions, one story high, and will cost $85. William Getz is the contractor. The work will be of brick construction.

STORAGE LIMIT IS NOW REDUCED

Building Materials Escape Serious Handicap in Restrictions.

PRICES NOT AFFECTED

General Interpretation of Findings of Interstate Commerce Commission in Reference to Charges is Favorable.

New York, July 30.—General interpretation of the findings of the Interstate Commerce Commission with reference to the lighterage charges in New York Harbor reveals the fact that many building materials escaped serious handicap in the matter of transportation restrictions. The storage limit has been "reduced" from ten days to five days, whereas heretofore the limit has been two days on New York delivery. The belief is that as far as basic building materials are concerned the ruling will not interfere with the price situation in any important way in any part of the metropolitan district. It should not result in an increase in prices to the consumer, except possibly in cases where lightering conditions are extremely severe.

Building materials close the first month of the last half of the year considerably stiffer in price and terms than they were one month ago. Steel is exceedingly firm, and so is practically all steel products. Linseed oil and common brick continue to be the laggards in the market, both in the city and out in the suburbs. The former has dropped to 55 cents a gallon from 58, and the latter is now quoted at $5.75 a thousand, wholesale, New York.

Among the active feature, Portland cement leads all. Advices from the Lehigh district this week showed that three minor companies were in the market to buy Portland cement to meet their own contracts, one company in particular having had two opportunities for disposing of excess cement. It is significant that this company had none to sell. The Lehigh and Alpha companies are selling cement from the spout, and, in fact, every one of the largest companies, save two, have been operating at 100 per cent capacity. One company in June sold 70 per cent. more cement than it did in June of last year, and in the month just closed it will report even a greater sale.

Furthermore, Portland cement prices are being quoted nearer to $1.62 than $1.42. This means that the price of $1.52 now being quoted by the more stable companies is being tightly held, and consumers may expect to pay more for this commodity. Good opinion in the market holds that ninety cents mill will be low by the middle of next month.

The trade was interested in reports of foreign buying of securities of a leading Portland cement company on the stock exchange. The inference was that possibly a movement similar to that which featured the Electric Boat Company following receipt of inquiries for products from abroad, was headed for the cement industry, especially since many more foreign inquiries for Portland cement shipments came in this week. Everything now tends toward dollar cement at the mill in the very near future. It has been ten years since cement has sold above $1 a barrel at place of manufacture.

Common brick manufacturers in the Hudson River are heartily sick of conditions ruling here, and are talking of shutting down their plants the latter part of next month. The count of the available brick in the sheds of manufacturers along the Hudson indicates a total of less than 600,000,000. The normal year's output for this district alone is 1,200,000,000.

This means that only about 5 per cent. of a normal supply of common brick will be available, based upon the current movement of that commodity in this district. That being the case, winter common brick will be in the neighborhood of $6.75 a thousand more than the same quality of brick can be bought for at the present time. Haverstraw has hardly made a brick since the season opened, leaving Kingston and Newburgh to stand the strain of keeping New York and vicinity supplied, and at the same time put aside a winter reserve. Consumers should be governed accordingly and push their contemplated operations through while the brick, lime, cement, structural metal and crushed stone markets are low.

TENEMENT HOUSE PERMITS.

The Board of Tenement House Supervision last week granted twelve permits for the erection of tenement houses in the State aggregating in estimated cost $165,000. The record for the previous week was thirteen permits, calling for an estimated outlay of only $97,600.

IMPROVEMENTS NOTED AT HOTEL NETHERWOOD

Many Changes Have Been Made in the Famous Hostelry.

Those who attend the informal opening of the Hotel Netherwood tonight will find that the last few weeks have brought many changes to the property, which is now in spic-and-span condition to welcome the guests.

No large amount of new work has been done about the place to put it in its present state, as Adolph Ruehl, the new proprietor, has taken over the property under certain conditions, one of which is that he is able to obtain a license for the sale of liquor. But if his application for a license is acted upon favorably, Mr. Ruehl contemplates extensive improvements and alterations of a permanent nature.

The old hotel building has been renovated from top to bottom, however. Painters, paper hangers, carpenters and other workmen have been employed in their various capacities about the property and have worked a wonderful change. Most of the rooms in the hotel have been papered and painted. A Japanese tearoom, opening out of the dining-room, is a feature which has been added. Charles L. Stanley, the local florist, has had charge of the landscape work outside, and in the short time he has had at his disposal has created a wonderful change in the grounds. The telephone company has installed one of the latest model telephone exchange systems. It is estimated that about $7,000 is being spent on work at the hotel.

IMPROVEMENTS TO M'CUTCHEN HOME

Sanitary Kitchen Feature of $16,000 Job Underway in Borough Dwelling.

Improvements being made to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, 21 Rockview avenue, North Plainfield, will cost about $16,000, and will introduce the most modern ideas of housekeeping. An extension about 30x40 feet is being added to the original dwelling, which will provide a new kitchen, servants' dining room, reception hall and laundry.

William H. Pangborn is doing the mason work and Stahl & Kinney, the carpenter work. The necessary excavating for the cellar has been done, and the work will progress rapidly during the next two months. Martinville stone and selected brick will be used in the exterior walls.

The old reception hall will be torn out and a new one built. The servants' dining-room and laundry will be complete and modern in every particular, but the kitchen will show the greatest advances in science and sanitation. A perfectly sanitary kitchen is to be erected, with tiled floor and side walls, and the most modern of fixtures will be purchased. As the work is being done on the commission basis, the owners will select the fixtures.

THREE NEW FAMILIES COME TO PLAINFIELD

U. B. Crane, the real estate agent, reports rentals to three parties from out of town, which means three new families for Plainfield. The property at 410 East Sixth street has been rented to Charles Staderman, of Vineland; 1633 West Front street to John Brunn, of Nyack, N. Y., and the Ralph Dilibro house on Cedar Brook place to Otto Steffen, of Watchung.

Mr. Crane has also rented the property at 226 East Front street to T. N. Failer, of this city.

NO POSTOFFICE HOLD-UP.

Brick for the foundation walls of the new Plainfield postoffice are arriving slowly, but there is no real hold-up or delay in the work, according to a statement of the government inspector, on the job. The stone and steel have not yet reached this city, and so the work cannot progress beyond a certain point until that is on the ground.

WORK AT SPICER PLANT.

The several improvements at the Spicer plant in South Plainfield are well under way. An addition to the main buildings, which will provide about 9,000 additional feet of floor space, is well along, and only about fifteen feet more of the reinforced stack remain to be erected. When completed the stack will be 150 feet high.

WHAT PLAINFIELD WANTS TO KNOW.

The Answer Is Found In the Statement of a Plainfield Resident.

From week to week, from year to year, there have been appearing in these columns statements made by neighbors, which we have all read with great interest, and many of us with great profit. But what we want to know is, do they stand the greatest test of all—the test of time? Here is conclusive evidence on this point from a Plainfield woman:

Mrs. E. Dorflinger, 400 Clinton avenue, Plainfield, says: "The first symptom of kidney trouble was a dull, heavy pain in my back and head. This was followed by a tired, languid feeling and I knew that my kidneys were gradually giving out. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and getting a box at Randolph's drug store, I began using them. Before long I improved and I continued until cured."

Over five years later Mrs. Dorflinger said: "I hold just as high an opinion of them now as when I gave my former endorsement recommending them. The cure they made has been permanent."

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

CHAPTER XVI.

Deserting the Ranch.

ALL that Wayland said of his family deepened Berrie's dismay. Their interests were so alien to her own.

"I'm afraid to have you go even for a day," she admitted, with simple honesty, which moved him deeply. "I don't know what I should do if you went away. I think of nothing but you now."

Her face was pitiful, and he put his arm about her neck as if she were a child. "You mustn't do that. You must go on with your life just as if I'd never been. Think of your father's job—of the forest and the ranch."

"I can't do it. I've lost interest in the service. I never want to go into the high country again, and I don't want you to go either. It's too savage and cruel."

"That is only a mood," he said confidently. "It is splendid up there. I shall certainly go back some time."

"Of course, we are not rich, but we are not poor, and my mother's family is one of the oldest in Kentucky." She uttered this with a touch of her mother's quiet dignity. "Your father need not despise us."

"So far as my father is concerned, family don't count and neither does money. But he confidently expects me to take up his business in Chicago, and I suppose it is my duty to do so. If he finds me looking fit he may order me into the ranks at once."

"I'll go there. I'll do anything you want me to do," she urged. "You can tell your father that I'll help you in the office. I can learn. I'm ready to use a typewriter—anything."

He was silent in the face of her naive expression of self sacrificing love, and after a moment she added hesitatingly: "I wish I could meet your father. Perhaps he'd come up here if you asked him to do so."

He seized upon the suggestion. "By George, I believe he would! I don't want to go to town. I just believe I'll wire him that I'm laid up here and can't come."

A knock at the door interrupted Wayland, and Mrs. McFarlane's voice, filled with new excitement, called out, "Berrie, the district office is on the wire!"

Berrie opened the door and confronted her mother, who said, "Mr. Evingham phones that the afternoon papers contain an account of a fight at Coal City between Settle and one of Alec Belden's men and that the district forester is coming down to investigate it."

"Let him come," answered Berrie defiantly. "He can't do us any harm. What was the row about?"

"I didn't hear much of it. Your father was at the phone."

"What is it all about, father?" asked Berrie.

"Why, it seems that after I left yesterday Settle rode down the valley with Belden's outfit, and they all got to drinking, ending in a row, and Tony beat one of Belden's men almost to death. The sheriff has gone over to get Tony, and the Beldens declare they're going to railroad him. That means we'll all be brought into it. Belden has seized the moment to prefer charges against me for keeping Settle in the service and for putting a nonresident on the roll as guard. The whelp will dig up everything he can to queer me with the office. All that kept him from doing it before was Cliff's interest in you."

"He can't make any of his charges stick," declared Berrie.

"Of course he can't. He knows that. But he can bring us all into court. You and Mr. Norcross will both be called as witnesses, for it seems that Tony was defending your name. The papers call it 'a fight for a girl.' Oh, it's a sweet mess. You and Berrie and Mrs. McFarlane must get out of here before you are subpoenaed."

"And leave you to fight it out alone?" exclaimed his wife. "I shall do nothing of the kind. Berrie and Mr. Norcross can go."

"That won't do," retorted McFarlane quickly. "That won't do at all. You must go with them. I can take care of myself. I will not have you dragged into this muckhole."

Berrie now argued against running away. Her blood was up. She joined her mother. "We won't leave you to inherit all this trouble. Who will look after the ranch? Who will keep house for you?"

McFarlane remained firm. "I'll manage. Don't worry about me. Just get out of reach. The more I consider this thing the more worrisome it gets. Suppose Cliff should come back to testify?"

"He won't. If he does I'll have him arrested for trying to kill Wayland," retorted Berrie.

"And make the whole thing worse! No; you are all going to cross the range. You can start out as if for a little turn round the valley and just naturally keep going. It can't do any harm, and it may save a nasty time in court."

"One would think we were a lot of criminals," remarked Wayland.

"That's the way you'll be treated," retorted McFarlane. "Belden has retained old Whitby, the foulest old brute in the business, and he'll bring you all into it if he can."

"But running away from it will not prevent talk," argued his wife.

"Not entirely, but talk and testimony are two different things. Suppose they call daughter to the stand? Do you want her cross examined as to what basis there was for this gossip? They know something of Cliff's being let out and that will inflame them. He may be at the mill this minute."

"I guess you're right," said Norcross sadly. "Our delightful excursion into the forest has led us into a predicament from which there is only one way of escape, and that is flight."

McFarlane was again called to the telephone. Landon, with characteristic brevity, conveyed to him the fact that Mrs. Belden was at home and busily phoning scandalous stories about the country. "If you don't stop her she's going to poison every ear in the valley," ended the ranger.

"You'd think they'd all know my daughter well enough not to believe anything Mrs. Belden says," responded McFarlane bitterly.

"All the boys are ready to do what Tony did. But nobody can stop this old fool's mouth but you. Cliff has disappeared, and that adds to the excitement."

"Thank the boys for me," said McFarlane, "and tell them not to fight. Tell 'em to keep cool. It will all be cleared up soon."

As McFarlane went out to order the horses hooked up Wayland followed him as far as the bars. "I'm conscience smitten over this thing, supervisor, for I am aware that I am the cause of all your trouble."

"Don't let that worry you," responded the older man. But he spoke with effort. "It can't be helped. It was all unavoidable."

"The most appalling thing to me is the fact that not even your daughter's popularity can neutralize the gossip of a woman like Mrs. Belden. My being an outsider counts against Berrie, and I'm ready to do anything—anything," he repeated earnestly. "I love your daughter, Mr. McFarlane, and I'm ready to marry her at once if you think best. She's a noble girl, and I cannot bear to be the cause of her calumniation."

There was mist in the supervisor's eyes as he turned them on the young man. "I'm right glad to hear you say that, my boy." He reached out his hand, and Wayland took it. "I knew you'd say the word when the time came. I didn't know how strongly she felt toward you till today. I knew she liked you, of course, for she said so, but I didn't know that she had plum set her heart on you. I didn't expect her to marry a city man, but I like you, and—well, she's the doctor. What suits her suits me. Don't you be afraid of her not meeting all comers." He went on after a pause, "She's never seen much of city life, but she'll hold her own anywhere, you can gamble on that."

"She has wonderful adaptability, I know," answered Wayland slowly. "But I don't like to take her away from here—from you."

"If you hadn't come she would have married Cliff, and what kind of a life would she have led with him?" demanded McFarlane. "I knew Cliff was rough, but I couldn't convince her that he was cheap. I live only for her happiness, my boy, and, though I know you will take her away from me, I believe you can make her happy, and so—I give her over to you. As to time and place, arrange that—with—her mother." He turned and walked away, unable to utter another word.

Wayland's throat was aching also, and he went back into the house with a sense of responsibility which exalted him into sturdier manhood.

Berea met him in a pretty gown, a dress he had never seen her wear, a costume which transformed her into something entirely feminine. She seemed to have put away the self reliant manner of the trail and in its stead presented the lambent gaze, the tremulous lips of the bride. As he looked at her thus transfigured his heart cast out its hesitancy, and he entered upon his new adventure without further question or regret.

It was 3 o'clock of a fine, clear, golden afternoon as they said goodby to McFarlane and started eastward, as if for a little drive. Berrie held the reins in spite of Wayland's protestations. "These broncbos are only about half busted," she said. "They need watching. I know them better than you do." Therefore he submitted, well knowing that she was entirely competent and fully informed.

At last the topmost looming crags of the continental divide cut the skyline, and then in the smooth hollow between two rounded grassy summits Berrie halted, and they all silently contemplated the two worlds. To the west and north lay an endless spread of mountains, wave on wave, snow lined, savage, sullen in the dying light, while to the east and southeast the foothills faded into the plain, whose dim cities, insubstantial as flecks in a veil of violet mist, were hardly distinguishable without the aid of glasses.

Berrie turned in her seat and was about to take up the reins when Wayland asserted himself. "Wait a moment. Here's where my dominion begins. Here's where you change seats with me. I am the driver now."

She looked at him with questioning, smiling glance. "Can you drive? It's all the way downhill—and steep."

"If I can't I'll ask your aid. I'm old enough to remember the family carriage. I've even driven a four in hand."

Their descent was rapid, but it was long after dark before they reached Flume, which lay up the valley to the right. It was a poor little decaying mining town set against the hillside, and had but one hotel, a sun warped and sagging pine building just above the station.

"Not much like the Profile house," said Wayland as he drew up to the porch. "But I see no choice."

"There isn't any," Berrie assured him.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

We have heard much of the new woman who wishes to throw off the "shackles" which bind her, and become something resembling a neuter or an imitation of a man. "The Case for Woman Suffrage," which is published by the National College Equal Suffrage League and sold by the National American Woman Suffrage Association, tells us that woman suffrage will be a great help toward doing away with womanly characteristics. It says on page 64: "Too many advocates of woman suffrage insist that when woman is enfranchised she will be no less womanly than before; whereas, in point of fact perhaps the chief thing to be said of woman suffrage is precisely that it will make women less womanly, in the commonly accepted sense of the term. For the development of woman as a human being will inevitably cause many of the qualities that have hitherto differentiated her from man to occupy a smaller relative place in her being. One cannot argue logically on woman suffrage without facing this fact.

"Men, as a matter of courtesy, may unite and agree to give women equal right of suffrage with themselves. But this would not increase the enforcing power of the State at all. Paper money has a purchasing power when it represents gold and silver . . . . If you issue twice as many bills as there is specie in the country you reduce the purchasing power one half. In precisely the same manner a paper ballot represents a political unit behind it. If the voice at the ballot box be disobeyed, you call out your police force and your armies and enforce its mandate. Man is the power, for coercive force in the State. Without that implied coercive force your laws become ineffective and ridiculous.

Feminism and Socialism are the allies of Suffrage, toward which suffrage is only the "first step;" both advocate institutional life for children. This will become a necessity when all women are economically independent, as both Feminism and Socialism insist they must be. Institutional life for children is absolutely out of line with progress, is directly opposed to the teachings of both social and medical science and can only be advocated by those who have no interest in the coming generations. While State after State in passing Mothers' Pension Bills, in order that each child may not be deprived of its right to its one and only mother's care and devotion, suffragists, socialists and Feminists are advocating institutions for children in order that the mother may be free!

"Advanced" Suffragists advocate economic independence for all women. Ellen Key tells us how it results. She says: Competition between the sexes has produced—as regards manual labor—for men and women those lower conditions which are the usual result of overcrowding the labor market—namely, low wages, long hours and uncertainty of employment. The consequence of the outside employment of wives has been sterility, high infant mortality, and the physical and psychial degeneration of the surviving children; a debased domestic life, with its consequences, discomforts, drunkenness and crime. Among the middle classes, competition between the sexes has directly reduced man's chances of marriage and indirectly diminished the desiree of both sexes to contract matrimony. Woman's competition with man in the field of flabor, has in fact, occasioned a profound ill feeling between the sexes.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

"For I Sing Now of Storms."

Daddy's Bedtime Story— The Voice of The Sea and What It Says.

"THERE is a wonderful voice of the sea," said daddy to his two kiddies as they curled by his side for the evening story.

"What does it say, daddy?" asked Evelyn.

"It says any number of things," rejoined daddy, "and it tells stories to those people who care to interpret them. But to interpret them properly people must have that gift which is called imagination.

"It is for these people that the voice of the sea sings its songs and tells its stories. And the kind of stories told by the sea depends upon its mood, or, I should say, moods, for its moods are various, and so the stories that it tells are very different.

"So we will take a look at the sea, if you wish, when it is very calm and peaceful. Say that we are strolling upon the long sandy beach. The waves are breaking very gently upon the sands. Perhaps the tide is going out. The sun shines down upon the blue sea from a blue sky. The little clouds float by, white and fleecy, like dream ships. And the voice of the ocean sounds, very low and sweet, a crooning note. And I think this is what it says to the summer world:

"'I want to tell you of lovely lands that my waters wash far to the south, where everything is green and beautiful, where the sun is warmer than in this northern land and where the people get much of their food in the form of fruit right off the trees. There my waters wash peacefully and sing such a musical song as they are now singing to you. Don't you love it? Perhaps you would like to live in those southern lands and hear me singing to you and rest in the shade of the sheltering palm. Would you, I wonder? Or perhaps you would rather live up here and have the changing of the seasons. Anyway, you are here, and I am glad of the chance to sing to you of the southern lands.'

"And there are other times," continued daddy, "when the sea sings a song far different. Let us wander on the beach in the late autumn, when the sea is angry because the wind is lashing it, and it comes thundering in, crashing upon the shore, and roars this message:

"'Do you like this voice of mine so well as the other? No, I don't believe you do, for this voice of mine is terrible, while the other is soothing. For I sing now of storms and bleak places. I sing of shipwrecks and unpleasant things. I sing of Eskimo people and their huts of snow and ice. Did you notice my cold tinge? Would you like to live up in that cold country? No, I think you would rather live here.'"

WINNING EVENING DRESS.

No. 8965.

Undoubtedly more grace, charm and individuality is expressed in an evening gown than any other kind of frock that a woman wears—her tastes, her graces are all tacitly expressed in her choice of a gown. A very winning evening gown is Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8965. This frock, not at all de trop, has infinite possibilities for the expression of individual taste in the various ways in which it can be made up. Basically it has a baby waist with short puff sleeves, a fitted lining and opens in back. One piece gathered skirt with raised waistline and to be gathered at the waistline on cords. Sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 requires 4 yards 36-inch material, with 5½ yards narrow lace for ruffles.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

If one should spend their Saturday half-holiday or evening at Proctor's Theatre today they would be privileged to witness what has been judged by critics as one of the most powerful dramas of the motion picture world in the four-part production, "The Gangsters." Don't fail to witness this wonderful picture. In addition to this, "Alexander the Great," the famous monkey comedian, now playing in picture vaudeville, will be presented in a comedy entitled, "Shall We Eat Pie?" This has been scheduled especially for the kiddies.

The feature scheduled for Monday is something out of the ordinary, when "The Cub" is to be shown, interpreted by a stellar cast, including Jones Hines and Martha Hedman. This production relates the experiences of a newspaper "cub" reporter in the mountains of Kentucky, where even today civilization has hit some of the higher spots, and where education is conspicuous by its absence. Here comedy, drama, love and excitement, business and hate blend together into a magnificent picture.

Monday, as has been noted before, will be the last day to which to register votes in the great Victrola guessing contest. The awarding of the prize will take place Tuesday evening when every one interested should be present with their cards. The feature picture for the latter date is "He's Own Way."

REV. J. MADISON HARE AT FRESH AIR HOME

The services tomorrow afternoon at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home will be in charge of Rev. Dr. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church. Dr. Hare is eminently a speaker for children, and has always shown a keen interest in this work for children at the Home. These services are attracting many outsiders who have not been interested in the work in past seasons, and it is very gratifying to Miss Curry to have, not only the old friends visit the Home, but he is especially glad to see the new friends. These services are only of one hour duration, and if you have not attended one of them, you cannot find a cooler or more pleasant place to spend an hour on Sunday afternoon than at the Home.

The usual evening services during the week on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, will have as speakers Mrs. Robert Love, J. F. Parker and the Epworth League of the First Methodist church. Any donations of fruits, vegetables or clothing will be gratefully received. 'Phone the Home and a wagon will call.

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"So you are Mrs. Stivers? Well, I'm glad you have come for the quilts." Mrs. Morton looked uncompromisingly at the caller. "They have been around in the way long enough. It really looked as though my son was going to start a bazaar, he had such a stock of gimcracks on display when I came."

"You would hardly class fine hand work like these quilts with gimcracks." Mrs. Stivers' face was written over with tolerant superiority. "I understand," she continued, not noticing Mrs. Morton's mild snort of disdain, "that their fortune proved to be a fleeting shadow." She folded her hands in her lap and fixed her gaze on the ceiling. "It is vain to set our affections on riches."

"I guess their affections were not set to any great extent," snapped the old lady. "What I wonder at is that they would give house room to all the rubbish the citizens of this town saw fit to load onto them. It's an imposition."

The narrow face expressed grave disapproval. "As far as the quilts are concerned, I felt she should esteem it a privilege to help a worthy cause if so be Providence had placed riches in her hands to dispense, but evidently the vain pomp and show of the world was what occupied the thoughts of your son and daughter-in-law, and a wise Providence removed the inheritance as a means of discipline."

"Means of discipline!" exploded the old lady. "Do you mean to say you think people without fortunes are under punishment? You are wealthy; is your lack of means punishment for your sins?"

"I simply meant," and Mrs. Stivers held her head stiffly in the air, "that Providence held out the promise of fortune as a test of character. That did not stand the test and it was removed. Few people have a realizing sense of their accountability in spending money. It should not be used in self-gratification."

"Who made you a judge of the ways of Providence in other people's affairs?" Mrs. Morton leaned forward in her chair and fixed her keen old eyes on the caller's face. "Do you think each of us would have enough to do to adjust his own life to existing conditions and not trouble about his neighbor?"

"I see you believe in a very selfish policy, madam. Like Cain, you are not your brother's keeper." She rose as she spoke.

"Some people interpret 'being brother's keeper' to mean regulating his brother's conscience. Remember your conscience is your guide, not mine nor any other person's." Mrs. Morton handed the huge brown paper parcel to the woman and opened the door.

"I bid you good morning." Mrs. Stivers bowed stiffly and took her departure.

"Come on, ye hosts," laughed Nell, clapping her hands as she appeared from the bedroom. "I see we are prepared to face the superior numbers of the enemy."

A pleased smile overspread the old lady's features.

"Give me the little man. I've hardly held him since I came.

"I hope you'll grow up to face things as they are, not to temporize or hedge," she said to the baby on her knee. "A thing looked squarely in the face has lost its power to hurt you." The baby reached a chubby hand for his grandmother's glasses.

"You don't need glasses yet; you are clear-eyed enough."

"May his brain be as clear as his eyes, is my wish," said Nell, laying a caressing hand on his head.

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

Plum Butter—When you read "stir constantly for three hours," in making fruit butter—DON'T. For plum butter, take ripe plums, run through colander; you now have delicious plum pulp. Let that simmer down to half bulk over slow fire, then add sugar and stir thirty minutes; you then have the best butter possible, as the sugar that makes it burn.

Sweet Pickled Cherries—Use large sour cherries; pit and let stand over night in vinegar to cover (not too strong). In the morning drain, measure fruit and add equal quantity of sugar. Mix thoroughly and put in pint jars. Sugar will dissolve gradually, forming a heavy syrup. No cooking required. Will keep indefinitely.

Cherry Preserves—Seed cherries and put through grinder (or chop); then take same amount of sugar as the fruit and cook till thick enough to spread.

Canned Cherries—We find to can cherries without sugar is much the better way. Cook the cherries and can them. When ready to use, open can, drain off juice and make a syrup, put them in and heat through. Try a few cans this way and see if you don't like them much better; they are more like fresh cherries.

Sweet Pickles—One quart small pickles, one quart large cucumbers, one quart celery, one quart green beans, one quart small onions, one quart tomatoes, three peppers, one cauliflower or [illegible] Dressing: One tablespoon turmeric, five tablespoons mustard, one cup flour, two cups sugar, one gallon vinegar.

Jelly—When making jelly this summer try the following plan: Save eggshells beforehand, breaking a hole in the smaller end of the egg large enough to allow the contents to escape. Wash the shells carefully and put away. Fill these with jelly when the time comes, and paste paper smoothly over the broken end. You will find one of these "jelly-eggs" a fine addition to any lunch basket.

FIVE WAYS OF USING LEFTOVER PIE CRUST.

Cheese Straws—Roll crust thin, sprinkle with grated cheese, fold half over, roll again, cut in strips. Bake a light brown. Serve piled in log cabin design.

Fruit Tarts—Roll pie crust cut in rounds, turn up edges and crimp, fill with preserves or jam. Bake and serve with spoonful of whipped cream on each.

Cinnamon Rolls—Roll crust thin, spread with melted butter, sprinkle with sugar, then cinnamon. Commence at edge and roll. Slice off in rounds about a quarter of an inch thick and bake.

Marshmallow Trifles—Cut crust in squares, press four marshmallows on each square, cover with another square and bake.

Nut Crusties — Cut crusts in rounds, sprinkle with ground nuts, cover with round; place two half nuts on top. Bake in hot oven.

CAKE FILLINGS.

Improved Chocolate Filling—A great improvement in making chocolate filling for cake is to add grated rind of lemon. Or, another change can be made by adding a little cinnamon.

Easy Cake Filling—Take fresh marshmallows and put over steam till soft enough to spread, then cover with cocoanut.

TO PRESERVE LINOLEUM.

First thoroughly cleanse by washing with soap and warm water and allow to dry. Then rub over with cloth dipped in a paste made of flour and water. This gives it a nice, glossy appearance and saves constant washing, as when dirty it only needs rubbing with a damp cloth.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — CRUSOE'S CURE FOR HOMESICKNESS — BY "HOP"

TROOPERS HAVE BEST DAY OF ALL IN CAMP

Local Soldier Boys Start for Home Today After Busy Week.

Cavalry Camp, Mt. Gretna, Pa., July 29.—This day was unanimously accounted the best up to date by the troopers of Troop D, First Squadron Cavalry, N. G. N. J., especially by those in the Plainfield platoon. The troop rode out of camp a little after 7 o'clock under full cavalry equipment and did not ride in again till 3.

This was in preparation for the big manoeuvre of tomorrow. Headquarters had decided that this should take up only one day instead of two as originally planned, and the twenty-one troops in camp have been divided into two armies which are to fight against each other, and a part of the reserve of one of which Troop D is to be.

Today, therefore, Troop D was sent out to act as an advance force of the advance cavalry of an army. Each trooper carried his saddle bags, mess kits, shelter, half, rifle, sabre and slicker, and the troop rode at a fast trot, throwing out patrols in advance, and sending scouts up every cross-road. As they came down a wooded hill to the edge of a wide expanse of fields green with corn or tawny with grain the order was given to dismount and fight on foot; all but one trooper to every four horses fell in with their rifles, and the troop then advanced at the double quick for say a quarter of a mile. Then ordered "as skirmishes guide right," they vaulted a fence and advanced through the woods to their edge. There, they took cover behind trees and fence rails and fired according to sights given by Captain Borden.

They rode on in this fashion through most beautiful hilly wooded country, scattered with rich grain fields and brick built farms until about noon. Then they rode in to the sloping meadows on a hillside with plenty of shady trees about, unsaddled, unbridled and got out their mess kits.

These contained regular army rations, given out that morning—three slices of bacon, three pieces of bread and one-potato. Lieutenant Deste, of the Eleventh Cavalry regulars, showed how a tiny little fire should be built of leaves, twigs and sticks, between two stones. Each trooper did as directed and soon every one's bacon was cheerfully sizzling, and their French fried potatoes. The men had eaten no meal since they came to camp, and few on any occasion that they enjoyed half so much. When it was done they had a few moments to rest quietly there on the pleasant hillside. But then the order came to strike camp; they brought down and rolled up the little shelter tents they had erected upon dismounting, packed their mess kits in their saddle bags, re-equipped their saddles and took the road again. They clattered all the way back to camp at a fast trot, riding in single file on either side of the road, as cavalry ride in war time so as not to raise a dust that would be visible to an enemy.

The rest of the day followed very much the usual routine: The watering and grooming of the horses, rifle inspection and mess.

Immediately after mess everyone set to, looking over his equipment to be all ready for the morrow, while the thunder of a coming storm resounded.

Every man in the troop is now in splendid health and spirits. They have become perfectly adjusted to camp life and will certainly be sorry to leave it on Saturday.

TAX ON THEATRE-GOERS.

Montreal, July 31—The city will impose a charity tax on theatre-goers, beginning Monday. Every person entering places of amusement to pay a tax of one cent at the door.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

"The District Attorney," from the famous play of the same name by the late Charles Klein and Harrison Grey Fiske, which will be shown at the U. S. Astor Theatre next Monday and Tuesday, heading a program of extraordinary quality, is unquestionably the most gripping drama of American political life yet written. It lends itself especially to motion-picture work because it calls for plenty of action and exceptionally clever acting. The Lubin Company, which produced this subject, has supplied a splendid cast of notable players.

In brief the story is: Mathew Brainerd, a wealthy contractor and political boss, formulates a plan to rob the city by forging municipal warrants. McGrath and Williams, his shady lieutenants, learn that Frank Pierson, a clerk in the warrant office, is betrothed to Helen Knight, but cannot marry her on his small income. As the wedding has been postponed several times Pierson becomes desperate and falls an easy prey to his tempters. He therefore agrees to plead guilty to the charge and accept the prison sentence on condition that he serve but several months of his sentence. He insists, however, upon having five notes for $10,000 each, instead of cash, and these he entrusts to his boarding house keeper. The story then centres around the spectacular fight to secure these notes, as the gang feels safer with Pierson in jail, and do not release him as they promised. They count on the District Attorney to remain passive, but through the efforts of Helen he gets the whole story, and by a clever ruse, makes the chief conspirators convict themselves.
